GERMANS ARE RETREATING

GERMANS BOMBARD PRINCIPAL BUILDINGS

CHALONS SUR MARNE, Sept. 21.—The Germans continued bombarding the principal buildings of Rheims today and wrought heavy damage. Persons who have returned here from Rheims say that it is difficult to find words to describe the attacks and counter-attacks of infantry amid showers of shot and shell and in a deluge of rain. The Germans, they declare, seem in a desperate hurry to finish their task and are enraged at the stubborn resistance of the French. The Germans, they say, had all the best of the opening of the battle, but the situation is now changed and the French have been able to gain positions on high ground that will enable them to fight on even terms and they declare the Germans will never be able to break their lines at Rheims.

Soldiers are coming back here covered with mud and drenched to the skin by the heavy rains which continue to fall. The chalky clay ground north of Rheims has been so softened, they say, that it will be impossible for a retreating army to get away its artillery. To this fact they attribute the desperation with which the Germans are fighting. Floods caused by the continuous rains are likely to greatly impede military operations, especially in the east where the streams are beginning to overflow. The River Savoureuse already is out of its banks and some habitations are isolated. While rescuing a family, M. Goublet, the administrator at Belfort was seriously injured. He was mentioned in the order of the day for bravery by the general in command.

FORTUNES OF BATTLE STILL FLUCTUATING

Germans Retreating to Own Border Fortifications—Heavy Rains Make a Morass of the Valley of the Oise—Germans Claim That Cathedral of Rheims Could Not be Saved

LONDON, Sept. 21.—While the fortunes of battle fluctuate along the line extended in France, desperate efforts are being made to execute turning movements on both flanks.

The Anglo-French left wing is exerting every ounce of strength to turn the flank of the German general, Von Kluck, who is reported to have received reinforcements; while the German left, according to a cautiously worded announcement in Berlin, is making equally strenuous efforts to outflank the French right resting on Verdun.

Under ordinary weather conditions the Anglo-French task would be the easier, for the reason that Verdun, heavily fortified must fall before the French right can be seriously threatened but on the German right the heavy rains have made such a morass of the valley of the Cise that the allies are hardly likely o move along what would be their natural course until the German front north of Soissons has been driven back. The high ground between Noyon and Chauney has been heavily fortified by General Von Kluck and dominates the whole valley of the Oise.

That the Germans chose their present defensive position deliberately is indicated by the fact that their heavy artillery rests on cement foundations which must have taken time to construct

Some reports received in London declared that the reason for the desperate German counter-attacks on Rheims is found in a movement of the allies which has virtually isolated Rheims from Laon, a town 30 miles to the northwest. If this is true all of General Von Kluck's marvelous strategy in protecting his sorely pressed left flank will have proved futile.

More or less definite rumors continue to circulate in London to the effect that the Germans are preparing a great retreat from France on their own border fortifications.

The latest of these is a story related by a French officer who has returned to Paris. This officer declared that an aeroplane reconnaisance has given rise to the conviction that a large portion of the German forces is retiring, accompanied by trains of heavy stores and leaving only 200,000 men to cover the retreat.

One reason for the dearth of news from the battlefront is to be found in the bad weather, which has rendered ordinary signaling and aeroplane scouting unreliable. Stories now filtering through set forth that the Germans made desperate efforts, the middle of last week to recapture the ground they had lost along the river Aisne. Day and night the assaults continued. The Germans, played into action by bands rendering military airs, hurled masses of men upon the hastily constructed intrenchments of the allies. It was cold steel against cold steel and ended in the allies holding the positions desperately won by them.

Could Not Save Cathedral

Rheims, where the ruins of the famous cathedral are still smoking is likely to prove an object of controversy long after the military forces now in the field have ceased to contend for its possession. The Germans claim that the cathedral was in the line of fire and that it was impossible to save it in spite of their instructions to spare the building.

As had been anticipated a check had been given the operations of the victorious Russians in Galicia by the strong fortress of Przemysl, which had opened fire with artillery on the Russian invaders.

According to advices received here the advance of the Serbo-Montenegrin forces into Austria continues while the Montenegrins are reported as within a few miles of Sayajevo, the capital of Bosnia. According to this intelligence, the Serbo-Montenegrin force expects to enter Sayejevo within a week.

ATTEND THE PRIMARIES

The state primaries will be held tomorrow in every city and town in Massachusetts and in Lowell, the polls will open at noon and close at 9 p. m.

A movement has been on foot for some time, to change the hours of the primaries to correspond with those on election day when the polls are open from 6 in the morning until 4 in the afternoon, but nothing was done toward making the change this year, and hence the caucus hours tomorrow will be as they were last year.

Although there have been few of the spectacular features that have sometimes characterized the local campaigns, it is expected that a fairly heavy vote will be cast. The voters are becoming educated to primary voting, for its importance is now being generally appreciated as the result of weak nominations made in the past through the apathy of the citizens at large. The fact that there are many lively contests on, in the republican ranks from the state ticket and down the line, and in the democratic, on county, senatorial and representative offices gives assurance of a good vote, in the cities at least. On the republican state ticket contests of unusual importance are being waged for every office except that of governor, with a particularly lively fight in progress for attorney-general in which the candidates involved are: Former District Attorney John J. Higgins, of Somerville; J. Mott Hallowell, of Newton; John A. Curtin, of Brookline; Henry C. Atwill, of Lynn and James A. Stiles, of Gardner. Lowell has a special interest in John J. Higgins, whether "for better or worse" because of the fact of his wide acquaintance here, and his former connection with this city as the county's district attorney. Many entertain the belief that Lowell has some kind of a grievance against the former district-attorney and will knife him at every possible opportunity but others are of the opinion that the enmity has been softened by time and the satisfaction of having defeated him a year ago and that his ability will be recognized and a good vote given him at tomorrow's primaries.

Joseph Monette, of Lawrence, one of the republican candidates for state auditor should get special recognition in this city, and undoubtedly he will, because of the fact that he started his career in this city, upon his admission to the bar, and resided here for several years before going to Lawrence. Outside of Messrs. Higgins and Monette there are few familiar names, from a local standpoint, on the state ticket.

The republicans have contests on for county commissioner and senator in the seventh and eighth districts and in the representative districts, though in the 19th district, Rev. C. M. Williams of Billerica, has withdrawn leaving a clear field to Former Alderman Burton H. Crosby, who will contest at the polls with Rep. Kiggins. Maj. Barnes, of Newton is making a red hot fight against County Commissioner Gould while Julius Meyers of Cambridge, the third republican candidate is campaigning actively though his activities have not extended as far north as Lowell. In keeping with his statement made some time ago to the effect that Lowell will decide the democratic nomination for county commissioner, Deputy Sheriff Walsh of South Framingham has spent much time in this city, and was here yesterday. Judging from the expressed sentiment he will poll a big vote in this city. Associate Commissioner John J. Butler, of Wakefield, who enjoys the distinction of being the first democrat to get even an associate commissionership in Middlesex, has made several speeches here and will be here again this evening. Senator McCarthy of Marlboro has friends in this city but little has been seen of him locally, as he has been devoting his energies to the lower end of the county. The three Cambridge candidates have not been heard from beyond their own city.

With the opposing democratic candidates for senator in the seventh, representing the cities of the district, Lowell and Lynn, there is little doubt that a good democratic vote will be cast in the four wards of those cities. On the republican end, Candidate Kimball hails from Littleton and therefore should get out the county vote while Candidate Reither lives in Lynn whose two wards in the district are democratic.

In the eighth district the vote will come out largely in both parties, owing to the variety of contests involved. Candidate Dunigan whose home town in North Chelmsford expects to see a fair-sized democratic vote from the country towns. There is no question about the size of the vote in the seven Lowell wards that are included, owing to the lively contests for representative. Mr. Dunigan has made certain that the Dracut dummies will have no excuse for not coming out by providing a special car to take them to the polls. The Courier-Citizen's political writer sprang a joke at the expense of the democratic candidates in this district in today's issue, but as he omitted to provide a diagram with it, the point hasn't been recovered, if it ever existed. Little has been heard from Messrs. Marchand and Best, the republican candidates in this district, though each has done much personal canvassing.

The representative contests have been so zealously waged that there is little doubt that nearly all the democratic voters in ward two, and the republicans in wards three, six and seven wil visit the polls.

Don't forget to go to the polls, between the hours of noon and 9 p. m.

CATHOLIC MISSION FIELD

Instead of the usual sermon at all the masses at the church of the Immaculate Conception yesterday, Rev. Joseph F. McGlinchy, D. D., of Boston, diocesan director of the society for the propagation of the faith, spoke most interestingly on the work of the society he so ably represents, and urged the congregations to become active members. Before entering on his subject he expresed thanks to Fr. Tighe, O. M. I. for allowing him the opportunity of spreading knowledge of a work to which he is zealously devoted and on which he is an undisputed authority, having had years of experience in every branch of foreign missionary labors.

At the morning masses Dr. McGlinchy gave a brief review of the entire missionary field of the Catholic church, illustrating his remarks by facts that have come to his own personal notice. He told of zealous laborers among the 450 millions of pagans of China, the 200 millions of Africa the 40 millions

Mill News

Industrial conditions in Dover, N. H., are even more encouraging at the present time than they have been in several previous years at a similar period of the season. This appears to be especially true of the Pacific mills, the officials of which anticipate new developments within a short time on the site of the print works recently removed to Lawrence.

A three-story brick mill, 73 by 267 feet, is contemplated by the Industrial Tape Mills Co.

Property in Franklin, Mass., comprising 100,000 square feet, has been transferred to the Massachusetts Waste Co. to be used as a site for a factory building. It is claimed a new process for cleaning cotton mill sweepings and waste will be installed. It is estimated the building, with equipment, will cost approximately $75,000.

It is reported that the Eagle Knitting company and the Eagle Spinning mills, Ltd., Hamilton, Ontario, have practically accepted a very attractive proposal to enter a merger of all the largest knitting mills of Canada, including that of Penman's Ltd., Paris, Ontario. It is expected that the Hamilton companies will be taken in at a valuation of $1,500,000.

The Cordis Mills, Millbury, manufacturers of coarse color cottons, are making additions to their plant which will double the present capacity. One building will be 300 by 82 feet, three stories high, and a picker house 50 by 46 feet, 2 1-2 stories high. It is expected that everything will be completed in about three months.

Installation of new machinery at the plant of the Brown Manufacturing Co., Concord, N. H., chambrays, ginghams, and outings, is complete, and in operation. It comprises 24 spinning frames, totaling 6000 spindles, and 40 Draper looms. This enlargement makes equipment of plant 16,000 spindles and 540 looms.

Fort Drummer mills, Brattleboro, Vt., intend to increase capital stock from $75,000 to $525,000. This issue is in form of 6 per cent. preferred stock, payable on any interest period at par after 20 years. The equipment of company consists of 30 cards, 35,000 ring spindles and 650 looms.

Simple Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring, use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve, and entirely destroy, every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

BATTLE ON BOULEVARD

TWO SPANISH WAR VETERANS ROUTED AFTER BRIEF ENGAGEMENT

Sergeant William Prescott, and Private Fleming, engineer and oiler at the boulevard pumping station and veterans of the Spanish war, had an experience last night they will not soon forget. Brave soldiers as they are recorded to be, they made a bold assault upon the enemy; but after the first onslaught they turned and fled to the garrison where reinforcements gave them first aid to the wounded. The odor which arose from the dum dum bullets almost stupefied the gallant occupants of the fort; but they stuck manfully to their task until the unfortunate soldiers were divested of their clothing. The pole cats when attacked did a fine job, and at last accounts they were still looking for other victims; but the fort smells like a perfume factory. Prescott and Fleming were seen at an early hour this morning clad in strange habiliments going by the most secluded routes to their respective homes refusing to answer any question relative to their thrilling adventure.

NOTES OF THE CHURCHES

The Man is a Failure Who Says the World Owes Him a Living—New Feature at St. Anne's

The morning service at the Kirk Street Congregational church yesterday was addressed by Rev. Charles H. Williams of Gloucester, whose text was taken from the words of Paul: "I am indebted alike to the Greek and the barbarian, the wise and the unwise." Rev. Mr. Williams' sermon was forcible. He declared that the man who says the world owes him a living is a failure and that success is the knowledge of responsibility.

Eliot Congregational

There was a large congregation at the Eliot Congregational church yesterday morning. The pastor preached a sermon on the subject, "The Worth of a Man," comparing the value of one man's soul with the material things of the world, and said that it more than outweighs wealth, culture and all other things that are good in the eyes of man. The pastor said that the real sadness of the great war is the future of the children, who will be forced to grow up in poverty and misery. A special musical program was also given.

Rally Sunday

Next Sunday will be observed as rally Sunday, and the Sunday school services will be held in the auditorium at the usual school hour. A meeting of the Knights of King Arthur will be held this evening and officers will be elected to serve for the ensuing year.

Centralville M. E. Boy Scouts

The Boy Scouts of the Centralville M. E. church will hold a meeting this evening in the church vestry and a large attendance is desired. The Kirby club has a meeting scheduled for tomorrow evening while the quarterly conference will be held Wednesday evening at 6.30 o'clock.

St. Anne's

The regular schedule of services was resumed at St. Anne's church yesterday. Rev. Appleton Grannis officiated at the first service at 7.30 o'clock and at the 10.30 o'clock service, when a sermon was delivered. The Sunday school session was held at 12 o'clock under the direction of Rev. John W. Sutor. Rev. Samuel H. Jobe officiated at the evening service which was held at 7 o'clock. Previous to the service the regular choir of the church, assisted by the choir of the Guild of St. Cecelia sang in the church yard for about 15 minutes and a large number of passersby stopped and listened to the hymns.

Here Is The New Style Range
Instead of having the ash pan in front of the range, that takes a lot of room unnecessarily, the ash pan is in the base of the range in the shape of a coal hod, which is much easier to carry and to dump into your sifter. And instead of a hearth in front of the range there is another shelf on the front of the top, same as on the rear of the range, giving more room on top to hold kettles, giving you a better looking range with the same oven and fire capacity and a larger top and taking less space in the kitchen. This pattern is copyrighted and is not found in any other make than the CRAWFORD RANGE; neither is the single damper nor the cup flue joint nor the dock ash grate nor a dozen other improvements that make the Crawford such a wonderful selling range. There are many other good ranges, but if they are good and do good work without these improvements, the Crawford certainly is better with those aids to economy in fuel and durability and convenience. CATHOLIC MISSION of Japan and the other millions in India. To give a faint realization of the vast hordes of China he said that if the people of that country were to pass a given point at the rate of 100 per minute, it would take eight years for all to pass.

To carry the gospel of Christ to these millions throughout the world, there are 65,000 Catholic foreign missionaries consisting of 15,000 priests, 45,000 sisters and 5000 brothers. Those have left all that makes life worth living for people generally and have undergone fearful privations to spread the gospel of Christ. Most of them are wholly or almost wholly dependent on funds supplied by the faithful, and they labor amid privations which in many cases break down their health. Dr. McGlinchy told of having received photographs of missionaries' dwellings which would not be tolerated as shelters for dogs in Boston. He mentioned one instance of a convent in the Philippines which had an empty cracker box for a tabernacle and he told of the hundreds of chalices that were sent last year from the Boston headquarters of the society. He related the life of one Swiss missionary—a typical mountain man of rugged constitution—who, after a few years of activity in mission work lost his splendid color, had become stooped and had changed into a prematurely old and broken man. In a letter telling of his death his bishop wrote to Dr. McGlinchy: "It was a case of starvation, pure and simple."

One of the most interesting parts of the reverend speaker's sermon had to do with China. He related how thousands of girl babies are destroyed daily and how the sisters rescue hundreds of them, thus saving them from death and bringing them up as Christians. He told of actual photographs showing the infants dying from exposure after having been thrown over the wall of the city or even having been thrown to the dogs and the pigs. One of the most pitiable aspects of foreign mission work, he said, is revealed by letters from the missions telling how they are compelled to refuse such doomed girls because of their inability to feed them.

After the vesper service in the evening Dr. McGlinchy spoke particularly of the great work of those who follow in the footsteps of Fr. Damien in the leper colony of Molokai. He told many incidents in the life of the illustrious martyr and of his successor, Brother Dutton, a Vermonter and a Civil war veteran who, after becoming a convert to Catholicity devoted his life to the lepers. In his last letter Brother Dutton enclosed a picture of Fr. Damien on his death bed showing the ravages that his terrible experience had made on the self-sacrificing missionary. Another interesting incident referred to a Fiji chief who boasted that he had killed and eaten 600 human beings. He afterwards became converted and presented to a missionary bishop who had labored among the cannibals for 30 years, a plot of ground on which to build a church. Not all the incidents were of a tragic nature. Many of the stories told of quaint, entertaining and humorous experiences such as are described in letters from the far away fields of missionary labor.

In conclusion Dr. McGlinchy spoke in detail of the society for the propagation of the faith urging its importance and its universal charity on those who heard him. It is world-wide in its scope and last year distributed $1,500,000 to the Catholic missions of the earth. One may become a member on payment of five cents a month, and there are various degrees of membership, entailing different degrees of payment, up to a full membership which is secured by the payment of $40 once in a lifetime. Last year $24,000 was realized in this diocese from full membership fees. The eloquent speaker asked for promoters to go among the people of Lowell and organize bands of zealous members, each promoter being asked to look after ten members. There was a generous response, many young women of the Immaculate Conception parish going to the altar rail and giving in their names at the conclusion of the various graphic addresses.

Valuable Discovery in Complexion Beautifier
Because of its peculiar power of absorption, also because it serves every emollient purpose, ordinary mercolized wax is perhaps the most valuable complexion beautifier discovered within recent years. If one uses this she needs no toilet cream. Some use powder afterward, but this is not necessary. This rule for applying mercolized wax has been found satisfactory: Wash the face with warm water, drying lightly. Before thoroughly dry, anoint fact and neck with the wax, but don't rub it in. The favorite way is to use before retiring, allowing it to remain on all night and washing it off in the morning with warm water. All druggists have this wax in original one-ounce packages.
For the removal of a wrinkled or flabby condition there's nothing better than to bathe the face in a solution made by dissolving 1 ounce powdered saxolite in 1-2 pint witch hazel. Beneficial results are quickly noticeable.

PHOTOS © 1914 BY AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

THE RABBIT'S FOOT

BY GWEN SEARS

"The Woman With Unattractive Elbows"

Note—Under this head The Sun will publish daily a brief article giving reliable advice on how to preserve and promote some feature of feminine beauty. Every treatment here suggested is applicable at home and at little or no expense.—Editor.

Few women possess soft, white and prettily rounded elbows, yet this defect is due in great part to their own carelessness.

A good scrubbing of the elbow with a stiff bristle nail brush, using green soap and warm water, is the beginning of the treatment to improve the elbow's appearance.

Follow the cleansing with massage, rubbing cocoa butter or a good massage cream. In massaging the elbow or any part of the arm, clasp it firmly with the hand, when the motion is backward and forward, rather than up and down.

A very simple bleach to apply to the arms is plain washing starch. After the arms have been washed in warm water and before they are dry, rub the starch on, allow to dry five minutes and rinse with cool water. The skin is left smooth and white.

There is frequently a peculiar tendency in the skin along the elbow to show a nutmeg grater like hardening of the epidermis. If the case be a mild one, sometimes rubbing lightly with a pumice stone after cleasing the skin is sufficient to remove it.

However, a more efficacious method of doing away with it is to scrub the surface twice a day, using a nail brush and green soap, following with a massage of cocoa butter or message cream. When the horny growth persists, green soap should be smeared on thickly and rubbed in with a nail brush, after which it is bound on with a muslin bandage, remaining on for two or three hours a day.

Then the arm is scrubbed off and rinsed with warm water. If the soap application proves too irritating, remove it within an hour. Massage with a skin food cream, of which lanolin is an ingredient, should follow.

LADY LOOKABOUT

I wonder how many housekeepers regret that new covers cannot be secured for their glass jars when preserving time comes around each year. In many cases the old ones, be they metal or glass, are often destroyed or lost, and with one exception, there is not a jar in the market for which new covers are furnished. It is a hardship to housekeepers to be obliged to purchase new jars when they have old ones exactly as good, but minus tops. If any dealers carry these covers, will they please advertise them? I know there is a demand.

Dangerous Poles

The angles at which some of the poles on the streets of Lowell are tilted, suggest the leaning tower of Pisa rather than the supports of trolley and telegraph wires. I am reminded particularly of one near Ellsworth street on Gorham. A few days ago I saw this pole remove part of a load of hay, yet the hay wagon was being driven at an apparently safe distance from the curbing. These poles are unsafe and a menace to the public and should be reported before actual harm has been done by them.

Making People Stingy

We all feel a wave of sympathy for the Knights of the Road, traveling gentry, unkindly known as hoboes, who in their recent convention denounced the war because it makes people stingy. They feel that the possibility of being obliged to seek employment is rapidly becoming a probability, and the outlook is dismal indeed. They should be listened to as each of them, if he only attaches himself to a locality for a certain short period of time, is entitled to vote. Their number is so great that even in a city like New York they could swing an election their way. To be sure, they are mere flotsam on the stream of life, yet each of them, by virtue of being of the masculine gender, is freely accorded the privilege of the ballot, while honest, hardworking women, mothers of large families, as well as laborers in the vineyard, must obey laws of their making— Oh, what's the use!

Pupils and Teachers

School has reopened and again the small boy is hard at work. Judging from personal observation, I think the funny paragrapher who is sympathizing with the small boy on his return to school is miles away from the small boy's true attitude towards school and teachers. It is in only a few rare cases a teacher is disliked; for the greater part, children look upon their teachers as their friends, and there is a spirit of real comradeship between them which is the rule rather than the exception. The old attitude which Mr. Funnyman reflects in his jokes is a relic of his own school days, probably of a generation or more ago, when every boy looked upon his teacher as an enemy waiting to club him for imaginary offenses. Here in Lowell, as in nearly all places at the present time, there is no excuse for the complaint of overwork or of too hard work, owing to a good system of grading which insures the completion of one year's work before promotion to another, and the child who makes these complaints invariably can be found lacking in application and industry. Other causes for these complaints are poor attendance and lack of interest on the part of parents. This last entails not only a close following of the pupil's progress, as indicated by the card he carries home weekly, but by seeing that the child has sufficient hours of sleep, together with proper nourishment. Teachers are not entirely heartless, neither are they the enemies of children. If parents would appreciate these points and not uphold Johnny when he comes home with a story of abuse piled upon him by his teacher, much of the friction between all parties concerned would be removed.

Also if parents would realize that teachers cannot manufacture brains in their pupils, that they must do what they can with that which comes to them, we would hear less of the child who, if he be promising, takes after his father, but if the reverse be true and his possibilities in scholarship limited—then he has a very poor teacher.

Today the applicants for teachers' positions are required to qualify so highly before even presuming to apply, and they are then so sifted and so culled in order that only the best may be chosen, parents may feel reasonably sure that school committees are doing all in their power to provide the children of Lowell with the best possible teachers.

Getting in Your Way

Have you ever noticed that when you take pains to stand on the outer edge of the sidewalk to read the bulletin-boards at Merrimack square, just so you will avoid standing in front of anybody, somebody is sure to come and stand directly in front of you? Such an act of thoughtlessness is unpardonable, yet it is done every day by persons whose manners, apart from this instance, are faultless. Sometimes it is a man, preoccupied with business and filled with haste. More often it is a woman, and even though she be clad in an X-ray gown, one's line of vision is broken, and frequently, in the latter case, his mind is diverted wholly from the business of gathering free news. The next time you stop to scan these interesting boards, kindly assure yourself that you are not blocking somebody's view. Your thoughtfulness will be appreciated.

Like Distant Cannonading

Last Monday evening one would have been forgiven for thinking a naval engagement was going on just off the Massachusetts coast. Reports, loud and distant, coming at irregular intervals, certainly suggested it to many and when the anxiety was relieved by being assured that it was a celebration of some feast day in Lawrence at which bombs were exploded by way of expressing the holiday spirit of the participants, peaceful sleep followed. The sounds reminded many of the old settlers of war-time, and I venture to say that in more than one home the evening wore away while tales of those unhappy days were rehearsed. The reports, which resembled the sounds of shelling, brought to many the thought that we may yet be entangled in the dreadful international war, for the cessation of which we are all urgently asked to pray.

Things That Count

Nature keeps the balance of things pretty well considering her great age and man's—or woman's—many attempts to upset her plans. Last winter, while the earth was shrouded in snow, before a bird was to be seen, before even the pussy-willow dared to put forth, many women were wearing the most fragile and summery of summer hats. Mine was of open-mesh lace straw with apple blossoms and the dearest little white wings, and I never even sneezed, although a cruel March wind played havoc with me by piling freckles on top of freckles. Two months ago, before the gunpowdery smell of the Fourth of July celebration, which we did not have, had left the air, heavy velvet hats covering the head and ears closely were in order. What do we care for comfort when Dame Fashion speaks! Uncomfortable as a summer hat may be in midwinter, or uncomfortable as a heavy winter hat may be in July, there is no discomfort in the world that can equal that of being "out of style." And the man—no woman would attempt it—who tries to change this order of things is working for a forlorn cause.

CAUSED BY OVEREATING

Deficient gastric secretion, meaning a lack of the fluids necessary for digestion, is a prevalent condition. You may have it now and not know it because you are able to get along without actual discomfort even with your enfeebled condition.

But if you overeat—then you are in trouble. You have indigestion because you have given your weakened stomach too much to do. The deficient gastric secretion was what doctors call the predisposing cause, the overeating was the exciting cause. It is easy not to repeat the overeating but the predisposing cause must be corrected if you are to be well.

The secretions that digest the food come from glands that are nourished directly by the blood. When these secretions are insufficient the only way to restore their healthful condition is by building up the blood. This can be done by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the non-alcoholic tonic that assists nature in keeping the body in health. Proper attention to diet and the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills should be tried in cases of disordered digestion because it is the simple and natural way to correct the trouble.

AN OVERBURDENED WIFE

If the work that women do and the pains they suffer could be measured in figures, what a terrible array they would present! Through girlhood, wifehood and motherhood woman toils on, often suffering with backache, pains in side, headaches and nervousness which are tell-tale symptoms of organic derangements which Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—made from roots and herbs—can undoubtedly correct. Women who suffer should not give up hope until they have given it a trial.

The consciousness of being correctly gowned would enable a lady general to win a battle which would turn the tide of the world's history against the greatest odds. Joan of Arc, inspired as she was, saw to it that her beautiful white charger and her suit of white mail were in order before going into battle. These things always counted.

NEW ELEVATOR LAW

BUILDING DEPARTMENT WILL ISSUE LICENSES TO OPERATORS

A new law will go into effect October 1, by which all operators of elevators or escalators will be required to secure a license, and the office of the public building department of this city is getting ready to hold such examinations as required by law and issue the licenses.

The examinations in this city will be held under the supervision of Commissioner James E. Donnelly of the public building and license department, and conducted by the inspector of public buildings, Francis A. Connor.

(a) No person shall operate and no owner, lessee, employer or his agent shall cause or permit to be operated the elevators specified in this regulation to be operated by licensed operators, unless the person operating the same is duly licensed; provided, however, that in case of emergency such operation by a competent unlicensed person may be permitted for a period not exceeding seven consecutive days.

(b) Power passenger elevators shall be operated by licensed operators, except (1) the selective automatic push-button type when equipped with the required safeguards; and except (2) elevators with shipper ropes accessible from the landings, when equipped with the required safeguards; and except (3) a passenger elevator in a private residence occupied by one family; and except (4) a passenger elevator serving two landings only when such elevator is equipped with the door interlocking devices required on a selective automatic button-control elevator.

(c) Power freight elevators shall be operated by licensed operators if the elevators run at a speed exceeding 100 degrees per minute.

(d) Power freight elevators, except hatchway-type, carriage-type, sidewalk-type and dumb-waiters, and except elevators serving only two landings, shall be operated by licensed operators whenever (1) they are used for carrying more than three persons, including the operator, or whenever (2) they are not provided with landing gates.

(e) Licensed operators are not required for elevators used in uncompleted buildings for hoisting workmen and materials.

(f) A license shall not be required of an elevator contractor or of a mechanic engaged in the construction and repair of elevators, or of an inspector having authority to inspect elevators.

LOMASNEY FOR TAGUE

STRONGEST TO MAKE FIGHT AGAINST KELIHER—DECISION REACHED BY HENDRICKS CLUB

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Martin M. Lomasney and the other democratic leaders of ward 8, in this city, will support Representative Peter F. Tague for the congressional nomination in the 10th district.

The Hendricks club, the well-known democratic organization in the West End, had a "conference" yesterday afternoon and voted to use its influence for Mr. Tague in preference to Ex-Congressman John A. Keliher, Senator James H. Brennan, or Representative Thomas A. Noland, all of whom are seeking the democratic nomination to succeed Congressman Murray.

This action by the ward 8 leader was by no means unexpected; indeed, it has been commonly believed from the first that Mr. Lomasney would support Mr. Tague, but the matter was not definitely settled until the meeting yesterday afternoon.

The friends of Senator Brennan, the other congressional candidate from Charlestown, have done their utmost to persuade the ward 8 democrats to support him in the primaries, and it is known that Mr. Lomasney has been well disposed toward the Charlestown senator, but the ward 8 people decided that Mr. Tague would be the strongest candidate against Mr. Keliher, whose defeat they are anxious to accomplish.

It is now certain that the real fight at the primaries next Tuesday will be between Mr. Keliher and Mr. Tague.

If Mr. Lomasney is as successful in controlling the democratic voters of his ward as he has been in past campaigns that ward will give a substantial majority to Mr. Tague, probably quite enough to counterbalance the lead which Mr. Keliher will obtain in the South End—wards 7 and 9.

The chances are that neither of the two leading candidates will get a very large majority in wards 1, 2 and 6. East Boston has in Mr. Niland a candidate of its own, but he can hardly expect to win the nomination. The vote in Charlestown will be divided between Mr. Tague and Mr. Brennan; now that the former has secured the support of ward 8 the chances are that he will have a decided majority in Charlestown also, but it is said that Mr. Keliher himself has considerable strength there.

Mr. Keliher has back of him also the influence and prestige of the administration in city hall, for Mayor Curley has stated that he would support the ward 9 man.

Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald is not taking an active part in this campaign. He has been counted as a supporter of Mr. Tague, but the ex-mayor has so many friends on each side of the fence that he has determined to keep his hands off.

Police Smash in Woolworth Store When Safe Falls—Gloves Prevented Finger Prints

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Three scientific safebreakers, who wore white gloves to prevent possible identification by means of finger prints, were caught by the Chelsea police shortly before 5 o'clock yesterday morning in the basement of the store of F. W. Woolworth & Co. at 220 and 224 Broadway, Chelsea.

The cracksmen had thrown the safe over on its back and were preparing to force it with a 15-inch steel jimmy when they were detected by Patrolman Edward Isbister and Reserve Officer Valentine Elmore, who were passing the store.

Elmore was in citizen's clothes and not on duty. Light over the manager's office, which was burning half an hour previously, was out, and the men decided to investigate.

Elmore drew his revolver and stayed on guard, while Isbister went to the rear entrance to the store on Cherry street. As he neared the store he heard a heavy crash, which afterward proved to be the noise made by the safe when it was overturned. He also heard footsteps inside and rapped with his night stick for assistance.

Elmore heard the call for aid and shouted to Joseph Carolan of Commercial avenue, who was passing, to shout for help if anyone attempted to leave the building. He then ran around to Cherry street.

Isbister told him to get some more officers. Sergt. Shannon and Patrolmen McGauley, Glennan, E. McCarthy and Hickey soon appeared on the scene and the building was surrounded. Sergt. Shannon and Patrolmen Isbister, Glennan and Elmore broke in the rear door.

The burglars had been apprised of the presence of the police when Isbister rapped with his night stick for help, and could not be found in the upper store. The basement was then searched and two men were detected crouching behind a partition of a small room, and the third was discovered by Sergt. Shannon crouching on some boards that were nailed near the ceiling.

The police all had their revolvers drawn, and the burglars were backed up against a wall and handcuffed. One of the men wore a white glove, the other gloves were found near the safe.

Few Implements Found

A 15-inch steel jimmy and a flashlight were also found near the safe. A small bottle labeled "spirits of nitre" contained a liquid which was at first believed to be nitroglycerin, but inspectors from various departments doubted it and it will be analyzed.

The men arrested gave their names and addresses as John, alias Jack Snyder, aged 24, of 30 Stanford street, Boston; Joseph Gordon, aged 30, of 17 Dartmouth street, Boston, and Harry Davis, alias Harry Michaels, aged 21, of 21 Revere street, Revere. The names and addresses are all said to be fictitious. It was learned yesterday forenoon that Davis' right name is Jack Miller and his home is in New York.

The capture of the three burglars is one of the best catches made in police circles for some time. Thirty-five stores of the Woolworth company have been broken into throughout the country in the last few months. Most all of the breaks were made under circumstances similar to the Chelsea robbery.

Lynn Robbery Recalled

A jimmy almost identical with the one found yesterday, was left in a Lynn store which was entered a short time ago. Inspectors Kane, Thorpe and Broad of Lynn, Maurice Finn and Connolly of the Metropolitan park police and Mike Morrissey of this city visited Chelsea and scrutinized the imprisoned trio. None recognized them as local crooks and they are believed to be New York and Chicago men.

The men are charged with breaking and entering in the night time, larceny, and with having burglars' tools in their possession. They were unable to secure bail. When searched they had about $15 between them. No guns or weapons, bits, gimlets, sectional jimmies, known as "can openers," were found on them.

The police believe that the men hid their implements, if they had them, in the cellar, and Manager John E. Jeheridge will have employes overhaul the goods today to search for the tools.

The men ripped out a money drawer in the manager's office from which, Mr. Jeheridge says, $4.96 is missing.

May Have Cracked Bacon Safe

It is believed that the men may be responsible for other burglaries and an investigation has been started. The watchman of the William A. Bacon company, who was bound and gagged by three men several months ago when the safe was robbed, will see if he can identify the man.

The prisoners refused to talk, but conferred with their counsel, Representative Maurice Caro, in Yiddish.

Miller's identity was learned when his brother-in-law, Myer Schlesinger of New York, called at the station at 2.30 yesterday afternoon. He told the police at first that Miller was only an acquaintance whom he had met in Webster hall, at a dance and that he had promised to look him up when he came to Boston. He said he inquired at the Stanford street adress and was told by a man by the name of Dave Alexander that Miller was locked up in Chelsea.

Schlesinger was questioned by Inspector Morrissey and finally admitted that Miller was his brother-in-law. He disclaimed all knowledge of the burglary and said he left New York on the 1 o'clock train Sunday morning and was returning to New York last night. He said Miller was in New York two weeks ago.

Finger prints of the prisoners were taken by Special Officer Claflin of police headquarters. Photographs and measurements will be taken this morning after the men are arraigned in the Chelsea police court.

Patrolman Isbister was highly commended by Capt. Fitz Roy Grover for his alertness and prompt action. Officer Elmore was also praised for his assistance.

Mr. Jeheridge said last evening that there was $600 in cash in the safe.

The burglars gained entrance by cutting a panel in the Cherry street door and turning the wooden bar which fastens the door on the inside. After getting inside they again barred the door.

Best Laxative For Children

When your baby is cross and fretful instead of the happy, laughing little dear you are accustomed to, in all probability the digestion has become deranged and the bowels need attention. Give it a mild laxative, dispel the irritability and bring back the happy content of babyhood.

BENTLEY AND SHAW, YOUNGSTERS, ARE FINDS FOR CLARK GRIFFITH

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Though Walter Johnson has not been the star this year that he has been heretofore, Clark Griffith has uncovered two other youngsters who have done much to keep his team to the front. They are Shaw and Bentley. They have recently been pitching games that entitle them to be considered topnotchers, and with more experience they are expected to become reliable performers.

THE HEBREW NEW YEAR

OBSERVED IN LOCAL SYNAGOGUES—FEAST OF YOM KIPPUR COMES ON SEPT. 30

At sundown last evening, the Jewish New Year 5675 was ushered in with services in the synagogues of this city and most other cities in the world. New Year, the feast of "Rosh Hasonah," inaugurates the most solemn season of the Jewish religious year, and is most strictly observed by all Hebrews. The holy day, which began last evening, was also observed today by the Hebrew congregation and Tuesday will be observed in all the orthodox synagogues. New Year day is the beginning of a long list of important holidays, of which the day itself and Yom Kippur, the day of the Long Fast, are most strictly observed. The ten days between the New Year and the Day of Atonement are the ten penitential days.

There are several reasons why Jews celebrate the New Year in the fall. The month of Tishri—which begins at this time—is the seventh month of the year, and yet on the first of this month the synagogue year is celebrated because the number seven has been sacred to Hebrews from time immemorial. The seventh month is the holiest in the year, and during the entire month all of the principal holy days and festivals are observed.

The feast of Yom Kippur will be observed Sept. 30.

OVERDUE BOHEMIAN

Sends No Wireless—Ships Carrying 150 Refugees Sends No Report of Whereabouts

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Great inconvenience was caused yesterday because no wireless message was sent from the Leyland line steamship Bohemian, which should have arrived early in the day from Liverpool with a shipload of passengers. Not only did the liner not arrive at all, but up to twelve hours after she was looked for by the company officials not a word had come through from the skipper.

Friends of the 150 war refugees on board were on the anxious seat all day and kept the wires hot with their queries as to the whereabouts of the ship, and, of course nobody could tell them. The officials at the United States barge office at Long wharf were so busy answering the calls from all over Greater Boston and from other sections that they scarcely had time to attend to their work.

While fear of capture by Germans cruisers is said to be the reason for the non-receipt of any message, those best informed on the subject declare there isn't a German warship within 1500 mile sof Boston.

WHAT THE FRENCH MAID SAID

"The Beauty Patch"

Note—Under the above caption will be published daily delightfully written articles filled with useful information on household subjects for women readers. We advise their careful perusal.—Editor.

"Marie," began Marjorie, dimpling and showing an unwonted timidity in approaching her subject, "do you suppose it would be all right for me to wear a beauty patch?"

"Why, yes, I think so, most decidedly," answered Marie.

"About every so often this artful little black patch comes into vogue and after a tentative period when "nice" women try to resist its allurement because it is supposed to be "fast," its fascination becomes irresistible and everybody takes it up until the craze runs its natural course and goes out of fashion.

"Just now the beauty patch is at the height of favor. One sees it on young girls, on smart, well groomed matrons—even on women over 60, who cling desperately to a coquettish and youthful mode of dress.

"A bit of makeup, however, is almost imperative as a background for beauty patches, effectively worn. Only the debutante with skin of peaches-and-cream tones can paste a black beauty patch against her natural complexion and stand the test.

"The least hint of pallor or sallowness will be cruelly revealed by the accentuating black patch, and even if rouge is not tolerated, a bit of powder is best for the purpose.

"This liquid white finish is easy to apply evenly and if used in moderation is less artificial looking than a coating of ordinary powder rubbed down with a cloth or bit of chamois skin.

"Color in the face is not fashionable now, an ethereal, delicate look being the ideal aimed at; but the beauty patch is rarely becoming against a dead white skin. A little color in the cheeks makes its effect a deal more coquettish—as the colonial belle well knew.

"There is a great deal of art in the application of the beauty patch. Its effect must be studied carefully and many experiments should be made before the final location of the patch is decided upon.

"If the face is very narrow, a patch at the outer corner of the eye will make it appear wider. On a broad, heavy face the patch should be placed at one side of the chin or near the corner of the mouth. And be very careful not to get the patch too large.

"An infinitessimal speck of black on the complexion will show up conspicuously, and, as a rule, the smaller the beauty patch is the more becoming it is. Just a dot of black, no larger than the head of a pin, will sufficiently call attention to a dimple if placed beside it."

ONE DEAD, FOUR DYING

Woman Killed and Man Fatally Hurt in Automobile Crash—Others More or Less Injured

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Two are dead, four perhaps dying, and four less seriously hurt as the result of Sunday accidents in New England, in most of which automobiles played the leading part.

One of the deaths, which occurred at Windsor, Vt., was due to drowning. The other death resulted from an automobile accident at Hull, in which another person was probably fatally hurt and four more slightly injured.

Accidents in Worcester and Waltham

Worcester and Waltham were scenes of accidents in which three persons sustained internal injuries, and the first-named city likewise provided a garage fire. The least harmful of the day's automobile crashes occurred in Cambridge, where a motor car ran down a patrol wagon, but did little damage.

WOMAN KILLED, MAN DYING

HULL, Sept. 21.—One woman dead, a man dying and four other persons injured, is the toll of an early Sunday morning automobile accident at Warwick's Hill, Nantasket, when a motor car owned by Frank P. Magann, a garage owner of Brighton, and driven by his son, Edward, crashed into a stone post at the bottom of the hill, throwing out its seven passengers.

Mrs. Jennie Snyder, formerly Miss Jennie Chisholm of 9 Goldsmith place, Roxbury, is dead, and Michael Feeney of 138 Athens street, South Boston, is dying at the Sylvester Private hospital, Allerton, with a compound fracture of the skull and internal injuries. They were both occupants of the car.

Magann, the chauffeur, was placed under arrest by the Hull police, charged with reckless driving, and later bailed out in $3500 bonds. According to Magann's father he was hired to take the party to Nantasket for the day, and was just arriving at the beach, shortly before 7 o'clock, when the accident happened.

The party was composed of young Roxbury, South Boston and Cambridge people, who were on their way to spend the day at a clubhouse at Nantasket. They left Boston at 4 o'clock yesterday morning. Besides the injured there were Joseph Hanrahan and Edward Duffy of Roxbury, Jeremiah Sullivan of Cambridge and a young woman called Agnes, of Roxbury.

According to the story told by Hull police by the occupants of the car, the machine was coming down Warwick hill, near the Villa Napoli, at high speed, when something went wrong with the steering gear. At the foot of the hill the heavy machine crashed into a stone post.

All seven occupants of the car were thrown out. Feeney and Mrs. Snyder were picked up unconscious. Feeney was taken to the Sylvester hospital and Mrs. Snyder to the Sturgis hospital at Allerton. Mrs. Snyder died from a fractured skull a few minutes after reaching there.

The other occupants of the car were cut and bruised, and the other young woman is said to have been severely injured, but was taken from the scene in another automobile.

The automobile was demolished.

Warwick Hill is one of the steepest in the vicinity and the roadway is curved. According to the Hull police Magann was driving at a high rate of speed when the accident occurred. He was arraigned in the Hull court today.

Mrs. Snyder, who was killed, lived with her father, Alexander Chisholm, at 9 Goldsmith place, Roxbury. She was 30 years old.

MEN DANGEROUSLY HURT

WORCESTER, Sept. 21.—Two men of this city were run down by the automobile of Mrs. L. C. Palmer of Commonwealth avenue, Boston, just over the line in Shrewsbury yesterday and are now at the City hospital, suffering from internal injuries. Both are on the danger list.

The men are Frank Secreteno, 30, and Salvator Garbarillo, both of East Central street. Witnesses of the accident say that the men were running to catch a car and darted across the road just ahead of the machine.

PROVIDENCE MAN DROWNS

WINDSOR, Vt., Sept. 21—John W. Glassey of Providence, R. I., was drowned yesterday by the capsizing of a canoe in which he and another young man were paddling. His companion was rescued. Glassey was a bricklayer.

KNOCKED FROM WAGON

WALTHAM, Sept. 21.—James Mayuse, 35, of Felton and Water streets, is at the Waltham hospital suffering from internal injuries received Sunday morning when a wagon he was driving was struck by a trolley car at Bacon and Lexington streets.

Mayuse was thrown heavily to the ground. No blame has been placed by the police.

BLAZE DESTROYS AUTOS.

WORCESTER, Sept. 21.—An electric spark produced in the charging of an electric runabout in the garage of Dr. Charles H. Nichols, a wealthy physician of this city, caused a fire Sunday that destroyed two valuable automobiles. Three cars were run out of the garage, and were not harmed. The loss will be about $5000.

Dr. Nichols whose home is at 38 Cedar street, was in the garage at the time the fire became noticeable, and narrowly escaped being overcome by smoke. He managed to crawl through the smoke to the door and suffered no serious effects.

AUTO HIT POLICE WAGON

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—A collision between an automobile and the police patrol of station 2, Cambridge, at Prospect and Hampshire streets, Cambridge, late yesterday afternoon, was remarkable for the little damage that resulted. The wagon was called to Kendall square, where James H. Delorey of 49 Harvard street, Cambridge, was arrested on a charge of drunkenness, and before the prisoner had been put into the wagon Officer Mullen, driver of the wagon, received word from the station house to proceed to Inman square, where another man had been placed under arrest.

As the horse turned into Prospect street an automobile coming from the direction of Massachusetts avenue came across Hampshire street. The front of the machine struck the horse midway, felling him in his tracks, crashing both shafts and throwing Driver Mullen to the ground.

Mullen landed on his feet. The front wheel passed over the body of the horse and left him directly under the wagon. Beyond a few scatches the horse was not injured, but the wagon was out of commission.

While the officers were busy with the fallen horse, the man driving the automobile moved on, but the police managed to obtain his registration number.

FOUR BUILDINGS DESTROYED

BOSTON, April 21.—The residential section of West Watertown was endangered by an early morning fire yesterday, when a barn and three sheds were destroyed and a house badly damaged. The total loss was more than $1000.

The fire started in a barn owned by Charles Connors at 65 Gilbert street. A horse was taken out on the arrival of the fire department, but died a few moments later in the yard.

The efforts of the fire fighters were centered on a house owned by Daniel Glynn at 19 Charles street, to which about $500 damage was done. Three sheds near by also caught fire. Two hours' work was necessary before all of the blazes were out.

EARLY MORNING FIRE

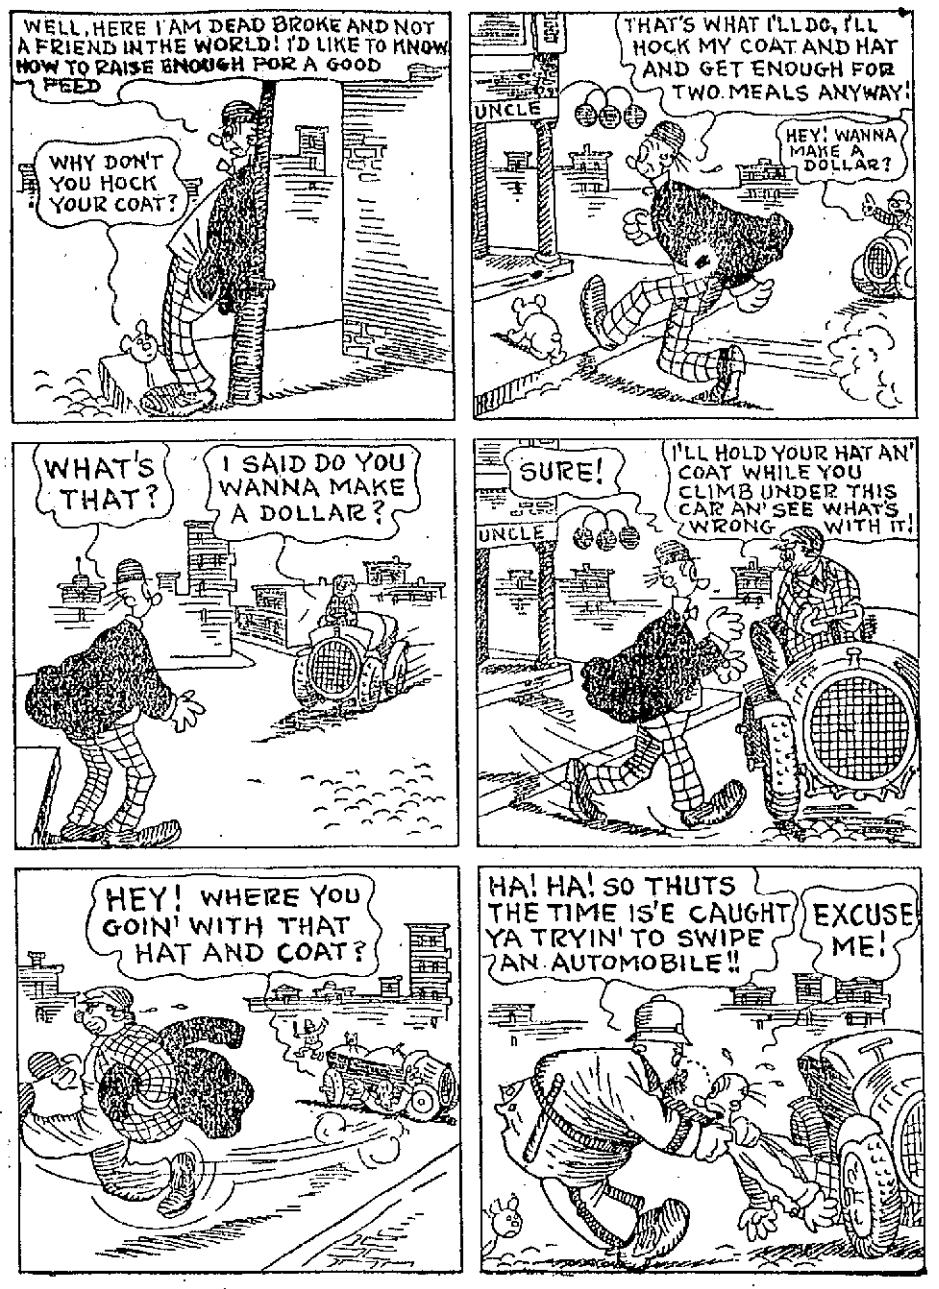
LEXINGTON, Sept. 21.—Heavy firing was held in the outskirts of Lexington early yesterday, but casualty lists are minus. The Lexington police department mobilized to repel the invaders but found no invaders to repel.

A fusilade of shots rang out about 1 o'clock, but efforts to trace the origin of the gunplay were unavailing. The only clue yet unearthed is that three men were seen quarreling about an hour before in Muzzey street. No dead or wounded have been found.

HOWARD L. GRAY DEAD

THOMASTON, Me., Sept. 21—Howard L. Gray of Stetson, overseer of the wood shop of the state prison, died suddenly of heart disease Saturday night. He is survived by his wife and one child, who had arrived yesterday to spend a fortnight's vacation with him.

EXCUSE ME



NATIONAL PROHIBITION

CAMPAIGN STARTED AT MELROSE—SPEAKER WAS FOUNDER OF ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE

MELROSE, Sept. 21.—The prohibition party formally opened its nation-wide campaign for national prohibition Sunday afternoon at a meeting in Memorial hall. The speaker was Rev. H. H. Russell, founder of the Anti-Saloon league of America. A large audience attended and much interest was shown. Speakers from other states will give addresses at meetings throughout Massachusetts during the week, it was announced.

Rev. Harold Marshall opened the meeting in the afternoon. After a short address he introduced Dr. Russell.

Dr. Russell stated that 50 years ago the churches were divided by sectarian antagonisms, while the north and south were embittered by warfare. He declared that today all these barriers against the battle with the liquor traffic had been swept aside and that the south was leading in the fight for the abolition of the saloon as he north had led the fight against the abolition of slavery.

He also stated that it was the firm belief of the temperance advocates that the prohibition of the liquor business was only a matter of a short time, in view of the tremendous organization which was arrayed against it.

The evening meeting was held at Melrose Highlands at the Green Street Baptist church. Among other things, Dr. Russell said:

"This is one of thousands of convocations held and to be held in the Bay State and in all the states. They are called by this ringing title, 'See This Thing Through Recruiting Rallies.'

"Last year was the jubilee year of the Anti-Saloon league, the 20-year jubilee. It began in November, 1912, with a state victory. West Virginia voted dry by 92,400 majority. The jubilee also was cheered by a National victory. On the last day of February in the senate and on the first day of March in the house, the national congress, over the veto of the president, passed the Webb-Kenyon bill, insuring drouth in dry territory for the future. Then began preparations for the jubilee convention at Columbus, O., in November, 1913. Five thousand delegates from all states, representing all political parties, all temperance organizations and all churches, unanimously agreed to send a committee of 1000 to Washington to introduce a most important measure.

"The committee of 1000 men, swelled to 2000, accompanied by many delegates of women's organizations, marched up Capitol hill and delivered the measure to a member of the house and senate, and the Sheppard-Hobson bill was immediately filed in both houses. At the big ratification meeting held later in Washington all present lifted the right hand and shouted, 'With God's help we will see the thing through,' and then we all hastened to the various states to begin the campaign to see it through.

"It is a joint resolution to amend the constitution of the United States, which when passed by a two-thirds vote of both houses, and when ratified by a majority of the members of a majority of the state legislatures, will bring this to pass namely, the permanent prohibition of the manufacture, sale, importation, exportation and transportation of intoxicating beverages throughout our United States of America.

"The board of trade of Pittsburg recently passed with a cheer resolution for national prohibition. Everywhere business men and great manufacturers are coming with us. Sobriety is now known to be essential to safety and efficiency.

"Another ground of hope is found in the attitude of the liquor men themselves. Their organs editorially give up the fight when, as in their national journal, it is stated: 'For us there is the handwriting on the wall, and its interpretation spells doom.' The wholesalers give it up when they say, as did a Pittsburg brewer recently to the other officers and stockholders: 'Gentlemen, we may as well recognize the fact that the shutting down of our business is only a question of time. And the retail dealers when they lease a building now for a term of years put in the condition: 'Provided we are permitted to continue the sale of liquor.'

"Today the oral allies of America are united, steadily fighting a whining war, while now the liquor traffic is breaking, fearful, and speeding toward its final and full defeat."

WALL OF WARSHIPS

LONDON, Sept 21.—A "solid wall of warships" is thrown across the northern part of the North sea, according to the captain of a British trawler who has just arrived from Iceland. The skipper said it was "absolutely impossible for any fot to break through undetected," so constant and thorough was the patrol to the north. It was his own experience to be halted and searched, and after being released his boat was followed by two torpedo boats until it reached its destination.

The thoroughness of the patrol was further testified to by another North sea skipper. His trawler was lying along shore, when shortly after midnight it suddenly found itself hemmed in by a huge black object which proved to be a British cruiser. Its officers seemed to have had cat's eyes. From the dark a voice demanded to know the identity of the trawler. It was promptly shouted back.

"The name is quite correct, sir," came another mysterious voice astern of us," said the skipper. "A submarine had crept up behind us and read our name. Although all of our crew had come on deck to see what was happening, not one of them had seen the submarine appear. The whole episode only occupied a few minutes and the cruiser, after wishing us 'Good morning,' and plenty of fishing, disappeared in the darkness."

FROM SOUTHAMPTON

SOUTHAMPTON, Sept. 21.—The despatch of troops from Southampton continues, but the movements are now kept less secret than during the passage of the first expeditionary forces. The record then made provided an excellent test of the facilities here for handling such a great movement of troops.

Although the expeditionary force was despatched from several points, Southampton handled the bulk of the 150,000 to 200,000 men who were sent to the continent during two weeks' time. The docks at this place afford more than one and one-half miles of water front, with railway lines so close to the ships' docks that it is but a moment's work to transfer train loads of men, horses and equipment from the railway to the steamships. The precision with which the transfer was made was so marked that an entire train was frequently unloaded in three minutes, and it was not uncommon for 20 trains to enter the docks and complete their task of unloading with a single hour.

The plan had been worked out by the war office two years before. The small cars used for transporting horses, accommodating only seven or eight animals, proved a great factor in the speedy transfers. Each horse had a separate compartment, and the sides of the cars dropped down in such a manner than the animals stepped out without the slightest confusion. Some Americans who witnessed this movement remarked that the cars were far more practical for this sort of work than the large freight cars used in America, into which a number of horses were crowded.

Scores of hospital cars still line the dock tracks here ready for the reception of sick and injured returning from the continent. Red Cross signs are displayed and surgeons and nurses are in the cars with everything ready for the wounded. The hospital trains are made up of converted passenger coaches and sleeping cars. All have the small compartments common to English railway coaches with doors opening at the sides. Litters are provided which will enter these small side doors and consequently it is much easier to place the seriously injured in berths than it would be if it were necessary to carry them through the doors common to American sleeping cars and along narrow aisles or hallways.

Baggage cars have also been converted into hospital cars where patients can be placed who need attention of a sort which can be rendered more satisfactorily in a roomy car than in a small compartment.

MADE IN LOWELL

There is no doubt that the "Made in Germany" signs which have decorated everything from a needle to an anchor for many years past have had something to do with starting the war, for whether we regard it from the side of the allies or from the point of view of the Kaiser, industrial supremacy was one of the ends sought. The methods of bringing it about are responsible for the catastrophe in no slight degree. At the present time the Krupp engines of death are the most advertised "Made in Germany" products, and industrial Germany suffers as a consequence. Even should the Fatherland be eventually victorious, its economic and manufacturing systems will take many years to ascend to their olden pinnacle. Many incline to the view that politically, industrially and commercially, Germany will take decades to recover what she has lost or will eventually lose. Be this as it may there is a moral in the situation for industrial America and for industrial Lowell into the bargain.

From one end of the country to the other, clubs, societies and active organizations are boosting the slogan "Made in America," advising our people to demand American-made goods, not so much to appropriate the prosperity of any nation but to prevent future American dependence on foreign manufacture as far as possible. There has been no real need for the total reliance with which some most important lines of American industry looked to foreign sources and as a consequence America shared in the temporary stagnation and uncertainty following the war, instead of getting ready to meet the augmented demands that were certain to come our way. Anything that has been done abroad can be done in America—in the line of invention and manufacture—and in this case war proved the necessity that is the mother of invention.

Already papers throughout the state are commenting favorably on the initiative of the Lowell textile school in starting to manufacture dyes hitherto neglected. Should things turn out as anticipated, Lowell will be known as the centre of textile enterprise, and will consequently gain in prestige and popularity to a degree not hitherto enjoyed or furthered by other aspects of our activities. In this connection it is noteworthy that Lowell leads in some of the finest lines of manufacture, textile and otherwise, and that the trade-mark "Made in Lowell" adorns the finest grades of finished commodities in the show places of metropolitan stores.

To strive to advance Lowell prosperity by creating a demand for Lowell goods within the city proper would be provincial and ineffectual, but there would be a decided benefit in a concerted effort to make the brand "Made in Lowell" stand for the best in every line of manufacture in which the city excels. Everybody knows the value of "Sheffield" stamped on steel, the prestige of "Pittsburg" on machinery, the conviction that "Brussels" carries on carpets. Why then should not the magic "Made in Lowell" mean as much on woolens or cotton? Is there not danger that the city sits back complacently, satisfied with past achievements and neglecting the competitive and progressive spirit of the times?

To advance the "Made in Lowell" policy a real working agreement should be entered into between our mill officials, our business heads, our board of trade, our municipal authorities. At present industrial Lowell takes little part in its public affairs, apparently, and though the city has made its world-wide reputation in textile manufacture, we hear less on public affairs from its noted mill men than from any other group of notables within its boundaries. When industrial Lowell, political Lowell, commercial Lowell and Lowell in every other phase will all act in harmony and with a common end "Made in Lowell" will mean far more than it means at present.

SIGNS OF IMPROVEMENT

In many lines of business are growing indications of the prosperity that has been predicted for American industry as a result of the war. Manufacturing is improving, farm produce is finding a ready market and finance is establishing itself on a sounder basis. Any uncertainty which obtained immediately following the opening of the European contest has been completely dispelled.

A contemporary points out as one of the surest signs of this improvement of domestic conditions "the decline in foreign exchange" to a low figure which it regards as "a most significant evidence of improving business and monetary conditions." Since the beginning of August international money markets have been decidedly unsettled, and our merchants have been handicapped in meeting their foreign debts by the high rate of foreign exchange. Instead of the normal rate of $4.78 for each pound sterling they have been forced to pay a rate of from $5.00 to $5.08—an increase of $1.03 for each dollar owed abroad. In the aggregate this amounted to an enormous increase and it did a great deal to keep business stagnant. Added to this was the fact that foreign creditors refused to extend the usual credit and demanded a gold basis of payment.

The falling in the rate of the foreign exchange is a sure indication that this country has sent enough gold abroad to offset the heavier indebtedness and that, therefore, the government and our financial interests feel confident of American stability. At first this country hoarded its gold and did not send it abroad until it was proved absolutely safe to do so. New York city alone has arranged for the payment of $80,000,000 of bonds held by foreigners and the outward shipping of our natural products is getting to a normal basis. It is now expected that our business with England will soon be as satisfactory as before the war.

No country can have industrial prosperity unless it has financial stability, and nowhere is this better understood than in America, which has devoted its best efforts to furthering a safe financial policy since the war began. There is a greater degree of co-operation between the government and the leaders of American finance than ever before and the result will soon be seen in the prosperity which grows more certain as the war drags on.

PROSPECTS OF PEACE?

When two men go to fight with their fists in the heat of passion, they are in no mood to listen to reason. A peacemaker may stand nearby and advise all manner of fine sentiments but the combatants burn with the desire to inflict corporal punishment on each other and they will not cool off until their frenzy has been lessened by solid punches given or received. When the first ardor of battle recedes, they may go on fighting automatically but one of them is apt to keep an ear open to offers of mediation.

The same is true to some extent of two armies. When their national pride is aroused to a pitch where it no longer becomes passion they fight madly and blindly, each striving for the total annihilation of the other. When they cool off and begin to count the mutual cost one of them at least is generally in a receptive mood for offers of settlement. If one side has shown a decided mastery the cause of mediation is so much the more advanced.

It is generally felt that the present war is a war to the finish, but peace lovers are already hoping for some settlement. The offer of President Wilson still holds good, but he will in all probability repeat it when the fortunes of war favor its being received more favorably. As yet there has been no direct reference to peace on either side, but the American expectancy of a speedy settlement grows. Our government may be depended on to advance the cause of peace at the earliest possible opportunity, consistent with national dignity.

VOTE AT PRIMARIES

Whether you be a democrat or a republican or a progressive or an independent or something which has not yet been named, go to the polls tomorrow if you are a voter and register your choice of men for the state offices. It is not a matter of personal choice with you; it is a strong duty, the general neglect of which would be a national menace. At present you cannot be compelled to go, if you should choose to stay away, but as a reasonable man you must see the importance of exercising your right and your obligation as a citizen. Any limb which is not exercised soon becomes worse than useless. It eventually decays. A voter is one of the limbs of the body, politic and as such must exercise his functions if he would not endanger our institutions.

A special word to Lowell democrats: Among the candidates for senator and representative and the other offices are men of integrity and ability. You can pick a strong one to offset every strong one offered by any other party. Vote, then, for the man that can win in the final elections, paying attention to his ability and to his qualities of fitness rather than to his personality. The time for voting for "good fellows" is past and public institutions are neither grafts nor public charities. Poor government is costly government for all of us. Pick your best men and line up back of them so that the present victorious sweep of democratic policies from the federal government down may be continued.

IMPROVED FREIGHT CONDITIONS

The business men of Lowell have reason to be grateful to Mr. W. G. Parkin, the local general agent of the Boston and Maine railroad, for bringing about the important change in the handling of freight which, though apparently slight, is in reality one of the most far reaching improvements that have taken place for years past. Lowell suffers from an unusually complicated railroad system, comprising several small and widely scattered yards, two inadequate freight houses, antiquated track arrangements and awkward facilities generally, to remedy which would take a far greater outlay than the railroad can afford at the present time. Anything then that would bring even a slight degree of improvement is to be commended, advancing as it does the interests of the individuals and concerns that constitute Lowell's industrial supremacy. The recent change must have necessitated a great deal of previous planning, but it will simplify freight handling to a degree that will confer a lasting benefit on the city and that will reflect favorably on the railroad.

Commencing this morning all outward freight, whatever the destination, will, if it is to pass over the Boston and Maine system, be taken at the Western avenue freight house and on the other hand all inward freight will be distributed at the Thorndike street freight house. This will do away with the annoyance and uncertainty which caused frequent strained relations between railroad officials and business men in the past and it will also show the public that there is need for forbearance in bettering conditions which cannot be justly attributed to local management but which are a heritage of antiquated systems.

Once again the record breaking crowds that have swarmed to the agricultural fairs in various surrounding towns prove that the old appreciation for all relating to the country and growing things is returning. Years ago such fairs were the event of the year but with the taste for tawdry theatricals and a lower range of pleasures their vogue fell off. Now after the musical comedies, the movies, the dance halls and pool rooms it is refreshing to find that the call of the farm is still potent to lure city dwellers from their accustomed haunts—for a day at least.

Slowly, but surely, foreign-built vessels are being admitted to American registry and in a short time the American flag will again have become a familiar sight on the commercial routes of the seas. The innovation has commended itself to all Americans, irrespective of party, and it is probable that what was begun as an emergency measure will be perfected as a permanent measure in the next session of congress.

The scarcity of sea engagements of any magnitude has been one of the greatest surprises of the present war. England must be anxious to try her guns, being confident of naval superiority as well as more advanced armament, but she hopes in vain for an opportunity to demonstrate her power. Germany has shown unique cleverness in keeping her fleets out of the open.

The first shower of crimson and golden leaves is falling from the trees and there is a melancholy swirl of faded glory along the road ahead. Every step stirs up ghosts of summer delights and occasionally the foot step is deadened by the carpet underfoot. Very soon the trees will again stand forth in stark nakedness and the myriads of leaves will have vanished like a generation that is passed. But what a sad pleasure lurks in the plaintive passing!

Peace on earth—but not just yet.

SEEN AND HEARD

Every man has his followers, even if they are only bill collectors.

Some history may repeat itself. But your neighbors will attend to repeating your history.

Tell a lie to save a man and the only thing he will ever be able to remember about you is that you are a liar.

They are making wedding rings out of platinum because it wears longer than gold. But a ring made of snow would outlast some of the modern matrimonial alliances.

A scientist claims that a man has six times more lung capacity than he needs. This scientist must have examined a suffragette who was masquerading in men's clothes.

Luke McLuke says he will study anatomy to find how a Boston woman was shot in the dining room and a Pittsburgh woman was stabbed in the back yard.

It is funny that a girl can be as graceful as a nymph when she is dancing and yet get off a street car in the attitude of a grizzly bear.

Any time a woman goes into a shoe store and insists upon having a pair of shoes that fit her you can bet that she is more than fifty years old with no matrimonial prospects.

Socks patterned after the design of the American flag are on sale in London. One purveyor asserted today that these "Uncle Sam" socks were meant to establish the identity of Americans going on continental missions.

Stripes run from top to bottom of the socks, with the exception of three rows of stars on a blue field just above the ankle. It was argued by one plausible merchant that no passport would be needed for the wearer of such a creation. Low shoes must be worn to get the proper effect.

To the large assortment of postcard photographs, which are now in great demand, has been added a picture of President Wilson. It has been one of the most popular pictures, so stationers assert, and has been enjoying a large sale.

Miss Ethel Barrymore will begin her season under Charles Frohman's management early in December, in a new play "The Shadow," which was to have been produced next month in Paris by Mme. Rejane. The war prevents this, so Miss Barrymore will be the first actress to appear in the play on any stage. It is by Messrs. Dario Niccodemi and Michaell Morton, the authors of "The Prodigal Husband," in which John Drew, Miss Barrymore's uncle, is appearing at the Empire theatre, N. Y. "The Shadow," in three acts, will give to Miss Barrymore, it is stated, opportunities different from any heretofore arranged for her.

The Sun is in receipt of the following letter from a former Lowell boy, now in South America:

Editor Lowell Sun, Lowell, Mass.

Dear Sir: I am in receipt of a copy of the souvenir edition of The Lowell Sun and as it came in a special wrapper, I assume that you are the sender, and if not I thank the sender, as I thank you for it. I assure you I appreciated it very much and after reading it through I cut out all the pictures and tacked them up on the walls of my quarters here so that I can imagine that I am in Lowell again. I am sure that the people of Lowell must be proud of the grand building and the progress you have made in the past, and I wish you success in the future. By this mail I will send you a copy of the Bogota special edition of the Gaceta Republican, Colombia's Independencia dia, 20 Julio, 1810-1914. They do not celebrate their Independence day here as we celebrated the Fourth of July. The sun shines here all day and at night it sets beautifully, but The Sun that I received today is shining brightly tonight on the walls of my quarters. I am in excellent health and wish to be remembered to all my Lowell friends.

With best wishes,

D. J. Farley.

BELGIUM'S FAMOUS ANTHEM

Since the outbreak of war patriotic feeling in Belgium generally has been stirred to a fierce blaze. On every hand one hears the national anthem of the country, the famous Brabanconne. Appended is a somewhat free translation:

Fled the years of servile shame!
Belgium, 'tis thine hour at last.
Wear again thy glorious name
Spread thy banner on the blast.
Sovereign people in thy might,
steadfast yet and valiant be,
King, and Law, and Liberty.

Strive, nor seek discharge at length,
Hold thy courage as thy crown.
God, who keeps thee in His strength,
On thy labors smileth down.
Over all thy fruitful land
Labor's prize is full and free.
On thine arts enthroned stand,
King, and Law, and Liberty.

Foes, that were our friends of old,
Are returned to love at last.
All the free we prize as gold,
Praying that our strife be past.
Belgians and Batavians, friends,
Knit in brotherhood shall be:
With one voice the shout ascends:
King, and Law, and Liberty.

Belgium, Mother, thus we vow,
Never shall our love abate.
Thou our hope, our safety thou
Hearts and blood are consecrate.
Grave, we pray, upon thy shield
This device eternally,
Weal or woe, at home, afield,
King, and Law, and Liberty.

THE EXPLANATION MAN.

O, de explanation man, he come around a-talkin' strong;
De words he uses soun's like dey was five or six feet long,
He talks so ornamental dat you has a great desire

His answer will be mos' too fine foh you to understand.
He will tell you 'bout de taxes an' de cost of what you eat

But wif all dis conversation, 'bout de mos' dat he can say

MADE IN AMERICA

The "Made in America" legend on an article would mean that the article was of superior quality; that it was made by persons who received fair wages, and it would help wonderfully in making foreign buyers change their minds about the necessity of buying foreign goods. Every man or woman who advocates the "Made in America" labelled goods is indeed a really worth while citizen. Are you doing your share in this good work?—Providence News.

MEXICO'S FUTURE

Carranza's position is stronger than Madero's was, and this fact is owing principally to the circumstance that the United States has frowned upon all other forms of government. Our right to do this may be questioned, but our power in the premises is manifest. Remembering the fate of Huerta, it will be long, we trust, before another military adventurer, posing as the true government, murders officials and plunges Mexico into chaos again. Gen. Carranza and Gen. Villa are moreover a doughty pair, full of victories and prestige, and it is to be hoped that they can and will keep order. Mexico has occupied the limelight long enough.—Woonsocket Call.

AMERICAN DYES

In establishing a course in dyemaking, the Lowell Textile school sets an example which the Fall River school should be prompt to follow. The dye situation in America is acute, and it is likely to remain so because the cutting off of the supply from Germany cannot be off-set by our own manufacturers. Granting that this is partly on account of the large numbers of United States letters patent on standard chemicals and even upon certain shades and colors, held by Germans, it is still more due to the lack of knowledge of the art in this country. The textile industry, which is the largest sufferer from the shortage, owes it to itself to make an effort to remedy this condition; and the textile schools afford the means for an immediate beginning.—Fall River News.

SEX HYGIENE

The United States commissioner of education has of late come in for considerable criticism, because of an indorsement, in his recent annual report, of sex hygiene for the public schools. This is not surprising, in view of the widespread resistance to this attempted innovation in popular education.

Many leading statesmen, educators, clergymen, and even physicians of national reputation, are on record as being uncompromising in their opposition. Ex-President Taft, in addressing the graduates of the Pierce business school of Philadelphia, held that pursuit of education in sex hygiene is full of dangers, if carried on in the general public schools.—New Bedford Times.

COSTLY CARS

And now come the automobile manufacturers with those tempting offers for 1915 models to distract us. Considerably less than $1000 will buy a good deal of car just now. The moderate priced outfit is evidently here to stay and it will appeal to the masses while the higher priced output will be left for the wealthy.—Portland Express.

HIGH RATES

It wouldn't be entirely surprising to learn that some of the Americans who grumble at increased passenger rates on the Atlantic draw their incomes from products which leaped to war prices long before the poor steamship lines had snatched a dollar. —Brockton Times.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE

"Doing Well, Thank You!" an irrepressible comedy, featuring James B. Donovan and Marie Lees, will be the topline feature at the B. F. Keith theatre, beginning today and continuing through tomorrow and Wednesday. The fact that two such chipper funmakers as Mr. Donovan, "the King of Ireland," and Marie Lee, "the little beauty," are putting forth the comedy is quite guarantee enough that it has tons of merit to it. Mr. Donovan doesn't appear in anything which isn't filled to the brim with real humor, and he is capable of inventing some funny patter and business himself. In addition he is also known as a singer and dancer of note, while little Miss Lee shines in both of these lines. It is a real, "big time" act and one which Lowell theatregoers will turn out and welcome, for Donovan is well known here and has been for a number of years. A real kangaroo, imported from his native bush in Australia will spring the second surprise of the bill. This particular jumper is a fully developed fellow, and his specialty is boxing, in fact, he is the only boxing kangaroo in existence. Gordon Brothers, who guide the fortunes of this wonderful animal, will offer an act positively unique. Both of the Gordons are boxers, and it is necessary for both of them to alternate in the ring with the pouchy-wonder, for the kangaroo strikes a terrific blow and no ordinary ring-fighter could stand up before him for any length of time. The act came to this country shortly after the outbreak of hostilities in Europe, it having toured the continent during the spring and summer months. Mr. and Mrs. Thornton Friel in the rustic comedy called "At Economy Junction" are first-raters in fun-making. Their little comedy glints with brilliant comedy, and there are many patches of real atmosphere to it. The best quartet of banjoists in the world is that made up of King, Carleton and the Clifton Sisters. They strum everything, from the rattling finale of an overture to the most tantalizing maxixe. If you want to get music that makes the feet tap incessantly, listen to this quartet.

This is the line-up of acts for the first three days of the week, and in addition to the vaudeville four special feature pictures will be shown. Never before have motion pictures been brought out so clearly as at the Keith theatre, this season, and the fact is very largely due to the use of the new Radium Gold-Fibre screen. Made of a fabric which strengthens the detail of motion pictures, and brings into instant relief all movements of the actors it really shows motion pictures at their best.

For the concluding half of the week four new vaudeville acts and four feature pictures will be shown. The front feature in vaudeville will be offered by the Hirscoff troupe of Russian dancers, singers and instrumentalists. Four men and four women make up the troupe, and they dance their wild measures and sing their Cossack songs with an abandon which is unforgettable. The Van Der Koorrs, with their "quack" illusion act, featuring Felix the mind-reading duck, will score strongly. Benton & Howard are snappy singing and talking performers, and Jeanette Childs is a dainty singing soubret. Performances begin at two, and 7 and 9 p. m. Phone 28.

THE OWL THEATRE

A strange love story in which a western hero and a heroine from picturesque far Japan are the two principals is seen in "The Wrath of the Gods," the most stupendous production ever attempted by American companies. This high-priced attraction has been secured for two days only, today and tomorrow at the Owl and performances will take place as usual, every afternoon and evening. The regular program will contain five others, among them the following: "The Bank Burglar's Fate" in two parts; "The Belle of the School," a comedy drama; a Keystone comedy, and others. To return to the feature, a program from one of Boston's most famous picture houses, announces this same feature at prices ranging from 25c. to 50c., and no other picture on the program but this one. The Owl offers this six-reel masterpiece and five other great photoplays for their well known regular price of 5c and 10c. You will wonder how the management can offer such sterling performances. They want to keep their reputation of giving the best show in this city, and will go the limit to secure worth-while productions, to gain the approval of their many friends. There is so much to be said about this grand production that the writer hesitates to start on his task. The most salient scene of this play is a volcanic eruption, so close and so realistic that it seems absolutely incredible that such things could be photographed, but the producers, William H. Clifford and Thos. H. Ince, America's most famous producers, whose work has placed them the peers of all producers, have succeeded admirably in their attempt, not without many hardships and dangers. A company of noted Japanese actors has been engaged specially for this production, and they are helped by the very best actors of all the affiliated Mutual program companies. The story deals with the love of a Japanese girl for a lad from her own land. Upon learning of a supposed curse laid upon her and her father, an old lord, he stops his attentions, and the girl revolts. She wishes for an unbeliever who could console her in her renunciation of her God, and her prayer is answered when an American sailor is washed ashore, during a terrible typhoon. He is nursed back to health by the girl and her father, and falls in love with the Japanese girl, and arranges for a marriage. Succeeding events are indescribable. The volcano has an eruption and thrill succeeds thrill.

MERRIMACK SQUARE THEATRE

The greatest of all crook plays, "Alias Jimmy Valentine" will be the offering in which the Merrimack Square Theatre Stock Co. will open a week's engagement at this pretty little playhouse this afternoon. It will be given with Sam A. Meharry as Valentine, a role in which he has played many times before and a complete surrounding cast. An unusually fine production has been built for this week and patrons may look forward to seeing something in all respects out of the ordinary. Daily matinees will be given starting at two afternoons and performances in the evening will begin at eight. Announcement is made that in the near future free photographs of each member of the company will be distributed. Prints and flags have in the past been given but never anything quite so nice or expensive has ever been distributed. Watch for announcement of the date.

THE ROYAL THEATRE

The stormy days of the French and English war in Canada will be vividly brought back to you, when you witness "Wolfe" or "The Conquest of Quebec," the marvelous five-part photo masterpiece to be shown at the Royal theatre today and tomorrow. The courage shown by both generals of the fighting fordes offer excellent material for dramatic actions, and the death of Wolfe and Montcalm in their different camps, are wonderfully acted. Montcalm's dying words, upon being told that he would not live long were these: "So much the better, I shall not live to see the surrender of Quebec," and like the brave soldier that he was, he died in a few hours, but his memory will always live with the patriotic French-Canadians. Wolfe on his side, was also stricken to death, and his last words were: "They run! Thank God, I die happy." The Kalem company is the producer of this sensational production, and the pick of their many companies has been gathered, and cast for the different leading roles. This production has no equal in realism, and photography, it has made the whole United States and Canada talk. Every scene has been photographed on the exact spot where it was actually fought, another thing that adds to the realism and beauty of this marvelous offering. And in order to give a gala performance, five other brand new photo-plays have also been booked to complete the biggest program of the week, of any theatre in the city. There will be special vocal selections, in English and French.

FOR WOMAN AND HOME

SOCIAL GOSSIP
FEMININE LORE

PRACTICAL GARMENTS WILL BE IN DEMAND FOR SCHOOL WEAR

October brightness is apt to mean also October chill, and topcoats will be needed, while now that the school doors are thrown wide, attractive aprons will be in demand. Consequently, these three little garments are especially timely. The girl's coat is a very new one with a circular flounce that has a fashionable flare at the lower edge, but, since it is cut in Japanese style, it is extremely simple to make as there are only two seams. For the 6-year size will be required 2¾ yards of material, 27 inches wide, or 2⅛ yards 44, with ⅝ yard 27 for collar and cuffs.

The boy's coat shown on the second figure is made in the raglan style that means exceeding smartness and incidentally does away with all difficulty in fitting. It includes the big pockets that are always dear to the masculine heart, and is altogether a most satisfactory garment. For the 6-year size will be required 3¼ yds. of material 27 inches wide or 1¾ yards 44, with ½ yard 21 for the collar.

The apron with long sleeves is a necessity for real protection, and the pretty little model No. 8387 is made in that way. It can, however, be finished with a round or high neck and, in case of need, with shorter sleeves. It is a very simple as well as a very practical garment, being cut all in one piece with just the underarm seams to be sewed up, which extend into the sleeves and give shape. It is closed for its entire length at the back. For the mornings at home it can be worn in place of a frock as well as over one. For the 4-year size will be required 2 yards of material 27 inches wide or 1½ yards 36, with ¾ yard 27 for the bands.

May Manton Discusses the Last Word in Style From Fashion Centres

That Paris should have been cut off from free communication with the rest of the world just at this period means, of course, that we must depend largely upon ourselves for the development of fall fashions, although advance rumors and earlier models that already have been received unquestionably will be taken as a guide. Just how far the conditions will become the opportunity for which designers on this side of the sea claim to have been waiting only the future can decide. At the moment, we have the assurance that if the materials can be obtained, velvets and satins will be exceedingly fashionable and lace will be worn in profusion, but what will take their place when the supply will, of necessity be cut short, will depend largely upon the ingenuity of the dealers and manufacturers on this side of the sea.

One enterprising firm has already opened a showing of fall costumes and these costumes arrived from Paris just in time to be received and unpacked before war was declared. That they are authentic the reputation of the firm assures and they are perhaps of double interest at this time for the reason that the unusual later models cannot be received.

As has been stated in previous letters, we are to have a great deal of embroidery of various kinds. Soutache is being employed in effective ways, heavy embroideries are being seen upon handsome street costumes as well as upon indoor gowns and there is a notable tendency toward the use of metal effects while beads of various kinds frequently are seen used in combination with silk threads.

At this writing, it seems probable that coats will vary largely in length. For the early season at least, short ones will be worn with tunics and fancy skirts as well as the redingote models which latter are really more appropriate for the colder weather.

An exceedingly handsome suit seen in the collection referred to above is of forest green broadcloth. The skirt is a somewhat unusual one, full and draped over the hips with pockets introduced in the drapery and these pockets are richly embroidered in self colored silks combined with tan colored wooden beads of about the size of a pea. There is a deep fitted belt over the yoke which gives a slight suggestion of the favorite waistcoat idea and the coat is a very short one, extending only just below the waist line where it is finished with embroidery of silk threads and beads. The lining is taffeta in one of the new shades that is neither tan nor brown and the same silk makes the big flaring collar. It is expected that green in such shades will be pronounced favorite and it assurely is beautiful in combination with the new tan.

That capes would influence the season's styles has been known for a considerable period. A second costume in the same collection is made of gabardine in the new blue that is known as Vendome and is trimmed with heavy black silk braid that takes the form of wide bands on the tunic and of binding on the coat edges. The skirt is plain, narrow, but not so narrow as have been the skirts of the summer, and the tunic is oddly shaped at the lower edge with lapped edges at the front and back allowing effective use of the braid. The coat is a short and jaunty one, terminating just at the waist line, and takes the form of a blouse at the front and a cape at the back. That it is finished with a big flaring collar becomes almost a matter of course, for such finish is almost universal upon the coats that thus far have been seen.

A third costume is made of blue gabardine with tunic skirt and long cape and all the edges are finished with inch-wide worsted fringe and from all these costumes will be seen that suggestion is not lacking however much supply may have been cut short.

In the handsome tailor-mades for afternoon visits and the like, gold and silver soutache is expected to be used. Touches of the metal effects are to be found upon some of the tailor-mades of more simple sort, such as blue gabardine and the like that are designed for many occasions and for many needs.

WHAT THE COOK SAYS

NOTE—Those who are interested in culinary matters should watch for what the Cook says in the articles to appear under this head as a feature every Monday. Don't miss them.—Editor.

Cook gave me some hints on making good bread this morning. Always buy the best flour, she says. It is the cheapest in the end, you have good bread and it goes farther. It is unnecessary to knead your dough often.

Once when you make your sponge and when you mold it in loaves for the oven is enough. Should you get dough too stiff, grease the board, but do not add more flour. It will be soft and spongy when you put it in the pans. The fresh yeast you get daily is the best.

Two cakes of yeast make four loaves of bread, or three loaves and a pan of light rolls. To make light rolls, when you make your dough into loaves for the last time save a little of same, pinch a small piece off at a time, work in some butter and sugar, place in pan and sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon.

If you want to get your money's worth when using the oven of the gas range, says Cook, arrange a combination of articles to cook at one time. When you wish to roast a small piece of meat (four or five pounds), you have room for at least two other dishes and shelf space for baking potatoes around the small roasting pan.

Dried fruit already soaked is delicious baked.

The combination when baking might be roast meat, potatoes, bread, dried prunes or apricots, or baked apples or brown betty.

Cook told me this morning that rusty irons should be heated, rubbed on a piece of beeswax tied in linen, and then with a course flannel cloth, sprinkled with household salt. This will give a polish like glass.

She said also to keep the ironing board when ironing is over, make a charming cretonne cover for it. It takes but a moment to slip the board into this, and hang it on the wall out of the way. The cover keeps the board clean, and looks very neat and nice.

Cook says to preserve meat boil together one quart good vinegar, two ounces of salt, two ounces of sugar; when cold wash the meat over with this mixture.

Tough meat, she says can be made tender if placed in vinegar water a few minutes.

"When boiling fowls or fish," she remarked, "add to the water in which they are to be boiled the juice of half a lemon. This will make them beautifully white."

"Fish may be scaled much easier by first dipping them into boiling water for a minute," she says.

A beautiful smell in the kitchen this morning made me curious. Cook said it was from a little pan of cloves which had been sprinkled with a few drops of spirits of lavender.

Put a few bits of charcoal into the bottom of the pan. If the charcoal is not convenient some bits of orange peel will do, as they soon turn into charcoal. Sprinkle the cloves liberally on these and when wanted to perfume the house place on the stove until they begin to smoke.

The fumes will soon penetrate the house, and is very much like the odor of carnation. It will effectively cover the cooking odors, as of fish, cabbage, turnips and the like.

WHAT HORTENSE TOLD ME

NOTE—The Hortense articles to appear in The Sun every Monday will give valuable hints on cosmetics and hygiene, taking up some feature of importance and offering the most scientific advice.—Editor.

Hortense told me a very clever way to perfume the handkerchiefs and muslin underwear.

"On washing days," she said. "I supply the washerwoman with a good sized piece of orris root, and she throws it into the water where my handkerchiefs are boiling. When they come up from ironing they are as redolent of orris as can be.

"Then I slip them between the folds of a sachet filled with violet powder and they never lose their fragrance. Violet and orris scent together make a real violet odor."

I had been worried for sometime about my eyes aching frightfully and Hortense advised me very wisely.

"Never forget to rest the eyes occasionally during the day, as it is unwise to try them to their limit," she said.

"Stop before your eyeballs ache, and, closing your eyes, rest quietly for five or ten minutes if this much time can be spared; if not, a two or three minute rest for the eyes will do much for them.

"Don't wear dotted veils, as they are deadly enemies to the beauty and health of one's orbs. It is impossible for the eyes to keep well if they are constantly being strained to avoid this dot and that."

The teeth should be cleaned at least twice a day with a suitable brush and dentifrice, paste or powder," advises Hortense.

Particles of food should not be allowed to cling to the teeth or gums or remain in the mouth after a meal. Always rinse the mouth thoroughly and remove particles of food on or between the teeth with a brush or dental floss.

In brushing the teeth do not confine the motion to up and down or straight across movements. The brush should be given a rotary or circular motion, cleansing the gums as well as the teeth, and removing any tarter that may have collected at their base. A lime water solution is helpful in rinsing the mouth.

Hortense advises that hands and lips which crack easily when exposed to the cold can be kept in the best of condition if annointed nightly with a lotion made of equal parts of glycerine and lemon juice.

This is a simple remedy but a very effective one. Some prefer glycerine, rosewater and benzoin and for dry skins it is a little better than the glycerine and lemon juice.

Camphor ice is also good for chapped lips and hands. You must take care to dry the hands thoroughly after washing them and not to wet the lips when in the open air.

Hortense says to thicken thin eye brows anoint the eyelid edges with warm seasame oil. Do not get the oil into the eyes.

The eyebrows can also be massaged with yellow vaseline for five minutes every evening. Always massage with the fall of the hair, not against it.

So much can be said about sleep. I have a habit of remaining up quite late every night to read and Hortense says:

"It does not matter what time you go to bed so long as you have a regular hour and stick to it. The old saying that an hour of sleep before midnight is worth two after is not true, but it has this much truth in it.

"That the early hours of sleep are worth more than the later. The man who remains healthy goes to bed about the same hour every night, and it makes little difference whether this hour be 9 p. m. or 3 a. m."

SEASON OF BEAUTY

MORE GRACEFUL COSTUMES ARE COMING INTO VOGUE—OSTRICH MUFFS AND BOAS WILL BE WORN

We are entering a season that promises real beauty. Let us hope that no unfortunate travesties will mar the effect. Manufacturers are being made happy by the use of a greater quantity of material. Costumes are infinitely more graceful because of that added width and there is just the tendency toward a natural figure that should lead to the best possible results.

As must be the case when velvet is to be much worn, all velvet-finished fabrics also will be smart and there is promised a new wool velours and a new duvetyn of exceptional beauty. Dark, rich shades are to be the favorite ones for street wear. Unquestionably black will be extensively worn and such colors as tete de negre, chestnut brown, taupe, rich greens and purples will be seen. For the fancy street costumes, jet buttons are fashionable and jet trimmings will make a rather important feature of indoor dress both for afternoon and evening occasions. Blues are fashionable and some of the new dark blues are exceedingly rich and beautiful in color. There is a rich wine color that is particularly successful in the soft satins and in moire, whether in velours or bengaline. For the early season, a great deal of ostrich trimming will be worn as well as ostrich boas and ostrich muffs. Since ostrich in these days is treated in numberless ways and made up into little edges as well as bands, it is easy to utilize the feather idea in a variety of ways. In a word, fall fashions are interesting and varied.

NOW IT'S BUTTONS

NEW BASQUES DIRECT FEMININE THOUGHT BUTTON-WARD—JEWELED EFFECTS THE MODE

Since all the basques are closed at the front with buttons and buttonholes, buttons of necessity become important. For costumes of this sort, they are apt to be made for the special costume, of the material braided or embroidered or enriched in some way, or are chosen from the ready-made buttons with extreme care for the effect. For afternoon and evening basques, the most wonderful buttons are used, often for the most elaborate ones, genuine jewels are set for the purpose, while dealers are showing jeweled effects that are really wonderful in their beauty and color and that combine most satisfactorily with the metal embroideries, the silver and gold tissues and the like that are so generally talked.

MONEY FOR SOLDIERS' FAMILIES

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—The city council of Hanover has decided to set aside as the first appropriation the sum of three million marks for the support of the families of soldiers now in the field. Every married woman will receive a monthly allowance of thirty marks, which sum is to be proportionately increased for each child.

SLEEVES AND FLARING COLLARS MAKE INTERESTING FEATURES

No matter what the season, new blouses are of interest. They are necessities for wear with coat suits and they are entirely satisfactory for many other occasions. Here are three excellent ones. The one at the extreme left is of striped material and combines full fronts and full back with the raglan sleeves that are so much liked and so generally becoming. The high, flaring collar can be made either of the same or of a contrasting material, but in this instance it and the cuffs are made of white. The blouse itself is made of striped tub silk. For the medium size will be required 4 yards of material 27 inches wide, 2 ⅝ yards 36, or 2⅛ yards 44, with 3-4 yard 27 for collar and cuffs.

The blouse at the center No. 8379, is a perfectly plain one with set in sleeves and a rolling collar. It is especially desirable for washable satins, for taffeta and similar silks, and also for the linens, soft-finished piques and the like that make ideal waists for autumn and winter wear. For the medium size will be required 3 3-4 yards of material 27 inches wide, 2 3-4 yards 36, or 2 yards 44.

The vest effect and the roll-over collar make important features of the third blouse. Like the first one, it is made with raglan sleeves, but the little vest and the collar are quite individual and the rolled-over cuffs exceedingly becoming. As shown here it is made of washable silk, dotted for the main portion and plain for the vestee, collar and cuffs. The lace banding may be of any preferred sort, for every kind of lace is to be worn.

CARING FOR WOUNDED OF WAR

By JOHN J. BREEN.

THE civilized world is turning its attention to the tremendous humane task of caring for the wounded in the awe inspiring war which is sweeping Europe. Immediately that the war became a stern reality there came from all parts of the globe tenders of assistance in the caring of the wounded on the fields of battle. The offers were not limited. They were spontaneous. There never was a situation that so taxed the resources of charity and philanthropy.

Historic castles, universities, country mansions and luxurious yachts were turned into hospitals, convalescent homes and Red Cross depots. Men and women of noble birth vied with each other in caring for the sick and wounded. The authorities in the stricken countries were overwhelmed with offers, and the owners of fine mansions provided full equipment for their maintenance.

The first batch of wounded in the war came into Brussels, which turned into vast hospitals the hotels, private houses and public institutions, placing them at the disposal of the Red Cross society. The wounded soldiers came from Liège. Vast crowds, with bared heads bowed in silence, watched the stretchers with their human burdens enter the stations of the Red Cross society. Save for occasional murmurs the onlookers were silent, but now and then an audible sob from some woman broke the silence.

At the head of the French Red Cross in Brussels is an Englishwoman, Millicent, duchess of Sutherland. Explaining how she came to go to Brussels she said: "I was in Paris and offered my services to the Secours des Blessés a few days after an urgent message asking for help was received from Brussels. Throughout the journey of eleven hours to Brussels I was received with the most amazing kindness. The people wept when they saw the little red cross on my arm. I confess I broke down myself."

Duke Gives Up Mansion.

The Duke of Devonshire has lent Devonshire House, his famous old mansion in Piccadilly, for the headquarters of the British Red Cross society. The great hall is filled with tables, desks and inquiry counters, and an aristocratic staff is working on the plans of organization. The reception room in the mansion is a vast workshop in which Queen Mother Amelie of Portugal, Princess Christian and many titled women are engaged daily in office work.

The dining room of Marlborough House, the town residence of Queen Alexandra, has been converted into a workroom, where well known society women under Princess Victoria cut out garments for soldiers and sailors. Princess Marie Louise has equipped her clubhouse for factory girls as a hospital. Ex-Empress Eugenie has given $1,000 to the Red Cross and also fitted up a wing in her house at Farnborough for the reception of wounded officers. The Duke of Sutherland has offered Dunrobin castle, the family's ancient seat in the Scottish highlands, for hospital purposes. The Duke of Norfolk fitted out fifty beds in Arundel castle, Sussex. Mortimer Singer offered his new mansion in Berkshire as a convalescent home. It is equipped for 200 patients, and Mr. Singer will defray all the cost of its maintenance.

Rodman Wanamaker, who gave the silver altar, costing $40,000, to the church at Sandringham in memory of King Edward, has placed his extensive premises in Pall Mall and the entire staff at the disposal of the Red Cross.

The Archbishop of Canterbury offered Lambeth palace, the picturesque London residence of English primates, as a hospital, and Cardinal Bourne tendered a large and fully equipped hospital at Willesden.

The other offers include Lord Londonderry's Fynford park as an emergency hospital, with fifty beds; Lord Curzon's Broadstairs mansion as a convalescent home for officers; Lady Samuel's mansion in London as a hospital, with fifty beds; Lord Shaftesbury's country residence as a convalescent home, and William Waldorf Astor's splendid seat, Cliveden, as a convalescent home.

How Red Cross Was Formed.

Surgery and medicine did not come into use on the battlefield before the last decade of the eighteenth century. Before that time wounded soldiers were either carried to the rear by their comrades or left unattended to and exposed until the fighting was over. Surgical assistance did not reach the battlefield until the day after the engagement or even later, and for many of the wounded it was then too late.

In 1792 Baron Dominique Jean Larrey of the French army introduced his system of "ambulances volantes," or flying field hospitals, capable of moving rapidly from place to place. They gave primary surgical treatment and removed the wounded quickly from the field. Napoleon warmly supported Larrey, and the system was soon brought to a high state of efficiency in the Grand Army.

The founder of the Red Cross society was Jean Henri Dunant, a philanthropic citizen of Geneva, Switzerland. On June 14, 1859, he chanced to be present at the battle of Solferino and was an eyewitness to the vast amount of unnecessary suffering that resulted from the inability of the regular surgical corps to care for the thousands of wounded who lay upon the field. Three years later he published a book vividly describing the horrors of war and proposing the formation of volunteer societies to supplement the military surgical corps.

After the publication of his book an agitation began which resulted in calling an international conference at Geneva in 1863. In October of that year the Geneva convention was signed which neutralized the surgical corps of hostile armies and volunteer societies caring for the wounded. The Geneva flag (the red cross) was adopted as the symbol for the International Red Cross society. Geneva has been since that time the headquarters of the International Red Cross society, and numerous international conventions have been held there.

Big Advance in Surgery.

In the American civil war eight soldiers died of disease to one from wounds. Experts expect that in the present general European struggle not more than three will fall victim to sickness to one killed on the field of battle.

Such is the advance of army sanitation and army surgery in fifty years. The Americans and the Japanese have been the leaders. The United States army hospitals have installed many remarkable innovations since the Spanish-American war, with its dreadful lesson in the danger of typhoid, and these new ideas have been adopted by the army surgeon of old world powers.

So it is expected that the present war, the greatest yet in history, also will be the most humane. There will be no disproportionate mortality list from disease and no army of cripples as an aftermath.

The modern high power, quick firing military rifle and the development in artillery will have much to do with the change. Those who die will die more quickly. Gangrene and infection will be practically unknown quantities, it is thought.

Before the Russo-Japanese conflict the armies of the world over used a high caliber bullet, made of unsheathed lead and greased to overcome friction in the barrel. The muzzle velocity was less than half that of the missiles now employed.

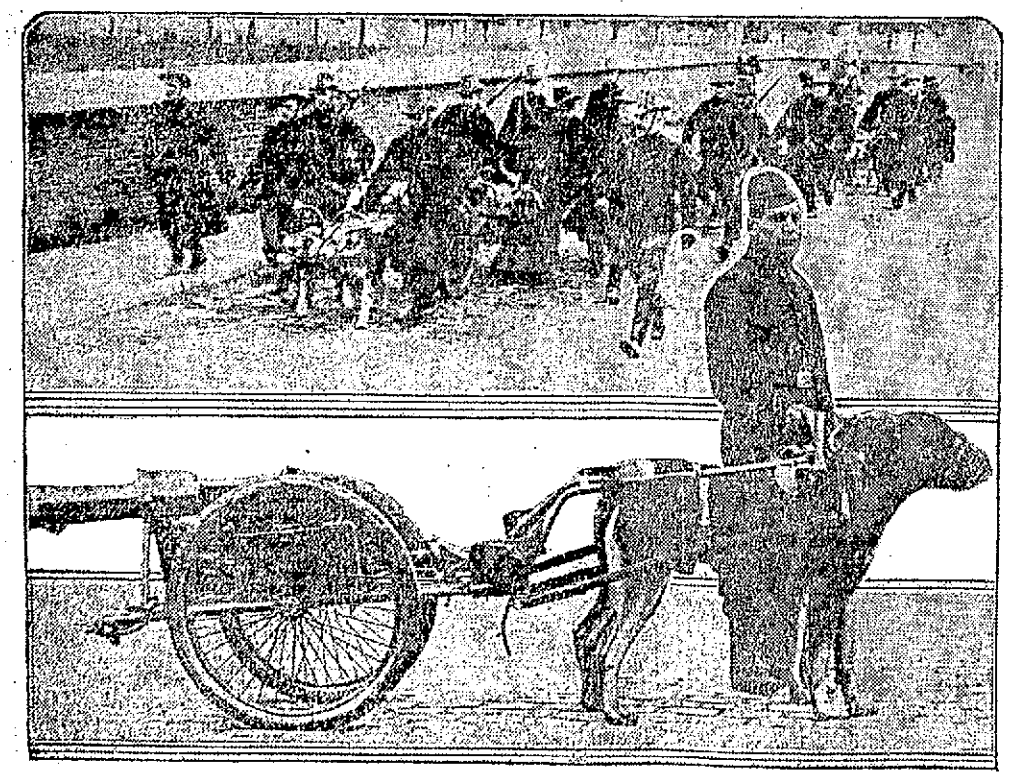
Then, too, bayonet and saber charges were more common. These resulted in hideous wounds, very difficult for surgeons to handle.

The bullets which are flying in Europe today are of less diameter than the ordinary lead pencil. They are jacketed with nickel, lead or steel and have tremendous velocity.

The soft, mushrooming bullet of the old days resulted in the shattering of bones and the crushing, rather than cutting, of tissues. Infection was almost inevitable, the grease being especially insanitary. A wound in the abdomen was considered necessarily fatal. The death rate among the wounded was enormous.

In recent campaigns there are instances where soldiers shot in what were once considered vital spots have walked unsupported to the field hospitals.

BELGIAN WAR DOGS FINE SPECIMENS



Photos by American Press Association.

Belgian Dogs of War.

WHEN the history of the European war is written it will not be complete without the part played by the war dogs of Belgium, for the dog is used as a worker in Belgium, and he is part and parcel of the day's toil, whether it be in the piping times of peace or amid the ghastly surroundings of war. There are the draft dogs of the milk and vegetable sellers and the dogs used by the military for the purpose of pulling light machine guns and appliances associated with the army medical corps.

The draft dog of Belgium is a fine and husky fellow. He is an offshoot of the Danish dog, his strength is considerable, and his pace is good. He is firm on his feet, and his pads are so hard, tough and tried that he is free from foot weariness, and when there is no work doing he lies down in his harness between the shafts of the two wheel cart and dozes off with his big and sensible head between his forefeet. Awake he either barks his greetings to a passing friend or greets an old enemy with a savage salute. The dogs, however, are usually quiet, and it would seem that they enjoy thoroughly the work they have to do.

Thus it is that much as the dog lover in some other countries hates to make his dog a beast of burden, he cannot help admiring the working dogs of Brussels and other continental cities, where, to all appearances, they so thoroughly like their work. As the well regulated trains speed their way along the tracks the teams of dogs hauling their loads of garden produce or milk on the road alongside of the railway are not the least interesting sights of the grand tour.

All the big trek dogs of the Belgians are under capital command, and especially is this the case among the soldiers' dogs. There is discipline in the kennel as there is within the barracks, and the dogs, big, apparently savage and surly animals, are, when in charge of the men, as orderly as a pack of well mannered foxhounds.

If the weather be bad and the roads slippery the foot of the dog has all the advantage over that of the hoofed animal. It is true that the foot often suffers, but the owners are careful of their dogs, and a bath of salt water and a dressing of resin ointment will go a long way to heal up a clean sore in four and twenty hours.

The dog market in Brussels on Sunday mornings is an attractive place, held, as it is, in the Hotel de Ville square. It is here that a dog and cart turnout can be purchased, and there is both new and old harness from which to choose. The would be buyer can give a dog a trial between the shafts of the cart and put the weight behind the dog that the seller claims the animal can draw. The business man goes to the market or auction to buy a dog and cart, just as the New Yorker visits the horse salesman or the automobile truck seller. The dog is one of the cogs of the wheel of industry, and with the venders of dairy and truck farm produce in the cities and towns no animals would be more missed than the draft dogs.

It is a common custom among dog owners of the continent of Europe to cut and mutilate the ears of their dogs. As there appears to be no law against this useless and cruel practice it is not uncommon to see dogs on the open market which are offered for sale with their ears yet raw and sore after a shiftless operation of cropping. They still bleed, and no one thinks of taking notice. No reason has been given for cropping. Even were the cartilage of the ears removed as a preventive, that would be a mistake, since the orifice of the ear being left exposed, the strong and long fangs of the Belgian draft dog could do great injury in fighting bouts to the underdog.

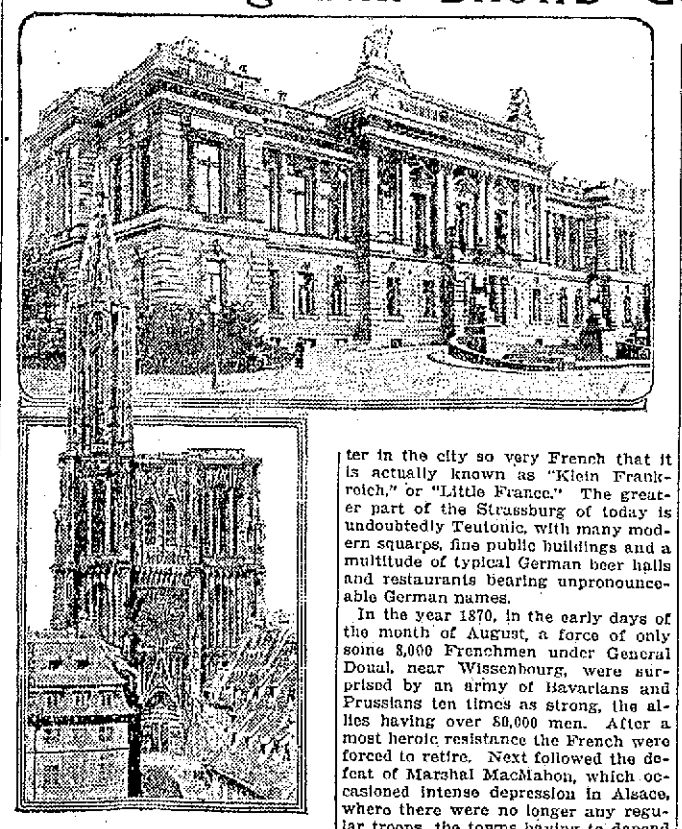
Strassburg Still Shows German Origin



Photos by American Press Association.

Government Building of Strassburg (Upper) and Cathedral.

STRASSBURG, the seat of the administrative government of Alsace-Lorraine, which at the outbreak of the war was one of the objective points of the French invaders, after a foreign domination for almost two centuries, still shows plainly its German origin in many respects, although there is a charming old quarter in the city so very French that it is actually known as "Klein Frankreich," or "Little France." The greater part of the Strassburg of today is undoubtedly Teutonic, with many modern squares, fine public buildings and a multitude of typical German beer halls and restaurants bearing unpronounceable German names.

In the year 1870, in the early days of the month of August, a force of only some 8,000 Frenchmen under General Douai, near Wissenbourg, were surprised by an army of Bavarians and Prussians ten times as strong, the allies having over 80,000 men. After a most heroic resistance the French were forced to retire. Next followed the defeat of Marshal MacMahon, which occasioned intense depression in Alsace, where there were no longer any regular troops, the towns having to depend for their defense upon the shattered remnants of the different regiments and on the "gardes mobile," formed of old men and young boys who had been hastily mustered in and who were mostly not only ignorant of even the rudiments of the art of war, but were badly armed and poorly clothed.

After the defeat of MacMahon the victorious Germans spread out over the whole department of the lower Rhine and invested Strassburg. Completely overwhelmed by the number of her foes and at the mercy of the Germans' powerful artillery, on the 28th of September, after a siege of seven weeks and a constant terrific bombardment, Strassburg was forced to surrender. Shortly after subjugating Strassburg both Schlestadt and Brisach were invested and Muelhausen occupied by 10,000 of the victorious Germans.

When the news became known that the city of Strassburg and all of the rest of Alsace-Lorraine were to be ceded by France—a ransom demanded by Germany, besides the enormous financial indemnity the vanquished country must pay—the grief, rage and despair of the province, and, in fact, of all France, may well be imagined. The Alsatians and the residents in Lorraine joined in sending a protest to the assembly of Bordeaux before the treaty of Frankfort was signed, in which they made a stirring appeal for justice.

It says: "We, by these presents, proclaim as forever inviolable the right of the people of Alsace-Lorraine to remain members of the French nation, and we swear on our part, our constituents, their children and their descendants, to continue to lay claim to it forever and by every means in our power in the face of all usurpers. We are Frenchmen, and we wish to remain Frenchmen."

For more than forty-four years now Alsace-Lorraine has been the German imperial territory of Elsass-Lothringen. After the great siege the city was almost in ruins. Not until just a few years ago have the last vestiges of the awful havoc wrought by the bombardment in 1871 been entirely removed from the city which suffered so severely from the enemy's projectiles, but great as were the gaping holes made in their homes, the wounds to their pride were greater still, and today they are still open, still bleeding and unhealed.

Strassburg, situated on the Ill, is divided into three sections, of which the central island is not only the largest, but the most important. The city is all of two miles from the Rhine, with which it is connected by the Rhone-Marne canal, which joins the river Ill above the town and connects with the Rhine-Rhone canal outside of the eastern fortifications.

SLEEPYTIME TALES

BY VIRGINIA VALE

FOR LITTLE READERS OF THE SUN

"The Chicken With the Brass Ring"

NOTE—The Sleepy Time Tales, as the name implies, are planned to interest children when nothing else will. They will appear daily in The Sun. Watch for them.—Editor.

Once upon a time a great many little chickens were eating their breakfasts from bits of bread that were near the steps of the kitchen. Cook looked out and saw them and said: "The poor things. They look hungry."

So she shook the tablecloth which had some scraps in it out the door at their feet. Madly they rushed for the pieces and one fluffy brown chick found for his portion a small brass ring which had rolled down with the crumbs.

As he pecked at it to see what it was the ring flew up in the air and over the chicken's head much to his surprise.

"Look! Look!" he said. "See what I have on my neck!"

The rest of the chicks crowded around and all looked at him in wonder, and thought how great he was. This pleased him so much that all that day and the next he went around holding his head very high in the air.

As the days passed he grew very fat, for all of the others would step aside when he came up to eat, and he would eat as much as he could stuff. Then he would walk away with him head in the air and the brass ring shining in the sun.

When he was a few months old the man who owned all of the chickens came into the yard to look them over. When he saw the one with the brass ring around his neck he said: "Ah, that is a fine fat young broiler. How did he get so much fatter than the others? That one will make me a fine breakfast."

That night the chicken with the ring around his neck was taken away from his friends and they never saw him again. Even to this day, if you go to his old home you will find some of the chickens telling their chicks about the chicken with the brass ring.

JONATHAN BERRY DEAD

FORMER STATE SENATOR AND BUSINESS LEADER OF NORTH BARRINGTON, N. H.

ROCHESTER, N. H., Sept. 21.—Ex-State Senator Jonathan Berry died early yesterday at his home in North Barrington, aged 88 years. He was born in North Barrington and educated in the district school and Pittsfield Academy. For 51 years he has been extensively engaged in the lumber business and owned a large lumber and grist mill at North Barrington, also tilling one of the largest and best farms in this vicinity. He had amassed a substantial fortune.

He served as state senator in 1886-7, being elected by the democrats in a republican district. He had served as selectman and filled other town offices. He was a regular attendant at the Free Baptist church, Strafford Corners.

He leaves a wife, a son, Flavius J. of North Barrington, and two daughters, Mrs. Meta Stevens and Mrs. Bessie Longley, both of Boston. The funeral will be held at the residence Tuesday.

IS SLEEP AN ILLUSION?

Statement That Man Does not Require Slumber—Invisible Prompter Tires of Performing

Gabriel d' Annundio as a believer in the occult and a student of a physical phenomena is the new role wherein the poet is about to reveal himself to Paris in a book entitled "Asperity of the Unknown."

After many months of investigation, during which he has attended with leading scientists of the day numerous seances, at which the services of the best known mediums were invoked, d'Annunzio has arrived at the conclusion that man does not like an undivided individual life. Always by his side, he insists, is his double, magic being, working out for him and prompting all actions.

"Man himself," the poet asserts, "does not require sleep, which is only an illusion. It is his invisible prompter that tires of performing for him those every-day actions which man attributes to his own personality.

"When man's mysterious partner requires rest, all he does is to remove form the mundane body something essential to man's wakefulness, whereupon sleep supervenes.

"The process is like that of the mechanic who, wishing to damage a piece of machinery, removes an essential part. Exactly what man's magic aid removes in order to send him to sleep I do not know, but I am convinced we shall discover in time."—Philadelphia Public Leader.

PROF. HORRIGAN DEAD

NATIVE OF PEABODY PASSES AWAY AT SYDNEY, N. S., WHERE HE WAS ON COLLEGE FACULTY

PEABODY, Sept. 21.—Prof. Thomas F. Horrigan died suddenly at Sydney, N. S. Saturday. He was born in Peabody 49 years ago, graduated from the public schools and from Holy Cross college, class of 1884.

He was professor of languages at Antigonish college at Sydney, N. S. He was a member of Knights of Columbus and A. O. H. in that city. He leaves three sisters, Mrs. Nellie M. Sullivan of Peabody, Miss Norah Horrigan and Sister Julia Aloisa, Notre Dame college of Providence; two brothers, David J. and Richard F., both of Peabody. The body will arrive here Tuesday.

DEFENSELESS MAN

A woman writes to a Manhattan newspaper denouncing men. This time it is for the women's hats. According to this writer, men set the styles and design and manufacture the hats, and women are "at their mercy."

There seems to be some refuge. Man devised all the things women want, and he also is responsible for all the things they don't want. Man invented the ballot, the Welsh rabbit, public office at public expense, university degrees, the woman's page, public oratory and the monocle. All, all have been wrested from him. He also invented the sensible shoe, and at any cost he is to be made to see he cannot retain the monopoly.

But there is the other side of the picture. It seems he invents the millinery. As it is well known he also invented the high cost of living, staying out after 11 p. m. (if he can get away with it), baldness and the science of grumbling at the way the steak is cooked, there is a damning catalogue of offenses to his credit.

Who can say a good word for man? It counts for nothing that he invented the four-in-hand tie and bar examinations, for it has taken the whole force of a movement to make them available to the protesting sex. And in revenge for the breaking of this age-long privilege, he glowers in a corner and invents women's hats.

Let him be exposed in all his machinations. Perhaps he invented the hatpin, too.—Brooklyn Standard Union

HOUSE AND BARNS BURN

Battis Hayes and J. Gibberson of Concord, N. H., Suffer a Total Loss of About $2500

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 21—The barn of Battis Hayes and the house and barn of J. Gibberson on Sugar Hill in the Plains District were destoryed by fire yesterday afternoon. The fire caught in the Gibberson barn, from which it spread to the Gibberson cottage and Hayes barn.

The Hayes cottage was saved by the timely arrival of apparatus from the city proper. The losses will approximate $2500; partially insured.

CALL FOR RIVERMEN

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—In order to meet the scarcity of experienced men for river and canal traffic, the military authorities have ordered that all rivermen belonging to the Landsturm need not enlist, and a call has been made for old rivermen, who have entered other trades, to return immediately to river work.

It is pointed out that it is of vital importance to keep commerce on the inland water routes going, for the transportation of foodstuffs, fuel and other necessities, and the authorities are doing their utmost to maintain this service. The only thing lacking, it is said, is the experienced river man, so many of whom have gone to war. So far as ships and other shipping facilities go, it is declared, there is no handicap.

BIGGEST BATTLE OF WAR STILL UNDECIDED

FRENCH SEABORNE TRADE UNFETTERED

An Official Communication From Bordeaux Reviews Work of Fleet Since Outbreak of Hostilities—Army and Navy Cooperate

BORDEAUX, Sept. 21.—An official communication addressed to the navy and reviewing the work of the fleet since the outbreak of hostilities says:

"The navy was called upon to cover the return of troops to France from Africa, which was done satisfactorily.

"Assisted by the British forces in the channel and the North sea, the command of the sea was attained from the first day the war broke out. The French and British fleets also assured the security of the Mediterranean after the flight of the Goeben and the Breslau and the enemy has not appeared again. The German fleet did not leave its base. Nevertheless, the British fleet was able to fight a naval battle off Helogland, from which it emerged victorious. It is impossible to know whether the enemy's fleet will end by accepting the challenge but meanwhile the allied squadrons are mistresses of the sea and are blockading the German and Austrian coasts forcing the enemy to live almost exclusively on themselves and reckon only on their own resources. This is certain assurance of ultimate success for us if the war is prolonged."

The communication proceeds to show that French seaborne trade continues to enjoy full liberty of movement and concludes by emphasizing the manner in which the navy and the army have co-operated for the defense of the country.

Hon. John J. McManmon

FOR SENATOR

From the eighth district, is well known to the citizens of Lowell as a vote getter in the past. For two years he represented Lowell in the house of representatives and did such capable work in the interest of his constituents that he was given the nomination for senator from the eighth district which, though then strongly republican, he succeeded in turning over to the ranks of democracy. In the senate he was given membership on the committees on public health and agriculture and did excellent service on both. He is entitled to a good share of the credit of pushing along the work on the three new infirmaries for the care and treatment of tuberculosis. Also for better sanitary regulations in the factories and workshops.

Ex-Senator McManmon was defeated for his second term to which he was justly entitled because of the divisions and general democratic discontent created that year by the Springfield democratic convention. Mr. McManmon has many friends in the republican and progressive parties who would like to see him again nominated and if given the nomination with a united democracy at his back, he will be sure to make a lively and successful fight for election.

VICTIM OF BURNS

Little Lillian A. Belanger Passed Away Today at Lowell Hospital

Lillian A. Belanger, aged 4 years, 7 months and 25 days, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Albert Belanger of 7 Henry avenue, died this morning at the Lowell hospital, the result of burns received late Saturday afternoon.

As published in the late edition of The Sun Saturday afternoon, the little girl found matches and ignited them while her mother was shopping in the city. Her clothes caught fire and soon the little one was a mass of flames. Her little sister managed to extinguish the flames but not before the child had received fatal burns about the body and face. The ambulance was summoned and the little girl was removed to the Lowell hospital, where despite the best of medical attendance she passed away at 3 o'clock this morning. The body was this forenoon viewed by Medical Examiner J. V. Meigs and later removed to the home of the parents.

MUST USE SOFT PEDAL

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—"Rag" with the soft pedal on is the newest rule at the Back Bay telephone exchange on Belvidere street. No more may the girls at midnight gambol to the raucous strains of "Oh, My Love," played fortissimo, and all because the remainder of Belvidere street wish to sleep o'nights.

The girls on the night shift at the exchange have been having a heavenly time in the wee small hours with their songs and piano playing, but the residents have declared that it is as otherwise than heavenly as is war. They have protested collectively and individually and many have packed their tents and fled.

Landlords who discovered that the proximity of the exchange meant a proportionate absence of tenants finally appealed to the telephonic powers, with the result that the girls are allowed to play the piano with the soft pedal on, but that on sufferance, and if any more complaints are heard the piano is closed forevermore after the day shift has left the office.

GREAT ARTILLERY DUELS ARE BEING CARRIED ON

PARIS, Sept. 21.—There is little change in the situation in the great battle of the Aisne, according to the latest official announcements. The extreme left of the allies continues to bear the brunt of the fighting and one time Saturday or Sunday—the official reports do not bring out the time clearly—the Germans in a furious counter attack gained some ground which, however, was speedily regained by the allies.

Elsewhere along the big battle front the successes of one side have been counter-balanced by forward movements of the other but military experts here claim the allies have bettered their position so far as it affects the continuation of that struggle since they have reached and entrenched themselves on high ground.

The best opinion here, however, inclines to the belief that the frontal attacks of forces, both apparently of equal strength, will continue for some time yet without result unless something unforeseen happens.

The havoc wrought in the famous cathedral of Rheims by the German guns, as told in official and other despatches from the front, is the subject of bitter comment here. It is stated that the French government will lodge a protest with all the powers regarding the bombardment of the cathedral which unofficial despatches say was sheltering several hundred German wounded and flying a Red Cross flag.

Tension is Frightful

Copies of letters said to have been found on German prisoners continue to be made public here. One credited to a Brunswick non-commissioned officer reads:

"Our life is not a gay one. For nine days we have camped in water and we are living on beets and sugar. Bread is a luxury. The tension is frightful and our losses are enormous. There is not a single officer left in my company, which has been reduced from 250 to 60 men."

Other letters of a similar tenor are given out and wonder is expressed at how men living on raw vegetables have still the courage to fight with such desperation, especially under the most trying weather conditions.

LETTER FROM AUSTRIA

LOWELL MAN RECEIVES ACCOUNT OF RAVAGES OF WAR NEAR PRAGUE IN AUSTRIA

Frank Holecek, of 21 Fourth street, employed as a printer in the Merrimack Manufacturing company has received a letter from relatives in Prague, Austria, describing the hardships caused to families in that country by the European war. The letter which was posted in Austria five weeks before it was received here, states that all the flour, sugar, etc. in the homes of the non combatants were seized by the military authorities. These were placed in storage houses for the use of the army in the future. Mr. Holecek states that only cows were left on the farms and at the time the letter was written, it was feared that they would be seized. All men between 20 and 37 had been called out to fight in the Austrian army and it was believed that the age limit would be increased to 45.

LOOKING THROUGH SHATTERED GATE OF TERMONDE AT RUINED CITY WITHIN

A. F. OF L. PRESIDENT AGAINST STATE BOARD

Would Appoint Single Commissioner Who Should be Bona fide Labor Man—Annual Convention Opened in Boston Today

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—The affiliation of 62 additional labor bodies, representing more than 10,000 members during the past year was reported at the opening session of the four days' annual convention of the state branch, American Federation of Labor today. President Edward S. Alden in his annual report advocated the abolition of the state board of labor and industries and the substitution of a single labor commissioner who should be a bona fide labor man.

In commenting on the labor measures considered by the last legislature, the president's report said:

There were several men in the last legislature, holding membership in unions, that proved faithless to their obligation to do all in their power to improve the condition of the toiler.

FRED H. STUDLEY

BOSTON, April 21.—Fred H Studley, 38, married, of 507 East 6th street, South Boston, was found dead in the engine room of the steamer Loretta at the Public landing, City Point, So. Boston, at 9.20 yesterday morning. Although it is believed that death was due to a fall down the ladder, there are mysterious circumstances connected with it that bother the friends of the dead man.

Studley was an engineer and up to two years ago was employed by Capt. Frank Gethro, proprietor of the boats at the Public landing, including the Loretta. His last employment, it is said, was with the George Lawley company, at Neponset. He was well known about the City Point district. It is said that of late he has been about boats most of the time.

Capt Ed Junkins and Engineer Geo. Kaulback of the Loretta were getting the boat ready for a big party of members of the South Boston Yacht club that enjoyed an outing at Peddocks yesterday. Junkins and Kaulback boarded the Loretta. Kaulbach went to the hatchway, which is on the main deck directly in front of the pilothouse. He says that he had to push back the hasp on the side of the hatchway before opening it. This part of the hasp has been broken several days and consequently the hatchway was not locked.

When he threw back the cover and prepared to step in, he was horrified to see at the foot of the iron ladder the body of Studley. The feet were away from the foot of the ladder, the right knee drawn up and the head was thrown backward and rested on several life preservers.

Capt. Gethro notified the police and soon Medical Examiner McGrath arrived and ordered the body removed to the North Grove street morgue. From his casual observation of the body he said that Studley had been dead but a short time.

From the story of several persons about City Point who know Studley quite well, the police are satisfied that he was under the influence of liquor late Saturday night. He was refused admission to one of the yacht clubs and went his way, only to be taken in charge shortly afterward by Harold Peacock and James McCorry, two well known young men of the Point district. They say that Studley was in a dazed condition and did not seem to know where to go. They brought him to the Public landing and placed him in the forward cabin on a settee and resting on several life preservers. That was at 11.45 Saturday night, they say.

The friends of Studley and the police are unable to account for his getting into the engine room below the deck and reached only by an iron ladder containing 10 rounds. It is possible, and thought quite likely by the police, that after sleeping a couple of hours in the forward cabin, Studley may have felt the cold, and wanting to get under cover, started for the engine room. The iron ladder is quite steep and difficult, under ordinary conditions, to get down. A man even slightly under the influence of liquor would have great difficulty in making his way down.

The police are of the belief that The police are of the belief that death was accidental, although unable to account for the hasp being closed on the hatchway. It would be almost an impossibility for anyone to go below against their will, as the opening is only large enough for a body to crowd through.

MEETING OF WARREN CLUB

The members of the Warren club held their regular weekly meeting yesterday morning in the club rooms in Middlesex street. President John H. Farrell occupied the chair and called the meeting to order promptly at 11 o'clock. A grist of important business was transacted and reports of committees read and accepted. A committee of two, Frank Finnerty and Fred Smith, was appointed to arrange for an exhibition at the coming dance and were instructed to engage two prominent dancers. Secretary Edward Barrington's report showed the club in a flourishing condition and everything going along nicely. After the meeting dinner was served and the afternoon was spent enjoyably in a musicale at which many of the friends of the members were present.

NEWS FROM CITY HALL

There will be no meeting of the municipal council tomorrow morning on account of the state primaries, but instead all business will be transacted Wednesday morning.

The ballot is a rather large one, but a very easy one to count, for the contests for the various offices are not very numerous. It will require two folds to go over the ballot, which means that the ballot will be placed on the counting block twice.

CRIMINAL COURT SESSION

JURY IN BRASSARD CASE REPORTED A DISAGREEMENT THIS MORNING

When superior court reconvened this morning the jury in the case of Rose Brassard, charged with keeping a house of ill fame in Hanover street, reported that they were unable to reach an agreement. They were out from 12 o'clock Friday noon until after midnight. The defendant was held in $1000 bonds for the December sitting.

The facts surrounding a row which occurred in Framingham on the afternoon of July 5th, were heard by Judge Keating and a jury in the criminal session of superior court today when James Dargenio pleaded not guilty to assaulting a fellow patriot and carrying a concealed weapon, contrary to law. The case was called shortly after the resumption of court and continued throughout the forenoon session.

It seems that the complainant was standing in front of his house in Framingham on July 5, when the defendant came along and an altercation over some tomato plants was started. The government alleges that Dargenio drew a long knife from his hip pocket and stabbed his companion, inflicting a wound which required medical attendance. He was arrested a short time afterward and denied the charges.

VIOLENT ENCOUNTERS IN REGION OF CARONNE

Germans Repulsed With Heavy Losses—They are Trying Hard to Break Through British and French Forces—Charge in Close Formation With Utter Recklessness of Human Life

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The correspondent of the Times telegraphed from near Soissons Sunday in describing the German counter attacks on the allies' left wing Wednesday and Thursday says:

"The men were literally thrown away to act as mere dead weight. They hurled them down at us like a landslide. Our officers were wonderfully cool and made us lay close and fight close. That and a bit of pluck did it, but it certainly did want pluck.

"Soissons has suffered terribly. It has been subjected to a regular daily bombardment and almost irreparable damage has been done.

"Today the fearful fusilade continues.

"On Tuesday, the 15th, a severe attack was made by the enemy who evidently had been reinforced and was determined if possible to break through the allied lines between Vic-Sur-Aisne and Soissons—that is—between the British and French forces.

"This attack was heralded by a tremendous outburst of heavy artillery fire, followed by systematic advance of infantry and machine guns. The allies' forces stood their ground splendidly, poured a deadly fire into the attackers, and finally in certain cases repulsing them at the point of the bayonet. This battle continued with unabated fury all night and throughout Wednesday and Thursday.

"On Wednesday night the Germans attacked the French furiously in the region near Rheims. They attacked three times but each time they were repulsed with heavy loss.

"On Thursday they attacked the British with equal fierceness in the neighborhood of Soissons when again their losses were enormous.

"The first sign of weakening was noticed Thursday afternoon after the fierce attacks of that day had been repulsed. The German losses were colossal.

"The whole idea of German strategy seems to be to throw plenty of weight in the belief that some of it is bound to get through."

NOTHING NEW IN LORRAINE AND THE VOSGES—GERMANS FORTIFIED NEAR DELMIET

PARIS, Sept. 21, 3:01 p. m.—The following official announcement was given out in Paris today:

"First: On our left wing, on the right bank of the river Oise, we have advanced as far the heights of Lassigny west of Noyon. To the east of the Oise and to the north of the river Aisne, the Germans have given evidence of a recrudescence of activity.

"In the region of the Craonne there have been violent encounters, which did not stop short of bayonet charges. The enemy has been everywhere repulsed with considerable losses. In the country around Rheims the enemy has not undertaken any infantry attack, confining himself to artillery fire directed against our front from heavy guns.

"Second: On the center in the Champagne country and on the western slopes of the Argonne river, an exception being made of Souain, we have taken Mesnilles-Sur-Lus and Massiges. In the Woevre district the enemy still holds the region of Thiaucourt and has cannonaded Passonchatel.

"On our right wing, Lorraine and the Vosges, there is nothing new. The Germans are fortifying themselves in the vicinity of Delmiet, to the south of Chateau Salins."

RUSSIANS FIND BATTERIES OF GUNS IN WOODS ABANDONED BY THE AUSTRIANS

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Col. Golelewski, military attache to the Russian embassy issued today at the Russian consulate here the following statement which he said he had received from Petrograd.

"The Austrian rear guard which attempted to delay our advance near Baranow and Rzeszow, were driven back with heavy losses. Our artillery is bombarding Jaroslau.

"Fighting with the garrison of Przyemsl has begun; the artillery of the fortress has opened fire.

REPORTED THAT GENERAL REMOVED FROM COMMAND HAS COMMITTED SUICIDE

ROME, Sept. 20, 9:55 p. m., via Paris, Sept. 21, 2:35 a. m.—The Giornale d'Italia publishes a telegram from Vienna which reports that Lieut. Marshal Wodianski, who was of Slav origin, was court martialed and shot for an alleged understanding with the Russians. The station master at Lemberg, named Redt, accused of giving information to the enemy also was shot, according to the despatch. He was a brother of Col. Redt who committed suicide in 1913 when he was accused of being a spy.

CASES IN POLICE COURT

From evidence in police court today it appears that Albert Hill intended to enter the Bowlaway on Hurd street Saturday night. Officer O'Connell was standing near the doorway and adjudged Albert to be drunk and refused to allow him to go inside. And then trouble started.

Hill, a husky young fellow of 22 years, executed a shift and brought his right smartly into contact with the officer's nose. To back up this statement the cop displayed a gory kerchief to the court which, said he, came from the defendant's blow. Just who was the better man with his fists nobody stated, but Hill was pinched anyway.

Judge Enright told the defendant that he usually inflicted a direct sentence in cases of this description but that, on account of his youth, he would let him down easy this morning. Hill was ordered to turn over $10 to the probation officer before the expiration of six weeks.

Hunting Without License

Harry R. and Robert W. Dobson decided to do a little hunting last week near their camp out in Chelmsford but neglected to procure a license so to do. The ever vigilant game warden in that district detected the hunters and demanded a look at their license. When he discovered that same were not forthcoming he made out a complaint for both men. It cost the Dobsons $10 apiece in police court this morning for their carelessness.

Liquor Case

On a charge of violating the liquor law brought by Officers Murphy and Bigelow, T. V. Leonard was fined $50 and appealed. He offered no defence. The government in one case found a man drinking in a wholesale liquor store and in another found glasses smelling of beer. The clerk in the store was also in court but his case was put over till Friday.

It is understood that he claims that no sale was made but that he had treated a party who visited the store.

Brutal Husband

Just how lacking a man can be in gratitude was amply displayed today when the complaint of a woman against her husband was heard. Sentenced to serve a term of months in jail, the man was pardoned through the efforts of his wife in his behalf.

Hardly had he left the bars and confinement behind him before he was once more causing his wife and family a life of misery. The woman and daughters were nearly nervous wrecks this morning as they sobbed out their pitiful tale to the court.

To cap the climax of inhumanity the husband and father came home Saturday night, after his family had hold him to keep away, broke in the door behind which his wife and children crouched trembling and attempted to abuse his wife. A brickbat was exhibited as the weapon used by the brutal husband.

The defendant denied everything and tried to lay the blame on his wife. Judge Enright waved him off the stand after a short while and refused to listen to his plea for clemency. Five months in the house of correction will give him a long period of time in which to change his policy toward his family.

INEFFICIENCY IN LIGHTING

MORE STREET LIGHTS NEEDED IN MERRIMACK AND CENTRAL STREETS

Although Lowell is not as badly in need of light by night as some cities, it is a well known fact that there is a lack of efficiency in the lighting system that could easily be remedied with beneficial results. To a resident of the city this fact, perhaps, is not very noticeable, but the first thing that attracts a visitor in the city in walking down Central street or up Merrimack street is the almost entire lack of street lights. Particularly is this noticeable at the present time at the corner of Central and Merrimack streets, where the A. W. Dows Drug Co. was formerly situated. Since the removal of the company to its present quarters in Bridge street this corner has been in almost total darkness by night. The only light that now strikes this corner comes from the stores on either side and these are only available on certain nights in the week.

A city the size of Lowell can ill afford to have such a state of affairs exist, and it behooves us to call the attention of the proper officials to the fact that it is high time that something was done in the way of street lighting, so that our daughters, sisters and wives can at least walk up and down our main streets without the fear of being insulted, or possibly attacked by some cowardly person who can easily hide his identity under cover of the darkness.

Mill News

Industrial conditions in Dover, N. H., are even more encouraging at the present time than they have been in several previous years at a similar period of the season. It is reported that the Eagle Knitting company and the Eagle Spinning mills, Ltd., Hamilton, Ontario, have practically accepted a very attractive proposal to enter a merger of all the largest knitting mills of Canada, including that of Penman's Ltd., Paris, Ontario. It is expected that the Hamilton companies will be taken in at a valuation of $1,500,000.

The Cordis Mills, Millbury, manufacturers of coarse color cottons, are making additions to their plant which will double the present capacity. One building will be 300 by 82 feet, three stories high, and a picker house 50 by 46 feet, 2 1-2 stories high. It is expected that everything will be completed in about three months.

Installation of new machinery at the plant of the Brown Manufacturing Co., Concord, N. H., chambrays, ginghams, and cottings, is complete, and in operation. It comprises 24 spinning frames, totaling 6000 spindles, and 40 Draper looms. This enlargement makes equipment of plant 16,000 spindles and 540 looms.

Fort Drummer mills, Brattleboro, Vt., intend to increase capital stock from $75,000 to $525,000. This issue is in form of 6 per cent. preferred stock, payable on any interest period at par after 20 years. The equipment of company consists of 30 cards, 35,000 ring spindles and 650 looms.

Simple Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring, use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve, and entirely destroy, every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

BATTLE ON BOULEVARD

TWO SPANISH WAR VETERANS ROUTED AFTER BRIEF ENGAGEMENT

Sergeant William J. Prescott, and Private Fleming, engineer and oiler at the boulevard pumping station and veterans of the Spanish war, had an experience last night they will not soon forget. Brave soldiers as they are recorded to be, they made a bold assault upon the enemy; but after the first onslaught they turned and fled to the garrison where reinforcements gave them first aid to the wounded. The odor which arose from the dum dum bullets almost stupefied the gallant occupants of the fort; but they stuck manfully to their task until the unfortunate soldiers were divested of their clothing. The pole cats when attacked did a fine job, and at last accounts they were still looking for other victims; but the fort smells like a perfume factory. Prescott and Fleming were seen at an early hour this morning clad in strange habiliments going by the most secluded routes to their respective homes refusing to answer any question relative to their thrilling adventure.

NOTES OF THE CHURCHES

The Man is a Failure Who Says the World Owes Him a Living— New Feature at St. Anne's

The morning service at the Kirk Street Congregational church yesterday was addressed by Rev. Charles H. Williams of Gloucester, whose text was taken from the words of Paul: "I am indebted alike to the Greek and the barbarian, the wise and the unwise." Rev. Mr. Williams' sermon was forcible. He declared that the man who says the world owes him a living is a failure and that success is the knowledge of responsibility.

Eliot Congregational

There was a large congregation at the Eliot Congregational church yesterday morning. The pastor preached a sermon on the subject, "The Worth of a Man," comparing the value of one man's soul with the material things of the world, and said that it more than outweighs wealth, culture and all other things that are good in the eyes of man. The pastor said that the real sadness of the great war is the future of the children, who will be forced to grow up in poverty and misery. A special musical program was also given.

Rally Sunday

Next Sunday will be observed as rally Sunday, and the Sunday school services will be held in the auditorium at the usual school hour. A meeting of the Knights of King Arthur will be held this evening and officers will be elected to serve for the ensuing year.

Centralville M. E. Boy Scouts

The Boy Scouts of the Centralville M. E. church will hold a meeting this evening in the church vestry and a large attendance is desired. The Kirby club has a meeting scheduled for tomorrow evening while the quarterly conference will be held Wednesday evening at 6.30 o'clock.

St. Anne's

The regular schedule of services was resumed at St. Anne's church yesterday. Rev. Appleton Grannis officiated at the first service at 7.30 o'clock and at the 10.30 o'clock service, when a sermon was delivered. The Sunday school session was held at 12 o'clock under the direction of Rev. John W. Suter. Rev. Samuel H. Jobe officiated at the evening service which was held at 7 o'clock. Previous to the service the regular choir of the church, assisted by the choir of the Guild of St. Cecelia sang in the church yard for about 15 minutes and a large number of passersby stopped and listened to the hymns.

Here Is The New Style Range

Instead of having the ash pan in front of the range, that takes a lot of room unnecessarily, the ash pan is in the base of the range in the shape of a coal hod, which is much easier to carry and to dump into your sifter. And instead of a hearth in front of the range there is another shelf on the front of the top, same as on the rear of the range, giving more room on top to hold kettles, giving you a better looking range with the same oven and fire capacity and a larger top and taking less space in the kitchen. This pattern is copyrighted and is not found in any other make than the CRAWFORD RANGE; neither is the single damper nor the cup flue joint nor the dock ash grate nor a dozen other improvements that make the Crawford such a wonderful selling range. There are many other good ranges, but if they are good and do good work without these improvements, the Crawford certainly is better with those aids to economy in fuel and durability and convenience. CATHOLIC MISSION of Japan and the other millions in India. To give a faint realization of the vast hordes of China he said that if the people of that country were to pass a given point at the rate of 100 per minute, it would take eight years for all to pass.

To carry the gospel of Christ to these millions throughout the world, there are 65,000 Catholic foreign missionaries consisting of 15,000 priests, 15,000 sisters and 5000 brothers. These have left all that makes life worth living for people generally and have undergone fearful privations to spread the gospel of Christ. Most of them are wholly or almost wholly dependent on funds supplied by the faithful, and they labor amid privations which in many cases break down their health. Dr. McGlinchy told of having received photographs of missionaries' dwellings which would not be tolerated as shelters for dogs in Boston. He mentioned one instance of a convent in the Philippines which had an empty cracker box for a tabernacle and he told of the hundreds of chalices that were sent last year from the Boston headquarters of the society. He related the life of one Swiss missionary—a typical mountain man of rugged constitution—who, after a few years of activity in mission work lost his splendid color, had become stooped and had changed into a prematurely old and broken man. In a letter telling of his death his bishop wrote to Dr. McGlinchy: "It was a case of starvation, pure and simple."

One of the most interesting parts of the reverend speaker's sermon had to do with China. He related how thousands of girl babies are destroyed daily and how the sisters rescue hundreds of them, thus saving them from death and bringing them up as Christians. He told of actual photographs showing the infants dying from exposure after having been thrown over the wall of the city or even having been thrown to the dogs and the pigs. One of the most pitiable aspects of foreign mission work, he said, is revealed by letters from the missions telling how they are compelled to refuse such doomed girls because of their inability to feed them.

After the vesper service in the evening Dr. McGlinchy spoke particularly of the great work of those who follow in the footsteps of Fr. Damien in the leper colony of Molokai. He told many incidents in the life of the illustrious martyr and of his successor, Brother Dutton, a Vermonter and a Civil war veteran who, after becoming a convert to Catholicity devoted his life to the lepers. In his last letter Brother Dutton enclosed a picture of Fr. Damien on his death bed showing the ravages that his terrible experience had made on the self-sacrificing missionary. Another interesting incident referred to a Fiji chief who boasted that he had killed and eaten 600 human beings. He afterwards became converted and presented to a missionary bishop who had labored among the cannibals for 30 years, a plot of ground on which to build a church. Not all the incidents were of a tragic nature. Many of the stories told of quaint, entertaining and humorous experiences such as are described in letters from the far away fields of missionary labor.

In conclusion Dr. McGlinchy spoke in detail of the society for the propagation of the faith urging its importance and its universal charity on those who heard him. It is world-wide in its scope and last year distributed $1,500,000 to the Catholic missions of the earth. One may become a member on payment of five cents a month, and there are various degrees of membership, entailing different degrees of payment, up to a full membership which is secured by the payment of $40 once in a lifetime. Last year $24,000 was realized in this diocese from full membership fees. The eloquent speaker asked for promoters to go among the people of Lowell and organize bands of zealous members, each promoter being asked to look after ten members. There was a generous response, many young women of the Immaculate Conception parish going to the altar rail and giving in their names at the conclusion of the various graphic addresses.

Valuable Discovery in Complexion Beautifier

Because of its peculiar power of absorption, also because it serves every emollient purpose, ordinary mercolized wax is perhaps the most valuable complexion beautifier discovered within recent years. If one uses this she needs no toilet cream. Some use powder afterward, but this is not necessary. This rule for applying mercolized wax has been found satisfactory: Wash the face with warm water, drying lightly. Before thoroughly dry, anoint fact and neck with the wax, but don't rub it in. The favorite way is to use before retiring, allowing it to remain on all night and washing it off in the morning with warm water. All druggists have this wax in original one-ounce packages.

For the removal of a wrinkled or flabby condition there's nothing better than to bathe the face in a solution made by dissolving 1 ounce powdered saxolite in 1-2 pint witch hazel. Beneficial results are quickly noticeable.

PHOTOS © 1914 BY AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

THE RABBIT'S FOOT

BY GWEN SEARS

"The Woman With Unattractive Elbows"

Note—Under this head The Sun will publish daily a brief article giving reliable advice on how to preserve and promote some feature of feminine beauty. Every treatment here suggested is applicable at home and at little or no expense.—Editor.

Few women possess soft, white and prettily rounded elbows, yet this defect is due in great part to their own carelessness.

A good scrubbing of the elbow with a stiff bristle nail brush, using green soap and warm water, is the beginning of the treatment to improve the elbow's appearance.

Follow the cleansing with massage, rubbing cocoa butter or a good massage cream. In massaging the elbow or any part of the arm, clasp it firmly with the hand, when the motion is backward and forward, rather than up and down.

A very simple bleach to apply to the arms is plain washing starch. After the arms have been washed in warm water and before they are dry, rub the starch on, allow to dry five minutes and rinse with cool water. The skin is left smooth and white.

There is frequently a peculiar tendency in the skin along the elbow to show a nutmeg grater like hardening of the epidermis. If the case be a mild one, sometimes rubbing lightly with a pumice stone after cleasing the skin is sufficient to remove it.

However, a more efficacious method of doing away with it is to scrub the surface twice a day, using a nail brush and green soap, following with a massage of cocoa butter or message cream. When the horny growth persists, green soap should be smeared on thickly and rubbed in with a nail brush, after which it is bound on with a muslin bandage, remaining on for two or three hours a day.

Then the arm is scrubbed off and rinsed with warm water. If the soap application proves too irritating, remove it within an hour. Massage with a skin food cream, of which lanolin is an ingredient, should follow.

LADY LOOKABOUT

I wonder how many housekeepers regret that new covers cannot be secured for their glass jars when preserving time comes around each year. In many cases the old ones, be they metal or glass, are often destroyed or lost, and with one exception, there is not a jar in the market for which new covers are furnished. It is a hardship to housekeepers to be obliged to purchase new jars when they have old ones exactly as good, but minus tops. If any dealers carry these covers, will they please advertise them? I know there is a demand.

Dangerous Poles

The angles at which some of the poles on the streets of Lowell are tilted, suggest the leaning tower of Pisa rather than the supports of trolley and telegraph wires. I am reminded particularly of one near Ellsworth street on Gorham. A few days ago I saw this pole remove part of a load of hay, yet the hay wagon was being driven at an apparently safe distance from the curbing. These poles are unsafe and a menace to the public and should be reported before actual harm has been done by them.

Making People Stingy

We all feel a wave of sympathy for the Knights of the Road, traveling gentry, unkindly known as hoboes, who in their recent convention denounced the war because it makes people stingy. They feel that the possibility of being obliged to seek employment is rapidly becoming a probability, and the outlook is dismal indeed. They should be listened to as each of them, if he only attaches himself to a locality for a certain short period of time, is entitled to vote. Their number is so great that even in a city like New York they could swing an election their way. To be sure, they are mere flotsam on the stream of life, yet each of them, by virtue of being of the masculine gender, is freely accorded the privilege of the ballot, while honest, hardworking women, mothers of large families, as well as laborers in the vineyard, must obey laws of their making— Oh, what's the use!

Pupils and Teachers

School has reopened and again the small boy is hard at work. Judging from personal observation, I think the funny paragrapher who is sympathizing with the small boy on his return to school is miles away from the small boy's true attitude towards school and teachers. It is in only a few rare cases a teacher is disliked; for the greater part, children look upon their teachers as their friends, and there is a spirit of real comradeship between them which is the rule rather than the exception. The old attitude which Mr. Funnyman reflects in his jokes is a relic of his own school days, probably of a generation or more ago, when every boy looked upon his teacher as an enemy waiting to club him for imaginary offenses. Here in Lowell, as in nearly all places at the present time, there is no excuse for the complaint of overwork or of too hard work, owing to a good system of grading which insures the completion of one year's work before promotion to another, and the child who makes these complaints invariably can be found lacking in application and industry. Other causes for these complaints are poor attendance and lack of interest on the part of parents. This last entails not only a close following of the pupil's progress, as indicated by the card he carries home weekly, but by seeing that the child has sufficient hours of sleep, together with proper nourishment. Teachers are not entirely heartless, neither are they the enemies of children. If parents would appreciate these points and not uphold Johnny when he comes home with a story of abuse piled upon him by his teacher, much of the friction between all parties concerned would be removed.

Also if parents would realize that teachers cannot manufacture brains in their pupils, that they must do what they can with that which comes to them, we would hear less of the child who, if he be promising, takes after his father, but if the reverse be true and his possibilities in scholarship limited—then he has a very poor teacher.

Today the applicants for teachers' positions are required to qualify so highly before even presuming to apply, and they are then so sifted and so culled in order that only the best may be chosen, parents may feel reasonably sure that school committees are doing all in their power to provide the children of Lowell with the best possible teachers.

Getting in Your Way

Have you ever noticed that when you take pains to stand on the outer edge of the sidewalk to read the bulletin-boards at Merrimack square, just so you will avoid standing in front of anybody, somebody is sure to come and stand directly in front of you? Such an act of thoughtlessness is unpardonable, yet it is done every day by persons whose manners, apart from this instance, are faultless. Sometimes it is a man, preoccupied with business and filled with haste. More often it is a woman, and even though she be clad in an X-ray gown, one's line of vision is broken, and frequently, in the latter case, his mind is diverted wholly from the business of gathering free news. The next time you stop to scan these interesting boards, kindly assure yourself that you are not blocking somebody's view. Your thoughtfulness will be appreciated.

Like Distant Cannonading

Last Monday evening one would have been forgiven for thinking a naval engagement was going on just off the Massachusetts coast. Reports, loud and distant, coming at irregular intervals, certainly suggested it to many and when the anxiety was relieved by being assured that it was a celebration of some feast day in Lawrence at which bombs were exploded by way of expressing the holiday spirit of the participants, peaceful sleep followed. The sounds reminded many of the old settlers of war-time, and I venture to say that in more than one home the evening wore away while tales of those unhappy days were rehearsed. The reports, which resembled the sounds of shelling, brought to many the thought that we may yet be entangled in the dreadful international war, for the cessation of which we are all urgently asked to pray.

Things That Count

Nature keeps the balance of things pretty well considering her great age and man's—or woman's—many attempts to upset her plans. Last winter, while the earth was shrouded in snow, before a bird was to be seen, before even the pussy-willow, dared to put forth, many women were wearing the most fragile and summery of summer hats. Mine was of open-mesh lace straw with apple blossoms and the dearest little white wings, and I never even sneezed, although a cruel March wind played havoc with me by piling freckles on top of freckles. Two months ago, before the gunpowdery smell of the Fourth of July celebration, which we did not have, had left the air, heavy velvet hats covering the head and ears closely were in order. What do we care for comfort when Dame Fashion speaks! Uncomfortable as a summer hat may be in midwinter, or uncomfortable as a heavy winter hat may be in July, there is no discomfort in the world that can equal that of being "out of style." And the man—no woman would attempt it—who tries to change this order of things is working for a forlorn cause.

CAUSED BY OVEREATING

Deficient gastric secretion, meaning a lack of the fluids necessary for digestion, is a prevalent condition. You may have it now and not know it because you are able to get along without actual discomfort even with your enfeebled condition.

But if you overeat—then you are in trouble. You have indigestion because you have given your weakened stomach too much to do. The deficient gastric secretion was what doctors call the predisposing cause, the overeating was the exciting cause. It is easy not to repeat the overeating but the predisposing cause must be corrected if you are to be well.

The secretions that digest the food come from glands that are nourished directly by the blood. When these secretions are insufficient the only way to restore their healthful condition is by building up the blood. This can be done by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the non-alcoholic tonic that assists nature in keeping the body in health. Proper attention to diet and the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills should be tried in cases of disordered digestion because it is the simple and natural way to correct the trouble.

Send today for a copy of our free diet book "What to Eat and How to Eat." Address the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. Your own druggist sells Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

AN OVERBURDENED WIFE

If the work that women do and the pains they suffer could be measured in figures, what a terrible array they would present! Through girlhood, wifehood and motherhood woman toils on, often suffering with backache, pains in side, headaches and nervousness which are tell-tale symptoms of organic derangements which Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—made from roots and herbs—can undoubtedly correct. Women who suffer should not give up hope until they have given it a trial.

The consciousness of being correctly gowned would enable a lady general to win a battle which would turn the tide of the world's history against the greatest odds. Joan of Arc, inspired as she was, saw to it that her beautiful white charger and her suit of white mail were in order before going into battle. These things always counted.

NEW ELEVATOR LAW

BUILDING DEPARTMENT WILL ISSUE LICENSES TO OPERATORS

A new law will go into effect October 1, by which all operators of elevators or escalators will be required to secure a license, and the office of the public building department of this city is getting ready to hold such examinations as required by law and issue the licenses.

The examinations in this city will be held under the supervision of Commissioner James E. Donnelly of the public building and license department, and conducted by the inspector of public buildings, Francis A. Connor.

(a) No person shall operate and no owner, lessee, employer or his agent shall cause or permit to be operated the elevators specified in this regulation to be operated by licensed operators, unless the person operating the same is duly licensed; provided, however, that in case of emergency such operation by a competent unlicensed person may be permitted for a period not exceeding seven consecutive days.

(b) Power passenger elevators shall be operated by licensed operators, except (1) the selective automatic push-button type when equipped with the required safeguards; and except (2) elevators with shipper ropes accessible from the landings, when equipped with the required safeguards; and except (3) a passenger elevator in a private residence occupied by one family; and except (4) a passenger elevator serving two landings only when such elevator is equipped with the door interlocking devices required on a selective automatic button-control elevator.

(c) Power freight elevators shall be operated by licensed operators if the elevators run at a speed exceeding 100 degrees per minute.

(d) Power freight elevators, except hatchway-type, carriage-type, sidewalk-type and dumb-waiters, and except elevators serving only two landings, shall be operated by licensed operators whenever (1) they are used for carrying more than three persons, including the operator, or whenever (2) they are not provided with landing gates.

(e) Licensed operators are not required for elevators used in uncompleted buildings for hoisting workmen and materials.

(f) A license shall not be required of an elevator contractor or of a mechanic engaged in the construction and repair of elevators, or of an inspector having authority to inspect elevators.

LOMASNEY FOR TAGUE

STRONGEST TO MAKE FIGHT AGAINST KELIHER—DECISION REACHED BY HENDRICKS CLUB

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Martin M. Lomasney and the other democratic leaders of ward 8, in this city, will support Representative Peter F. Tague for the congressional nomination in the 10th district.

The Hendricks club, the well-known democratic organization in the West End, had a "conference" yesterday afternoon and voted to use its influence for Mr. Tague in preference to Ex-Congressman John A. Keliher, Senator James H. Brennan, or Representative Thomas A. Noland, all of whom are seeking the democratic nomination to succeed Congressman Murray.

This action by the ward 8 leader was by no means unexpected; indeed, it has been commonly believed from the first that Mr. Lomasney would support Mr. Tague, but the matter was not definitely settled until the meeting yesterday afternoon.

The friends of Senator Brennan, the other congressional candidate from Charlestown, have done their utmost to persuade the ward 8 democrats to support him in the primaries, and it is known that Mr. Lomasney has been well disposed toward the Charlestown senator, but the ward 8 people decided that Mr. Tague would be the strongest candidate against Mr. Keliher, whose defeat they are anxious to accomplish.

It is now certain that the real fight at the primaries next Tuesday will be between Mr. Keliher and Mr. Tague.

If Mr. Lomasney is as successful in controlling the democratic voters of his ward as he has been in past campaigns that ward will give a substantial majority to Mr. Tague, probably quite enough to counterbalance the lead which Mr. Keliher will obtain in the South End—wards 7 and 9.

The chances are that neither of the two leading candidates will get a very large majority in wards 1, 2 and 6. East Boston has in Mr. Niland a candidate of its own, but he can hardly expect to win the nomination. The vote in Charlestown will be divided between Mr. Tague and Mr. Brennan; now that the former has secured the support of ward 8 the chances are that he will have a decided majority in Charlestown also, but it is said that Mr. Keliher himself has considerable strength there.

Mr. Keliher has back of him also the influence and prestige of the administration in city hall, for Mayor Curley has stated that he would support the ward 9 man.

Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald is not taking an active part in this campaign. He has been counted as a supporter of Mr. Tague, but the ex-mayor has so many friends on each side of the fence that he has determined to keep his hands off.

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Three scientific safebreakers, who wore white gloves to prevent possible identification by means of finger prints, were caught by the Chelsea police shortly before 1 o'clock yesterday morning in the basement of the store of F. W. Woolworth & Co. at 280 and 284 Broadway, Chelsea.

The cracksmen had thrown the safe over on its back and were preparing to force it with a 15-inch steel jimmy when they were detected by Patrolman Edward Isbister and Reserve Officer Valentine Elmore, who were passing the store.

Elmore was in citizen's clothes and not on duty. A light over the manager's office, which was burning half an hour previously, was out, and the men decided to investigate.

Elmore drew his revolver and stayed on guard, while Isbister went to the rear entrance to the store on Cherry street. As he neared the store he heard a heavy crash, which afterward proved to be the noise made by the safe when it was overturned. He also heard footsteps inside and rapped with his night stick for assistance.

Elmore heard the call for aid and shouted to Joseph Carolan of Congress avenue, who was passing, to shout for help if anyone attempted to leave the building. He then ran around to Cherry street.

Isbister told him to get some more officers. Sergt. Shannon and Patrolmen McGauley, Glennan, R. McCarthy and Hickey soon appeared on the scene and the building was surrounded. Sergt. Shannon and Patrolmen Isbister, Glennan and Elmore broke in the rear door.

The burglars had been apprised of the presence of the police when Isbister rapped with his night stick for help, and could not be found in the upper store. The basement was then searched and two men were detected crouching behind a partition of a small room, and the third was discovered by Sergt. Shannon crouching on some boards that were nailed near the ceiling.

The police all had their revolvers drawn, and the burglars were backed up against a wall and handcuffed. One of the men wore a white glove, the other gloves were found near the safe.

Few Implements Found

A 15-inch steel jimmy and a flashlight were also found near the safe. A small bottle labeled "spirits of nitre" contained a liquid which was at first believed to be nitroglycerin, but inspectors from various departments doubted it and it will be analyzed.

The men arrested gave their names and addresses as John, alias Jack Snyder, aged 24, of 30 Staniford street, Boston; Joseph Gordon, aged 30, of 17 Dartmouth street, Boston, and Harry Davis, alias Harry Michaels, aged 21, of 21 Revere street, Revere. The names and addresses are all said to be fictitious. It was learned yesterday forenoon that Davis' right name is Jack Miller and his home is in New York.

The capture of the three burglars is one of the best catches made in police circles for some time. Thirty-five stores of the Woolworth company have been broken into throughout the country in the last few months. Most all of the breaks were made under circumstances similar to the Chelsea robbery.

Lynn Robbery Recalled

A jimmy almost identical with the one found yesterday, was left in a Lynn store which was entered a short time ago. Inspectors Kane, Thorpe and Broad of Lynn, Maurice Finn and Connolly of the Metropolitan park police and Mike Morrissey of this city visited Chelsea and scrutinized the imprisoned trio. None recognized them as local crooks and they are believed to be New York and Chicago men.

The men are charged with breaking and entering in the night time, larceny, and with having burglars' tools in their possession. They were unable to secure bail. When searched they had about $15 between them. No guns or weapons, bits, gimlets, sectional jimmies, known as "can openers," were found on them.

The police believe that the men hid their implements, if they had them, in the cellar, and Manager John E. Jeheridge will have employes overhaul the goods today to search for the tools.

The men ripped out a money drawer in the manager's office from which, Mr. Jeheridge says, $4.96 is missing.

May Have Cracked Bacon Safe

It is believed that the men may be responsible for other burglaries and an investigation has been started. The watchman of the William A. Bacon company, who was bound and gagged by three men several months ago when the safe was robbed, will see if he can identify the man.

The prisoners refused to talk, but conferred with their counsel, Representative Maurice Caro, in Yiddish.

Miller's identity was learned when his brother-in-law, Myer Schlesinger of New York, called at the station at 2.30 yesterday afternoon. He told the police at first that Miller was only an acquaintance whom he had met in Webster hall, at a dance and that he had promised to look him up when he came to Boston. He said he inquired at the Staniford street adress and was told by a man by the name of Dave Alexander that Miller was locked up in Chelsea.

Schlesinger was questioned by Inspector Morrissey and finally admitted that Miller was his brother-in-law. He disclaimed all knowledge of the burglary and said he left New York on the 1 o'clock train Sunday morning and was returning to New York last night. He said Miller was in New York two weeks ago.

Finger prints of the prisoners were taken by Special Officer Claflin of police headquarters. Photographs and measurements will be taken this morning after the men are arraigned in the Chelsea police court.

Patrolman Isbister was highly commended by Capt. Fitz Roy Grover for his alertness and prompt action. Officer Elmore was also praised for his assistance.

Mr. Jeheridge said last evening that there was $600 in cash in the safe.

The burglars gained entrance by cutting a panel in the Cherry street door and turning the wooden bar which fastens the door on the inside. After getting inside they again barred the door.

Best Laxative For Children

When your baby is cross and fretful instead of the happy, laughing little dear you are accustomed to, in all probability the digestion has become deranged and the bowels need attention. Give it a mild laxative, dispel the irritability and bring back the happy content of babyhood.

The very best laxative for children is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, because it contains no opiate or narcotic drug, is pleasant tasting and acts gently, but surely, without griping or other distress. Druggists sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle. For a free trial bottle write to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 451 Washington St. Monticello, Ill.

BENTLEY AND SHAW, YOUNGSTERS, ARE FINDS FOR CLARK GRIFFITH

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Though Walter Johnson has not been the star this year that he has been heretofore, Clark Griffith has uncovered two other youngsters who have done much to keep his team to the front. They are Shaw and Bentley. They have recently been pitching games that entitle them to be considered topnotchers, and with more experience they are expected to become reliable performers.

THE HEBREW NEW YEAR

OBSERVED IN LOCAL SYNAGOGUES—FEAST OF YOM KIPPUR COMES ON SEPT. 30

At sundown last evening, the Jewish New Year 5675 was ushered in with services in the synagogues of this city and most other cities in the world. New Year, the feast of "Rosh Hasonah," inaugurates the most solemn season of the Jewish religious year, and is most strictly observed by all Hebrews. The holy day, which began last evening, was also observed today by the Hebrew congregation and Tuesday will be observed in all the orthodox synagogues. New Year day is the beginning of a long list of important holidays, of which the day itself and Yom Kippur, the day of the Long Fast, are most strictly observed. The ten days between the New Year and the Day of Atonement are the ten penitential days.

There are several reasons why Jews celebrate the New Year in the fall. The month of Tishri—which begins at this time—is the seventh month of the year, and yet on the first of this month the synagogue year is celebrated because the number seven has been sacred to Hebrews from time immemorial. The seventh month is the holiest in the year, and during the entire month all of the principal holy days and festivals are observed.

The feast of Yom Kippur will be observed Sept. 30.

OVERDUE BOHEMIAN

Sends No Wireless—Ships Carrying 150 Refugees Sends No Report of Whereabouts

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Great inconvenience was caused yesterday because no wireless message was sent from the Leyland line steamship Bohemian, which should have arrived early in the day from Liverpool with a shipload of passengers. Not only did the liner not arrive at all, but up to twelve hours after she was looked for by the company officials not a word had come through from the skipper.

Friends of the 150 war refugees on board were on the anxious seat all day and kept the wires hot with their queries as to the whereabouts of the ship, and, of course nobody could tell them. The officials at the United States barge office at Long wharf were so busy answering the calls from all over Greater Boston and from other sections that they scarcely had time to attend to their work.

While fear of capture by Germans cruisers is said to be the reason for the non-receipt of any message, those best informed on the subject declare there isn't a German warship within 1500 mile sof Boston.

DROPS DEAD AT NANTASKET

NANTASKET, Sept. 21.—Ebenezer Crane, about 60 years old, of Quincy, dropped dead yestrday afternoon in the passageway at the rear of the Kensmore Hotel, Center Hill. He had been employed about the beach for many years, last summer at a store in Paragon Park. He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Annie Black of Quincy.

WHAT THE FRENCH MAID SAID

"The Beauty Patch"

Note—Under the above caption will be published daily delightfully written articles filled with useful information on household subjects for women readers. We advise their careful perusal.—Editor.

"Marie," began Marjorie, dimpling and showing an unwonted timidity in approaching her subject, "do you suppose it would be all right for me to wear a beauty patch?"

"Why, yes, I think so, most decidedly," answered Marie.

"About every so often this artful little black patch comes into vogue and after a tentative period when "nice" women try to resist its allurement because it is supposed to be "fast," its fascination becomes irresistible and everybody takes it up until the craze runs its natural course and goes out of fashion.

"Just now the beauty patch is at the height of favor. One sees it on young girls, on smart, well groomed matrons—even on women over 60, who cling desperately to a coquettish and youthful mode of dress.

"A bit of makeup, however, is almost imperative as a background for beauty patches, effectively worn. Only the debutante with skin of peaches-and-cream tones can paste a black beauty patch against her natural complexion and stand the test.

"The least hint of pallor or sallowness will be cruelly revealed by the accentuating black patch, and even if rouge is not tolerated, a bit of powder is best for the purpose.

"This liquid white finish is easy to apply evenly and if used in moderation is less artificial looking than a coating of ordinary powder rubbed down with a cloth or bit of chamois skin.

"Color in the face is not fashionable now, an ethereal, delicate look being the ideal aimed at; but the beauty patch is rarely becoming against a dead white skin. A little color in the cheeks makes its effect a deal more coquettish—as the colonial belle well knew.

"There is a great deal of art in the application of the beauty patch. Its effect must be studied carefully and many experiments should be made before the final location of the patch is decided upon.

"If the face is very narrow, a patch at the outer corner of the eye will make it appear wider. On a broad, heavy face the patch should be placed at one side of the chin or near the corner of the mouth. And be very careful not to get the patch too large.

"An infinitessimal speck of black on the complexion will show up conspicuously, and, as a rule, the smaller the beauty patch is the more becoming it is. Just a dot of black, no larger than the head of a pin, will sufficiently call attention to a dimple if placed beside it."

ONE DEAD, FOUR DYING

Woman Killed and Man Fatally Hurt in Automobile Crash—Others More or Less Injured

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Two are dead, four perhaps dying, and four less seriously hurt as the result of Sunday accidents in New England, in most of which automobiles played the leading part.

One of the deaths, which occurred at Windsor, Vt., was due to drowning. The other death resulted from an automobile accident at Hull, in which another person was probably fatally hurt and four more slightly injured.

Accidents in Worcester and Waltham

Worcester and Waltham were scenes of accidents in which three persons sustained internal injuries, and the first-named city likewise provided a garage fire. The least harmful of the day's automobile crashes occurred in Cambridge, where a motor car ran down a patrol wagon, but did little damage.

WOMAN KILLED, MAN DYING

HULL, Sept. 21.—One woman dead, a man dying and four other persons injured, is the toll of an early Sunday morning automobile accident at Warwick's Hill, Nantasket, when a motor car owned by Frank P. Magann, a garage owner of Brighton, and driven by his son, Edward, crashed into a stone post at the bottom of the hill, throwing out its seven passengers.

Mrs. Jennie Snyder, formerly Miss Jennie Chisholm of 9 Goldsmith place, Roxbury, is dead, and Michael Feeney of 138 Athens street, South Boston, is dying at the Sylvester Private hospital, Allerton, with a compound fracture of the skull and internal injuries. They were both occupants of the car.

Magann, the chauffeur, was placed under arrest by the Hull police, charged with reckless driving, and later bailed out in $3500 bonds. According to Magann's father he was hired to take the party to Nantasket for the day, and was just arriving at the beach, shortly before 7 o'clock, when the accident happened.

The party was composed of young Roxbury, South Boston and Cambridge people, who were on their way to spend the day at a clubhouse at Nantasket. They left Boston at 4 o'clock yesterday morning. Besides the injured there were Joseph Hanrahan and Edward Duffy of Roxbury, Jeremiah Sullivan of Cambridge and a young woman called Agnes, of Roxbury.

According to the story told by Hull police by the occupants of the car, the machine was coming down Warwick hill, near the Villa Napoli, at high speed, when something went wrong with the steering gear. At the foot of the hill the heavy machine crashed into a stone post.

All seven occupants of the car were thrown out. Feeney and Mrs. Snyder were picked up unconscious. Feeney was taken to the Sylvester hospital and Mrs. Snyder to the Sturgis hospital at Allerton. Mrs. Snyder died from a fractured skull a few minutes after reaching there.

The other occupants of the car were cut and bruised, and the other young woman is said to have been severely injured, but was taken from the scene in another automobile.

The automobile was demolished.

Warwick Hill is one of the steepest in the vicinity and the roadway is curved. According to the Hull police Magann was driving at a high rate of speed when the accident occurred. He was arraigned in the Hull court today.

Mrs. Snyder, who was killed, lived with her father, Alexander Chisholm, at 9 Goldsmith place, Roxbury. She was 30 years old.

MEN DANGEROUSLY HURT

WORCESTER, Sept. 21.—Two men of this city were run down by the automobile of Mrs. L. C. Palmer of Commonwealth avenue, Boston, just over the line in Shrewsbury yesterday and are now at the City hospital, suffering from internal injuries. Both are on the danger list.

The men are Frank Secretano, 30, and Salvator Garbarillo, both of East Central street. Witnesses of the accident say that the men were running to catch a car and darted across the road just ahead of the machine.

PROVIDENCE MAN DROWNS

WINDSOR, Vt., Sept. 21—John W. Glassey of Providence, R. I., was drowned yesterday by the capsizing of a canoe in which he and another young man were paddling. His companion was rescued. Glassey was a bricklayer.

KNOCKED FROM WAGON

WALTHAM, Sept. 21.—James Mayuse, 35, of Felton and Water streets, is at the Waltham hospital suffering from internal injuries received Sunday morning when a wagon he was driving was struck by a trolley car at Bacon and Lexington streets.

Mayuse was thrown heavily to the ground. No blame has been placed by the police.

BLAZE DESTROYS AUTOS

WORCESTER, Sept. 21.—An electric spark produced in the charging of an electric runabout in the garage of Dr. Charles H. Nichols, a wealthy physician of this city, caused a fire Sunday that destroyed two valuable automobiles. Three cars were run out of the garage, and were not harmed. The loss will be about $5000.

Dr. Nichols whose home is at 38 Cedar street, was in the garage at the time the fire became noticeable, and narrowly escaped being overcome by smoke. He managed to crawl through the smoke to the door and suffered no serious effects.

AUTO HIT POLICE WAGON

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—A collision between an automobile and the police patrol of station 2, Cambridge, at Prospect and Hampshire streets, Cambridge, late yesterday afternoon, was remarkable for the little damage that resulted. The wagon was called to Kendall square, where James H. Delorey of 49 Harvard street, Cambridge, was arrested on a charge of drunkenness, and before the prisoner had been put into the wagon Officer Mullen, driver of the wagon, received word from the station house to proceed to Inman square, where another man had been placed under arrest.

As the horse turned into Prospect street an automobile coming from the direction of Massachusetts avenue came across Hampshire street. The front of the machine struck the horse midway, felling him in his tracks, crashing both shafts and throwing Driver Mullen to the ground.

Mullen landed on his feet. The front wheel passed over the body of the horse and left him directly under the wagon. Beyond a few scratches the horse was not injured, but the wagon was out of commission.

While the officers were busy with the fallen horse, the man driving the automobile moved on, but the police managed to obtain his registration number.

FOUR BUILDINGS DESTROYED

BOSTON, April 21.—The residential section of West Watertown was endangered by an early morning fire yesterday, when a barn and three sheds were destroyed and a house badly damaged. The total loss was more than $1000.

The fire started in a barn owned by Charles Connors at 65 Gilbert street. A horse was taken out on the arrival of the fire department, but died a few moments later in the yard.

The efforts of the fire fighters were centered on a house owned by Daniel Glynn at 19 Charles street, to which about $500 damage was done. Three sheds near by also caught fire. Two hours' work was necessary before all of the blazes were out.

EARLY MORNING FIRE

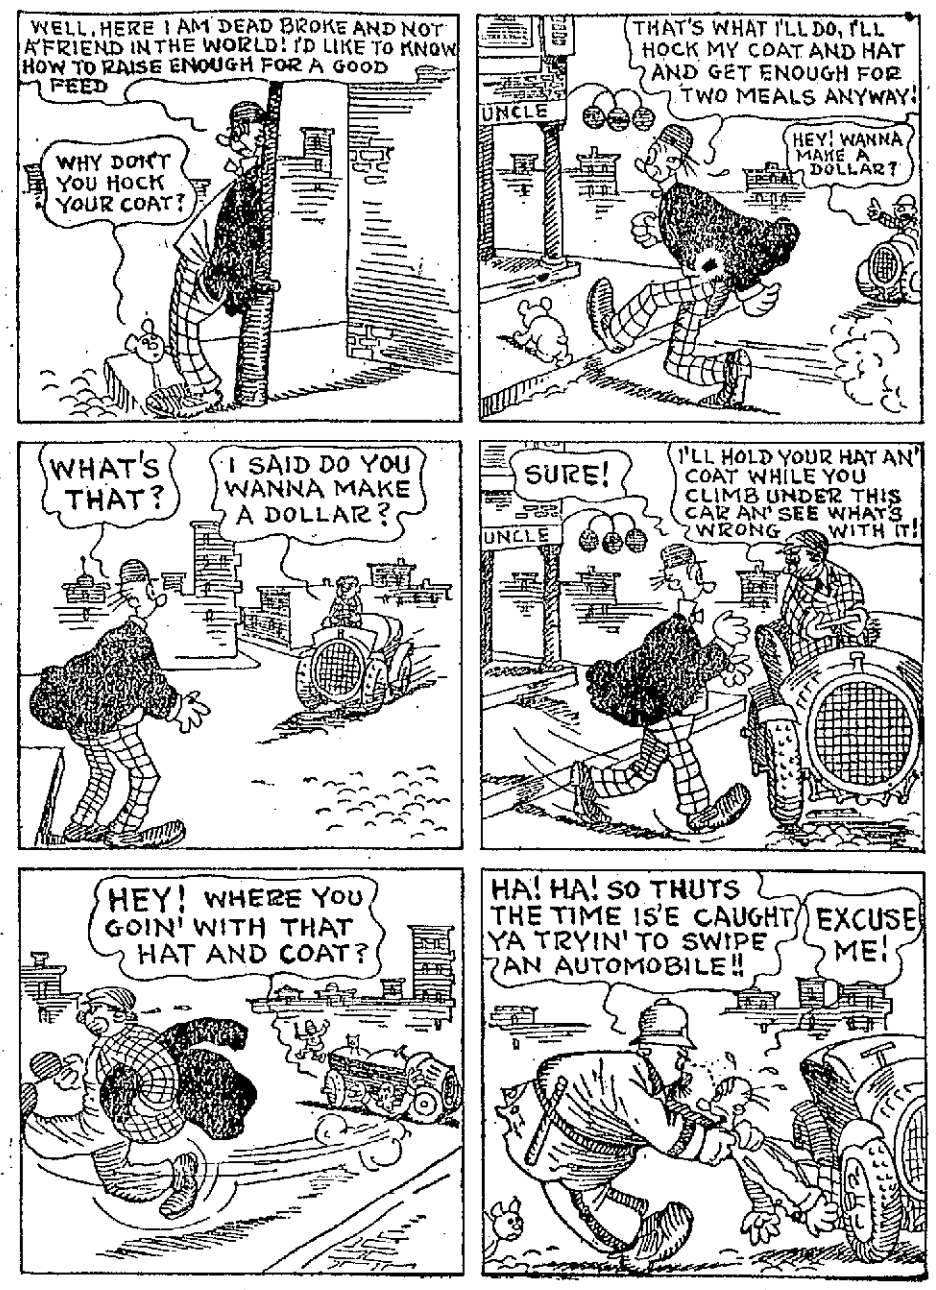
LEXINGTON, Sept. 21.—Heavy firing was held in the outskirts of Lexington early yesterday, but casualty lists are minus. The Lexington police department mobilized to repel the invaders but found no invaders to repel.

A fusillade of shots rang out about 1 o'clock, but efforts to trace the origin of the gunplay were unavailing. The only clue yet unearthed is that three men were seen quarreling about an hour before in Muzzey street. No dead or wounded have been found.

HOWARD L. GRAY DEAD

THOMASTON, Me., Sept. 21—Howard L. Gray of Stetson, overseer of the wood shop of the state prison, died suddenly of heart disease Saturday night. He is survived by his wife and one child, who had arrived yesterday to spend a fortnight's vacation with him.

EXCUSE ME



NATIONAL PROHIBITION

CAMPAIGN STARTED AT MELROSE—SPEAKER WAS FOUNDER OF ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE

MELROSE, Sept. 21.—The prohibition party formally opened its nation-wide campaign for national prohibition Sunday afternoon at a meeting in Memorial hall. The speaker was Rev. H. H. Russell, founder of the Anti-Saloon league of America. A large audience attended and much interest was shown. Speakers from other states will give addresses at meetings throughout Massachusetts during the week, it was announced.

Rev. Harold Marshall opened the meeting in the afternoon. After a short address he introduced Dr. Russell.

Dr. Russell stated that 50 years ago the churches were divided by sectarian antagonisms, while the north and south were embittered by warfare. He declared that today all these barriers against the battle with the liquor traffic had been swept aside and that the south was leading in the fight for the abolition of the saloon as he north had led the fight against the abolition of slavery.

He also stated that it was the firm belief of the temperance advocates that the prohibition of the liquor business was only a matter of a short time, in view of the tremendous organization which was arrayed against it.

The evening meeting was held at Melrose Highlands at the Green Street Baptist church. Among other things, Dr. Russell said:

"This is one of thousands of convocations held and to be held in the Bay State and in all the states. They are called by this ringing title, 'See This Thing Through Recruiting Rallies.'

"Last year was the jubilee year of the Anti-Saloon league, the 20-year jubilee. It began in November, 1912, with a state victory. West Virginia voted dry by 92,400 majority. The jubilee also was cheered by a National victory. On the last day of February in the senate and on the first day of March in the house, the national congress, over the veto of the president, passed the Webb-Kenyon bill, insuring drouth in dry territory for the future. Then began preparations for the jubilee convention at Columbus, O., in November, 1913. Five thousand delegates from all states, representing all political parties, all temperance organizations and all churches, unanimously agreed to send a committee of 1000 to Washington to introduce a most important measure.

"The committee of 1000 men, swelled to 2000, accompanied by many delegates of women's organizations, marched up Capitol hill and delivered the measure to a member of the house and senate, and the Sheppard-Hobson bill was immediately filed in both houses. At the big ratification meeting held later in Washington all present lifted the right hand and shouted, 'With God's help we will see the thing through,' and then we all hastened to the various states to begin the campaign to see it through.

"It is a joint resolution to amend the constitution of the United States, which when passed by a two-thirds vote of both houses, and when ratified by a majority of the members of a majority of the state legislatures, will bring this to pass namely, the permanent prohibition of the manufacture, sale, importation, exportation and transportation of intoxicating beverages throughout our United States of America.

"The board of trade of Pittsburg recently passed with a cheer resolution for national prohibition. Everywhere business men and great manufacturers are coming with us. Sobriety is now known to be essential to safety and efficiency.

"Another ground of hope is found in the attitude of the liquor men themselves. Their organs editorially give up the fight when, as in their national journal, it is stated: 'For us there is the handwriting on the wall, and its interpretation spells doom.' The whole salers give it up when they say, as did a Pittsburg brewer recently to the other officers and stockholders: 'Gentlemen, we may as well recognize the fact that the shutting down of our business is only a question of time. And the retail dealers when they lease a building now for a term of years put in the condition: 'Provided we are permitted to continue the sale of liquor.'

"Today the oral allies of America are united, steadily fighting a winning war, while now the liquor traffic is breaking, fearful, and speeding toward its final and full defeat."

WALL OF WARSHIPS

LONDON, Sept 21.—A "solid wall of warships" is thrown across the northern part of the North sea, according to the captain of a British trawler who has just arrived from Iceland. The skipper said it was "absolutely impossible for any fot to break through undetected," so constant and thorough was the patrol to the north. It was his own experience to be halted and searched, and after being released his boat was followed by two torpedo boats until it reached its destination.

The thoroughness of the patrol was further testified to by another North sea skipper. His trawler was lying along shore, when shortly after midnight it suddenly found itself hemmed in by a huge black object which proved to be a British cruiser. Its officers seemed to have had cat's eyes. From the dark a voice demanded to know the identity of the trawler. It was promptly shouted back.

"The name is quite correct, sir,' came another mysterious voice astern of us," said the skipper. "A submarine had crept up behind us and read our name. Although all of our crew had come on deck to see what was happening, not one of them had seen the submarine appear. The whole episode only occupied a few minutes and the cruiser, after wishing us "Good morning,' and plenty of fishing, disappeared in the darkness."

FROM SOUTHAMPTON

SOUTHAMPTON, Sept. 21.—The despatch of troops from Southampton continues, but the movements are now kept less secret than during the passage of the first expeditionary forces. The record then made provided an excellent test of the facilities here for handling such a great movement of troops.

Although the expeditionary force was despatched from several points, Southampton handled the bulk of the 150,000 to 200,000 men who were sent to the continent during two weeks' time. The docks at this place afford more than one and one-half miles of water front, with railway lines so close to the ships' docks that it is but a moment's work to transfer train loads of men, horses and equipment from the railway to the steamships. The precision with which the transfer was made was so marked that an entire train was frequently unloaded in three minutes, and it was not uncommon for 30 trains to enter the docks and complete their task of unloading with a single hour.

The plan had been worked out by the war office two years before. The small cars used for transporting horses, accommodating only seven or eight animals, proved a great factor in the speedy transfers. Each horse had a separate compartment, and the sides of the cars dropped down in such a manner than the animals stepped out without the slightest confusion. Some Americans who witnessed this movement remarked that the cars were far more practical for this sort of work than the large freight cars used in America, into which a number of horses were crowded.

Scores of hospital cars still line the dock tracks here ready for the reception of sick and injured returning from the continent. Red Cross signs are displayed and surgeons and nurses are in the cars with everything ready for the wounded. The hospital trains are made up of converted passenger coaches and sleeping cars. All have the small compartments common to English railway coaches with doors opening at the sides. Litters are provided which will enter these small side doors and consequently it is much easier to place the seriously injured in berths than it would be if it were necessary to carry them through the doors common to American sleeping cars and along narrow aisles or hallways.

Baggage cars have also been converted into hospital cars where patients can be placed who need attention of a sort which can be rendered more satisfactorily in a roomy car than in a small compartment.

MADE IN LOWELL

There is no doubt that the "Made in Germany" signs which have decorated everything from a needle to an anchor for many years past have had something to do with starting the war, for whether we regard it from the side of the allies or from the point of view of the Kaiser, industrial supremacy was one of the ends sought. The methods of bringing it about are responsible for the catastrophe in no slight degree. At the present time the Krupp engines of death are the most advertised "Made in Germany" products, and industrial Germany suffers as a consequence. Even should the Fatherland be eventually victorious, its economic and manufacturing systems will take many years to ascend to their olden pinnacle. Many incline to the view that politically, industrially and commercially, Germany will take decades to recover what she has lost or will eventually lose. Be this as it may there is a moral in the situation for industrial America and for industrial Lowell into the bargain.

From one end of the country to the other, clubs, societies and active organizations are boosting the slogan "Made in America," advising our people to demand American-made goods, not so much to appropriate the prosperity of any nation but to prevent future American dependence on foreign manufacture as far as possible. There has been no real need for the total reliance with which some most important lines of American industry looked to foreign sources and as a consequence America shared in the temporary stagnation and uncertainty following the war, instead of getting ready to meet the augmented demands that were certain to come our way. Anything that has been done abroad can be done in America—in the line of invention and manufacture—and in this case war proved the necessity that is the mother of invention.

Already papers throughout the state are commenting favorably on the initiative of the Lowell textile school in starting to manufacture dyes hitherto neglected. Should things turn out as anticipated, Lowell will be known as the centre of textile enterprise, and will consequently gain in prestige and popularity to a degree not hitherto enjoyed or furthered by other aspects of our activities. In this connection it is noteworthy that Lowell leads in some of the finest lines of manufacture, textile and otherwise, and that the trade-mark "Made in Lowell" adorns the finest grades of finished commodities in the show places of metropolitan stores.

To strive to advance Lowell prosperity by creating a demand for Lowell goods within the city proper would be provincial and ineffectual, but there would be a decided benefit in a concerted effort to make the brand "Made in Lowell" stand for the best in every line of manufacture in which the city excels. Everybody knows the value of "Sheffield" stamped on steel, the prestige of "Pittsburg" on machinery, the conviction that "Brussels" carries on carpets. Why then should not the magic "Made in Lowell" mean as much on woolens or cotton? Is there not danger that the city sits back complacently, satisfied with past achievements and neglecting the competitive and progressive spirit of the times?

To advance the "Made in Lowell" policy a real working agreement should be entered into between our mill officials, our business heads, our board of trade, our municipal authorities. At present industrial Lowell takes little part in its public affairs, apparently, and though the city has made its world-wide reputation in textile manufacture, we hear less on public affairs from its noted mill men than from any other group of notables within its boundaries. When industrial Lowell, political Lowell, commercial Lowell and Lowell in every other phase will all act in harmony and with a common end "Made in Lowell" will mean far more than it means at present.

SIGNS OF IMPROVEMENT

In many lines of business are growing indications of the prosperity that has been predicted for American industry as a result of the war. Manufacturing is improving, farm produce is finding a ready market and finance is establishing itself on a sounder basis. Any uncertainty which obtained immediately following the opening of the European contest has been completely dispelled.

A contemporary points out as one of the surest signs of this improvement of domestic conditions "the decline in foreign exchange" to a low figure which it regards as "a most significant evidence of improving business and monetary conditions." Since the beginning of August international money markets have been decidedly unsettled, and our merchants have been handicapped in meeting their foreign debts by the high rate of foreign exchange. Instead of the normal rate of $4.78 for each pound sterling they have been forced to pay a rate of from $5.60 to $5.05—an increase of $1.03 for each dollar owed abroad. In the aggregate this amounted to an enormous increase and it did a great deal to keep business stagnant. Added to this was the fact that foreign creditors refused to extend the usual credit and demanded a gold basis of payment.

The falling in the rate of the foreign exchange is a sure indication that this country has sent enough gold abroad to offset the heavier indebtedness and that, therefore, the government and our financial interests feel confident of American stability. At first this country hoarded its gold and did not send it abroad until it was proved absolutely safe to do so. New York city alone has arranged for the payment of $80,000,000 of bonds held by foreigners and the outward shipping of our natural products is getting to a normal basis. It is now expected that our business with England will soon be as satisfactory as before the war.

No country can have industrial prosperity unless it has financial stability, and nowhere is this better understood than in America, which has devoted its best efforts to furthering a safe financial policy since the war began. There is a greater degree of co-operation between the government and the leaders of American finance than ever before and the result will soon be seen in the prosperity which grows more certain as the war drags on.

PROSPECTS OF PEACE?

When two men go to fight with their fists in the heat of passion, they are in no mood to listen to reason. A peacemaker may stand nearby and air all manner of fine sentiments but the combatants burn with the desire to inflict corporal punishment on each other and they will not cool off until their frenzy has been lessened by solid punches given or received. When the first ardor of battle recedes, they may go on fighting automatically but one of them is apt to keep an ear open to offers of mediation.

The same is true to some extent of two armies. When their national pride is aroused to a pitch where it it too becomes passion they fight madly and blindly, each striving for the total annihilation of the other. When they cool off and begin to count the mutual cost one of them at least is generally in a receptive mood for offers of settlement. If one side has shown a decided mastery the cause of mediation is so much the more advanced.

It is generally felt that the present war is a war to the finish, but peace lovers are already hoping for some settlement. The offer of President Wilson still holds good, but he will in all probability repeat it when the fortunes of war favor its being received more favorably. As yet there has been no direct reference to peace on either side, but the American expectancy of a speedy settlement grows. Our government may be depended on to advance the cause of peace at the earliest possible opportunity, consistent with national dignity.

Whether you be a democrat or a republican or a progressive or an independent or something which has not yet been named, go to the polls tomorrow if you are a voter and register your choice of men for the state offices. It is not a matter of personal choice with you; it is a strong duty, the general neglect of which would be a national menace. At present you cannot be compelled to go, if you should choose to stay away, but as a reasonable man you must see the importance of exercising your right and your obligation as a citizen. Any limb which is not exercised soon becomes worse than useless. It eventually decays. A voter is one of the limbs of the body politic and as such must exercise his functions if he would not endanger our institutions.

A special word to Lowell democrats: Among the candidates for senator and representative and the other offices are men of integrity and ability. You can pick a strong one to offset every strong one offered by any other party. Vote, then, for the man that can win in the final elections, paying attention to his ability and to his qualities of fitness rather than to his personality. The time for voting for "good fellows" is past and public institutions are neither grafts nor public charities. Poor government is costly government for all of us. Pick your best men and line up back of them so that the present victorious sweep of democratic policies from the federal government down may be continued.

IMPROVED FREIGHT CONDITIONS

The business men of Lowell have reason to be grateful to Mr. W. G. Parkin, the local general agent of the Boston and Maine railroad, for bringing about the important change in the handling of freight which, though apparently slight, is in reality one of the most far reaching improvements that have taken place for years past. Lowell suffers from an unusually complicated railroad system, comprising several small and widely scattered yards, two inadequate freight houses, antiquated track arrangements and awkward facilities generally, to remedy which would take a far greater outlay than the railroad can afford at the present time. Anything then that would bring even a slight degree of improvement is to be commended, advancing as it does the interests of the individuals and concerns that constitute Lowell's industrial supremacy. The recent change must have necessitated a great deal of previous planning, but it will simplify freight handling to a degree that will confer a lasting benefit on the city and that will reflect favorably on the railroad.

Commencing this morning all outward freight, whatever the destination, will, if it is to pass over the Boston and Maine system, be taken at the Western avenue freight house and on the other hand all inward freight will be distributed at the Thorndike street freight house. This will do away with the annoyance and uncertainty which caused frequent strained relations between railroad officials and business men in the past and it will also show the public that there is need for forbearance in bettering conditions which cannot be justly attributed to local management but which are a heritage of antiquated systems.

Once again the record breaking crowds that have swarmed to the agricultural fairs in various surrounding towns prove that the old appreciation for all relating to the country and growing things is returning. Years ago such fairs were the event of the year but with the taste for tawdry theatricals and a lower range of pleasures their vogue fell off. Now after the musical comedies, the movies, the dance halls and pool rooms it is refreshing to find that the call of the farm is still potent to lure city dwellers from their accustomed haunts—for a day at least.

Slowly, but surely, foreign-built vessels are being admitted to American registry and in a short time the American flag will again have become a familiar sight on the commercial routes of the seas. The innovation has commended itself to all Americans, irrespective of party, and it is probable that what was begun as an emergency measure will be perfected as a permanent measure in the next session of congress.

The scarcity of sea engagements of any magnitude has been one of the greatest surprises of the present war. England must be anxious to try her guns, being confident of naval superiority as well as more advanced armament, but she hopes in vain for an opportunity to demonstrate her power. Germany has shown unique cleverness in keeping her fleets out of the open.

The first shower of crimson and golden leaves is falling from the trees and there is a melancholy swirl of faded glory along the road ahead. Every step stirs up ghosts of summer delights and occasionally the foot step is deadened by the carpet underfoot. Very soon the trees will again stand forth in stark nakedness and the myriads of leaves will have vanished like a generation that is passed. But what a sad pleasure lurks in the plaintive passing!

Peace on earth—but not just yet.

SEEN AND HEARD

Every man has his followers, even if they are only bill collectors.

Some history may repeat itself. But your neighbors will attend to repeating your history.

Tell a lie to save a man and the only thing he will ever be able to remember about you is that you are a liar.

They are making wedding rings out of platinum because it wears longer than gold. But a ring made of snow would outlast some of the modern matrimonial alliances.

A scientist claims that a man has six times more lung capacity than he needs. This scientist must have examined a suffragette who was masquerading in men's clothes.

Luke McLuke says he will study anatomy to find how a Boston woman was shot in the dining room and a Pittsburgh woman was stabbed in the back yard.

It is funny that a girl can be as graceful as a nymph when she is dancing and yet get off a street car in the attitude of a grizzly bear.

Any time a woman goes into a shoe store and insists upon having a pair of shoes that fit her you can bet that she is more than fifty years old with no matrimonial prospects.

Socks patterned after the design of the American flag are on sale in London. One purveyor asserted today that these "Uncle Sam" socks were meant to establish the identity of Americans going on continental missions.

Stripes run from top to bottom of the socks, with the exception of three rows of stars on a blue field just above the ankle. It was argued by one plausible merchant that no passport would be needed for the wearer of such a creation. Low shoes must be worn to get the proper effect.

To the large assortment of postcard photographs, which are now in great demand, has been added a picture of President Wilson. It has been one of the most popular pictures, so stationers assert, and has been enjoying a large sale.

Miss Ethel Barrymore will begin her season under Charles Frohman's management early in December, in a new play "The Shadow," which was to have been produced next month in Paris by Arne. Rejane. The war prevents this, so Miss Barrymore will be the first actress to appear in the play on any stage. It is by Messrs. Dario Niccodemi and Michaell Morton, the authors of "The Prodigal Husband," in which John Drew, Miss Barrymore's uncle, is appearing at the Empire theatre, N. Y. "The Shadow," in three acts, will give to Miss Barrymore, it is stated, opportunities different from any heretofore arranged for her.

Editor Lowell Sun, Lowell, Mass.

Dear Sir: I am in receipt of a copy of the souvenir edition of The Lowell Sun and as it came in a special wrapper, I assume that you are the sender, and if not I thank the sender, as I thank you for it. I assure you I appreciated it very much and after reading it through I cut out all the pictures and tacked them up on the walls of my quarters here so that I can imagine that I am in Lowell again. I am sure that the people of Lowell must be proud of the grand building and the progress you have made in the past, and I wish you success in the future. By this mail I will send you a copy of the Bogota special edition of the Gaceta Republican, Colombia's Independencia dia, 20 Julio, 1810-1914. They do not celebrate their Independence day here as we celebrated the Fourth of July. The sun shines here all day and at night it sets beautifully, but The Sun that I received today is shining brightly tonight on the walls of my quarters. I am in excellent health and wish to be remembered to all my Lowell friends.

With best wishes,

D. J. Farley.

BELGIUM'S FAMOUS ANTHEM

Since the outbreak of war patriotic feeling in Belgium generally has been stirred to a fierce blaze. On every hand one hears the national anthem of the country, the famous Brabanconne. Appended is a somewhat free translation:

Fled the years of servile shame!
Wear again thy glorious name
Sovereign people in thy might,
steadfast yet and valiant be,
King, and Law, and Liberty.

Strive, nor seek discharge at length,
Hold thy courage as thy crown.
God, who keeps thee in His strength,
On thy labors smileth down.
Over all thy fruitful land
Labor's prize is full and free.
On thine arts enthroned stand,
King, and Law, and Liberty.

Foes, that were our friends of old,
Are returned to love at last.
All the free we prize as gold,
Praying that our strife be past.
Belgians and Batavians, friends,
Knit in brotherhood shall be:
King, and Law, and Liberty.

Belgium, Mother, thus we vow,
Never shall our love abate.
Thou our hope, our safety thou
Hearts and blood are consecrate.
Grave, we pray, upon thy shield
This device eternally,
King, and Law, and Liberty.

THE EXPLANATION MAN.

O, de explanation man, he come around a-talkin' strong;
De words he uses soun's like dey was five or six feet long.
He talks so ornamental dat you has a great desire

You kin ax 'im any question dat you chance to have on hand;
His answer will be mos' too fine foh you to understand.
He will tell you 'bout de taxes an' de cost of what you eat

But wif all dis conversation, 'bout de mos' dat he can say
Is dat men jes' keep on fightin' an' dey's got de tax to pay.
Though he's very informatious an' he does de bes' he can,

MADE IN AMERICA

The "Made in America" legend on an article would mean that the article was of superior quality; that it was made by persons who received fair wages, and it would help wonderfully in making foreign buyers change their minds about the necessity of buying foreign goods. Every man or woman who advocates the "Made in America" labelled goods is indeed a really worth while citizen. Are you doing your share in this good work?—Providence News.

MEXICO'S FUTURE

Carranza's position is stronger than Madero's was, and this fact is owing principally to the circumstance that the United States has frowned upon all other forms of government. Our right to do this may be questioned, but our power in the premises is manifest. Remembering the fate of Huerta, it will be long, we trust, before another military adventurer, posing as the true government, murders officials and plunges Mexico into chaos again. Gen. Carranza and Gen. Villa are moreover a doughty pair, full of victories and prestige, and it is to be hoped that they can and will keep order. Mexico has occupied the limelight long enough.—Woonsocket Call.

AMERICAN DYES

In establishing a course in dye-making, the Lowell Textile school sets an example which the Fall River school should be prompt to follow. The dye situation in America is acute, and it is likely to remain so because the cutting off of the supply from Germany cannot be off-set by our own manufacturers. Granting that this is partly on account of the large numbers of United States letters patent on standard chemicals and even upon certain shades and colors, held by Germans, it is still more due to the lack of knowledge of the art in this country. The textile industry, which is the largest sufferer from the shortage, owes it to itself to make an effort to remedy this condition; and the textile schools afford the means for an immediate beginning.—Fall River News.

SEX HYGIENE

The United States commissioner of education has of late come in for considerable criticism, because of an indorsement, in his recent annual report of sex hygiene for the public schools. This is not surprising, in view of the widespread resistance to this attempted innovation in popular education.

Many leading statesmen, educators, clergymen, and even physicians of national reputation, are on record as being uncompromising in their opposition. Ex-President Taft, in addressing the graduates of the Pierce business school of Philadelphia, held that pursuit of education in sex hygiene is full of dangers, if carried on in the general public schools.—New Bedford Times.

COSTLY CARS

And now come the automobile manufacturers with those tempting offers for 1915 models to distract us. Considerably less than $1000 will buy a good deal of car just now. The moderate priced outfit is evidently here to stay and it will appeal to the masses while the higher priced output will be left for the wealthy.—Portland Express.

HIGH RATES

It wouldn't be entirely surprising to learn that some of the Americans who grumble at increased passenger rates on the Atlantic draw their incomes from products which leaped to war prices long before the poor steamship lines had snatched a dollar.—Brockton Times.

"Doing Well, Thank You!" an irrepressible comedy, featuring James B. Donovan and Marie Lees, will be the topline feature at the B. F. Keith theatre, beginning today and continuing through tomorrow and Wednesday. The fact that two such chipper funmakers as Mr. Donovan, "the King of Ireland," and Marie Lee, "the little beauty," are putting forth the comedy is quite guarantee enough that it has tons of merit to it. Mr. Donovan doesn't appear in anything which isn't filled to the brim with real humor, and he is capable of inventing some funny patter and business himself. In addition he is also known as a singer and dancer of note, while little Miss Lee shines in both of these lines. It is a real, "big time" act and one which Lowell theatregoers will turn out and welcome, for Donovan is well known here and has been for a number of years. A real kangaroo, imported from his native bush in Australia will spring the second surprise of the bill. This particular jumper is a fully developed fellow, and his specialty is boxing, in fact, he is the only boxing kangaroo in existence. Gordon Brothers, who guide the fortunes of this wonderful animal, will offer an act positively unique. Both of the Gordons are boxers, and it is necessary for both of them to alternate in the ring with the pouchy-wonder, for the kangaroo strikes a terrific blow and no ordinary ring-fighter could stand up before him for any length of time. The act came to this country shortly after the outbreak of hostilities in Europe, it having toured the continent during the spring and summer months. Mr. and Mrs. Thornton Friel in the rustic comedy called "At Economy Junction" are first-raters in fun-making. Their little comedy glints with brilliant comedy, and there are many patches of real atmosphere to it. The best quartet of banjoists in the world is that made up of King, Carleton and the Clifton Sisters. They strum everything, from the rattling finale of an overture to the most tantalizing maxixe. If you want to get music that makes the feet tap incessantly, listen to this quartet.

This is the line-up of acts for the first three days of the week, and in addition to the vaudeville four special feature pictures will be shown. Never before have motion pictures been brought out so clearly as at the Keith theatre, this season, and the fact is very largely due to the use of the new Radium Gold-Fibre screen. Made of a fabric which strengthens the detail of motion pictures, and brings into instant relief all movements of the actors it really shows motion pictures at their best.

For the concluding half of the week four new vaudeville acts and four feature pictures will be shown. The front feature in vaudeville will be offered by the Hirscoff troupe of Russian dancers, singers and instrumentalists. Four men and four women make up the troupe, and they dance their wild measures and sing their Cossack songs with an abandon which is unforgettable. The Van Der Koorrs, with their "quack" illusion act, featuring Felix the mind-reading duck, will score strongly. Benton & Howard are snappy singing and talking performers, and Jeanette Childs is a dainty singing soubret. Performances begin at two, and 7 and 9 p. m. Phone 28.

THE OWL THEATRE

A strange love story in which a western hero and a heroine from picturesque far Japan are the two principals is seen in "The Wrath of the Gods," the most stupendous production ever attempted by American companies. This high-priced attraction has been secured for two days only, today and tomorrow at the Owl and performances will take place as usual, every afternoon and evening. The regular program will contain five others, among them the following: "The Bank Burglar's Fate" in two parts; "The Belle of the School," a comedy drama; a Keystone comedy, and others. To return to the feature, a program from one of Boston's most famous picture houses, announces this same feature at prices ranging from 25c. to 50c., and no other picture on the program but this one. The Owl offers this six-reel masterpiece and five other great photoplays for their well known regular price of 5c and 10c. You will wonder how the management can offer such sterling performances. They want to keep their reputation of giving the best show in this city, and will go the limit to secure worth-while productions, to gain the approval of their many friends. There is so much to be said about this grand production that the writer hesitates to start on his task. The most salient scene of this play is a volcanic eruption, so close and so realistic that it seems absolutely incredible that such things could be photographed, but the producers, William H. Clifford and Thos. H. Ince, America's most famous producers, whose work has placed them the peers of all producers, have succeeded admirably in their attempt, not without many hardships and dangers. A company of noted Japanese actors has been engaged specially for this production, and they are helped by the very best actors of all the affiliated Mutual program companies. The story deals with the love of a Japanese girl for a lad from her own land. Upon learning of a supposed curse laid upon her and her father, an old lord, he stops his attentions, and the girl revolts. She wishes for an unbeliever who could console her in her renunciation of her God, and her prayer is answered when an American sailor is washed ashore, during a terrible typhoon. He is nursed back to health by the girl and her father, and falls in love with the Japanese girl, and arranges for a marriage. Succeeding events are indescribable. The volcano has an eruption and thrill succeeds thrill.

MERRIMACK SQUARE THEATRE

The greatest of all crook plays, "Alias Jimmy Valentine" will be the offering in which the Merrimack Square Theatre Stock Co. will open a week's engagement at this pretty little playhouse this afternoon. It will be given with Sam A. Meharry as Valentine, a role in which he has played many times before and a complete surrounding cast. An unusually fine production has been built for this week and patrons may look forward to seeing something in all respects out of the ordinary. Daily matinees will be given starting at two afternoons and performances in the evening will begin at eight. Announcement is made that in the near future free photographs of each member of the company will be distributed. Prints and flags have in the past been given but never anything quite so nice or expensive has ever been distributed. Watch for announcement of the date.

THE ROYAL THEATRE

The stormy days of the French and English war in Canada will be vividly brought back to you, when you witness "Wolfe" or "The Conquest of Quebec," the marvelous five-part photo masterpiece to be shown at the Royal theatre today and tomorrow. The courage shown by both generals of the fighting forces offer excellent material for dramatic actions, and the death of Wolfe and Montcalm in their different camps, are wonderfully acted. Montcalm's dying words upon being told that he would not live long were these: "So much the better, I shall not live to see the surrender of Quebec," and like the brave soldier that he was, he died in a few hours, but his memory will always live with the patriotic French-Canadians. Wolfe on his side, was also stricken to death, and his last words were: "They run! Thank God, I die happy." The Kalem company is the producer of this sensational production, and the pick of their many companies has been gathered, and cast in the different leading roles. This production has no equal in realism, and photography, it has made the whole United States and Canada talk. Every scene has been photographed on the exact spot where it was actually fought, another thing that adds to the realism and beauty of this marvelous offering. And in order to give a gala performance, five other brand new photo-plays have also been booked to complete the biggest program of the week, of any theatre in the city. There will be special vocal selections, in English and French.

PROFESSORS AS LETTER CARRIERS

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—A number of the older professors of the University of Goettingen are reported to have accepted positions as rural letter carriers to relieve the loss of men in this service during the war. Great numbers of members of the students' association have gone to the front. Practically all of the students' "Germania" in Berlin is in the field, including even the "alte Herren" or former students.

FASHION NOTES

SOCIAL GOSSIP
FEMININE LORE

PRACTICAL GARMENTS WILL BE IN DEMAND FOR SCHOOL WEAR

October brightness is apt to mean also October chill, and topcoats will be needed, while now that the school doors are thrown wide, attractive aprons will be in demand. Consequently, these three little garments are especially timely. The girl's coat is a very new one with a circular flounce that has a fashionable flare at the lower edge, but, since it is cut in Japanese style, it is extremely simple to make as there are only two seams. For the 6-year size will be required 2⅜ yards of material, 27 inches wide, or 2⅛ yards 44, with ½ yard 27 for collar and cuffs.

The boy's coat shown on the second figure is made in the raglan style that means exceeding smartness and incidentally does away with all difficulty in fitting. It includes the big pockets that are always dear to the masculine heart, and is altogether a most satisfactory garment. For the 6-year size will be required 3¼ yds. of material 27 inches wide or 1⅝ yards 44, with ⅛ yard 21 for the collar.

The apron with long sleeves is a necessity for real protection, and the pretty little model No. 8387 is made in that way. It can, however, be finished with a round or high neck and, in case of need, with shorter sleeves. It is a very simple as well as a very practical garment, being cut all in one piece with just the underarm seams to be sewed up, which extend into the sleeves and give shape. It is closed for its entire length at the back. For the mornings at home it can be worn in place of a frock as well as over one. For the 4-year size will be required 2 yards of material 27 inches wide or 1½ yards 36, with ⅝ yard 27 for the bands.

LATEST FASHION FANCIES

That Paris should have been cut off from free communication with the rest of the world just at this period means, of course, that we must depend largely upon ourselves for the development of fall fashions, although advance rumors and earlier models that already have been received unquestionably will be taken as a guide. Just how far the conditions will become the opportunity for which designers on this side of the sea claim to have been waiting only the future can decide. At the moment, we have the assurance that if the materials can be obtained, velvets and satins will be exceedingly fashionable and lace will be worn in profusion, but what will take their place when the supply will, of necessity be cut short, will depend largely upon the ingenuity of the dealers and manufacturers on this side of the sea.

One enterprising firm has already opened a showing of fall costumes and these costumes arrived from Paris just in time to be received and unpacked before war was declared. That they are authentic the reputation of the firm assures and they are perhaps of double interest at this time for the reason that the unusual later models cannot be received.

As has been stated in previous letters, we are to have a great deal of embroidery of various kinds. Soutache is being employed in effective ways, heavy embroideries are being seen upon handsome street costumes as well as upon indoor gowns and there is a notable tendency toward the use of metal effects while beads of various kinds frequently are seen used in combination with silk threads.

At this writing, it seems probable that coats will vary largely in length. For the early season at least, short ones will be worn with tunics and fancy skirts as well as the redingote models which latter are really more appropriate for the colder weather.

An exceedingly handsome suit seen in the collection referred to above is of forest green broadcloth. The skirt is a somewhat unusual one, full and draped over the hips with pockets introduced in the drapery and these pockets are richly embroidered in self colored silks combined with tan colored wooden beads of about the size of a pea. There is a deep fitted belt over the yoke which gives a slight suggestion of the favorite waistcoat idea and the coat is a very short one, extending only just below the waist line where it is finished with embroidery of silk threads and beads. The lining is taffeta in one of the new shades that is neither tan nor brown and the same silk makes the big flaring collar. It is expected that green in such shades will be pronounced favorite and it assurely is beautiful in combination with the new tan.

That capes would influence the season's styles has been known for a considerable period. A second costume in the same collection is made of gabardine in the new blue that is known as Vendome and is trimmed with heavy black silk braid that takes the form of wide bands on the tunic and of binding on the coat edges. The skirt is plain, narrow, but not so narrow as have been the skirts of the summer, and the tunic is oddly shaped at the lower edge with lapped edges at the front and back allowing effective use of the braid. The coat is a short and jaunty one, terminating just at the waist line, and takes the form of a blouse at the front and a cape at the back. That it is finished with a big flaring collar becomes almost a matter of course, for such finish is almost universal upon the coats that thus far have been seen.

A third costume is made of blue gabardine with tunic skirt and long cape and all the edges are finished with inch-wide worsted fringe and from all these costumes will be seen that suggestion is not lacking however much supply may have been cut short.

In the handsome tailor-mades for afternoon visits and the like, gold and silver soutache is expected to be used. Touches of the metal effects are to be found upon some of the tailor-mades of more simple sort, such as blue gabardine and the like that are designed for many occasions and for many needs.

SEASON OF BEAUTY

MORE GRACEFUL COSTUMES ARE COMING INTO VOGUE—OSTRICH MUFFS AND BOAS WILL BE WORN

We are entering a season that promises real beauty. Let us hope that no unfortunate travesties will mar the effect. Manufacturers are being made happy by the use of a greater quantity of material. Costumes are infinitely more graceful because of that added width and there is just the tendency toward a natural figure that should lead to the best possible results.

As must be the case when velvet is to be much worn, all velvet-finished fabrics also will be smart and there is promised a new wool velours and a new duvetyn of exceptional beauty. Dark, rich shades are to be the favorite ones for street wear. Unquestionably black will be extensively worn and such colors as tete de negre, chestnut brown, taupe, rich greens and purples will be seen. For the fancy street costumes, jet buttons are fashionable and jet trimmings will make a rather important feature of indoor dress both for afternoon and evening occasions. Blues are fashionable and some of the new dark blues are exceedingly rich and beautiful in color. There is a rich wine color that is particularly successful in the soft satins and in moire, whether in velours or bengaline. For the early season, a great deal of ostrich trimming will be worn as well as ostrich boas and ostrich muffs. Since ostrich in these days is treated in numberless ways and made up into little edges as well as bands, it is easy to utilize the feather idea in a variety of ways. In a word, fall fashions are interesting and varied.

SLEEVES AND FLARING COLLARS MAKE INTERESTING FEATURES

No matter what the season, new blouses are of interest. They are necessities for wear with coat suits and they are entirely satisfactory for many other occasions. Here are three excellent ones. The one at the extreme left is of striped material and combines full fronts and full back with the raglan sleeves that are so much liked and so generally becoming. The high, flaring collar can be made either of the same or of a contrasting material, but in this instance it and the cuffs are mode of white. The blouse itself is made of striped tub silk. For the medium size will be required 4 yards of material 27 inches wide, 2 ⅝ yards 36, or 2¼ yards 44, with 3-4 yard 27 for collar and cuffs.

The blouse at the center No. 8379, is a perfectly plain one with set in sleeves and a rolling collar. It is especially desirable for washable satins, for taffeta and similar silks, and also for the linens, soft-finished piques and the like that make ideal waists for autumn and winter wear. For the medium size will be required 3 3-4 yards of material 27 inches wide, 2 3-4 yards 36, or 2 yards 44.

The vest effect and the roll-over collar make important features of the third blouse. Like the first one, it is made with raglan sleeves, but the little vest and the collar are quite individual and the rolled-over cuffs exceedingly becoming. As shown here it is made of washable silk, dotted for the main portion and plain for the vestee, collar and cuffs. The lace banding may be of any preferred sort, for every kind of lace is to be worn.

WHAT THE COOK SAYS

NOTE—Those who are interested in culinary matters should watch for what the Cook says in the articles to appear under this head as a feature every Monday. Don't miss them.—Editor.

Cook gave me some hints on making good bread this morning. Always buy the best flour, she says. It is the cheapest in the end, you have good bread and it goes farther. It is unnecessary to knead your dough often.

Once when you make your sponge and when you mold it in loaves for the oven is enough. Should you get dough too stiff, grease the board, but do not add more flour. It will be soft and spongy when you put it in the pans. The fresh yeast you get daily is the best.

Two cakes of yeast make four loaves of bread, or three loaves and a pan of light rolls. To make light rolls, when you make your dough into loaves for the last time save a little of same, pinch a small piece off at a time, work in some butter and sugar, place in pan and sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon.

If you want to get your money's worth when using the oven of the gas range, says Cook, arrange a combination of articles to cook at one time. When you wish to roast a small piece of meat (four or five pounds), you have room for at least two other dishes and shelf space for baking potatoes around the small roasting pan.

Dried fruit already soaked is delicious baked.

The combination when baking might be roast meat, potatoes, bread, dried prunes or apricots, or baked apples or brown betty.

Cook told me this morning that rusty irons should be heated, rubbed on a piece of beeswax tied in linen, and then with a coarse flannel cloth, sprinkled with household salt. This will give a polish like glass.

She said also to keep the ironing board when ironing is over, make a charming cretonne cover for it, it takes but a moment to slip the board into this, and hang it on the wall out of the way. The cover keeps the board clean, and looks very neat and nice.

Cook says to preserve meat boil together one quart good vinegar, two ounces of salt, two ounces of sugar; when cold wash the meat over with this mixture.

Tough meat, she says can be made tender if placed in vinegar water a few minutes.

"When boiling fowls or fish," she remarked, "add to the water in which they are to be boiled the juice of half a lemon. This will make them beautifully white."

"Fish may be scaled much easier by first dipping them into boiling water for a minute," she says.

A beautiful smell in the kitchen this morning made me curious. Cook said it was from a little pan of cloves which had been sprinkled with a few drops of spirits of lavender.

Put a few bits of charcoal into the bottom of the pan. If the charcoal is not convenient some bits of orange peel will do, as they soon turn into charcoal. Sprinkle the cloves liberally on these and when wanted to perfume the house place on the stove until they begin to smoke.

The fumes will soon penetrate the house, and is very much like the odor of carnation. It will effectively cover the cooking odors, as of fish, cabbage, turnips and the like.

WHAT HORTENSE TOLD ME

NOTE—The Hortense articles to appear in The Sun every Monday will give valuable hints on cosmetics and hygiene, taking up some feature of importance and offering the most scientific advice.—Editor.

Hortense told me a very clever way to perfume the handkerchiefs and muslin underwear.

"On washing days," she said, "I supply the washerwoman with a good sized piece of orris root, and she throws it into the water where my handkerchiefs are boiling. When they come up from ironing they are as redolent of orris as can be.

"Then I slip them between the folds of a sachet filled with violet powder and they never lose their fragrance. Violet and orris scent together make a real violet odor."

I had been worried for sometime about my eyes aching frightfully and Hortense advised me very wisely.

"Never forget to rest the eyes occasionally during the day, as it is unwise to try them to their limit," she said.

"Stop before your eyeballs ache, and, closing your eyes, rest quietly for five or ten minutes if this much time can be spared; if not, a two or three minute rest for the eyes will do much for them.

"Don't wear dotted veils, as they are deadly enemies to the beauty and health of one's orbs. It is impossible for the eyes to keep well if they are constantly being strained to avoid this dot and that."

The teeth should be cleaned at least twice a day with a suitable brush and dentifrice, paste or powder," advises Hortense.

Particles of food should not be allowed to cling to the teeth or gums or remain in the mouth after a meal. Always rinse the mouth thoroughly and remove particles of food on or between the teeth with a brush or dental floss.

In brushing the teeth do not confine the motion to up and down or straight across movements. The brush should be given a rotary or circular motion, cleansing the gums as well as the teeth, and removing any tarter that may have collected at their base. A lime water solution is helpful in rinsing the mouth.

Hortense advises that hands and lips which crack easily when exposed to the cold can be kept in the best of condition if annointed nightly with a lotion made of equal parts of glycerine and lemon juice.

This is a simple remedy but a very effective one. Some prefer glycerine, rosewater and benzoin and for dry skins it is a little better than the glycerine and lemon juice.

Camphor ice is also good for chapped lips and hands. You must take care to dry the hands thoroughly after washing them and not to wet the lips when in the open air.

Hortense says to thicken thin eye brows anoint the eyelid edges with warm seasame oil. Do not get the oil into the eyes.

The eyebrows can also be massaged with yellow vaseline for five minutes every evening. Always massage with the fall of the hair, not against it.

So much can be said about sleep. I have a habit of remaining up quite late every night to read and Hortense says:

"It does not matter what time you go to bed so long as you have a regular hour and stick to it. The old saying that an hour of sleep before midnight is worth two after is not true, but it has this much truth in it.

"That the early hours of sleep are worth more than the later. The man who remains healthy goes to bed about the same hour every night, and it makes little difference whether this hour be 9 p. m. or 3 a. m."

NOW IT'S BUTTONS

Since all the basques are closed at the front with buttons and buttonholes, buttons of necessity become important. For costumes of this sort, they are apt to be made for the special costume, of the material braided or embroidered or enriched in some way, or are chosen from the ready-made buttons with extreme care for the effect. For afternoon and evening basques, the most wonderful buttons are used, often for the most elaborate ones, genuine jewels are set for the purpose, while dealers are showing jeweled effects that are really wonderful in their beauty and color and that combine most satisfactorily with the metal embroideries, the silver and gold tissues and the like that are so generally talked.

LATE WAR BULLETINS

MONTENEGRIN ARMY ONLY 10 MILES AWAY

NISH, Servia, Sept. 21.—An official communication reviewing the Servian campaign says:

"The enemy's attempt to cross the Drina on the Losnitza-Ratcha line have again failed and all the Austrian attempts to cross the Save on the Mitrovitza-Shabats front have also been unsuccessful. Nothing of importance is reported from the Save- Danube front.

"The enemy, retiring from Vishegrad, Bosnia, 40 miles southeast of Sarajevo, abandoned all his stores. Our troops seized 20,000 kilograms (about 44,000 pounds) of flour, 30,000 tins of meat, many blankets, a field hospital with 100 wounded and all medical stores and 40 railroad wagons.

"The Montenegrins after carrying the fortress of Foicha and Gearada in Bosnia, captured Jabuka on Sept. 16 and took Rogatica on the 17th. The morale of our troops is excellent but the Austrians are completely demoralized and are flying panic-stricken.

"The Montenegrin army is only about ten miles from the Bosnia capital and has captured a large amount of booty."

SERVIANS HAVE NOT RETIRED FROM SEMLIN

NISH, Servia, Sept. 21.—The Servian official press today issued a denial of the report from Vienna that the Servians had retired from Semlin, in Hungary, opposite Belgrade, after losing 6000 prisoners and several pieces of artillery.

The report admits, however, that the Servians evacuated Semlin on orders from headquarters for strategic reasons and the Austrians did not reenter the city until two days later.

PRESIDENT WILL GET REPORT FROM MEXICO

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—President Wilson will receive Wednesday a detailed report of conditions in Mexico from Paul Fuller, who has just returned from a series of conferences with General Carranza and other Mexican leaders. The president will decide today or tomorrow on the exact date for the evacuation of Vera Cruz and measures to be taken for the protection of refugees.

PRESIDENT PRAYERFULLY WORKING FOR PEACE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—President Wilson said today that he was prayerfully working for peace in Europe but indicated that nothing of a definite or formal character had yet been done. He told callers that publication of stories that he would call a world conference to discuss peace interfered with his serious work. The president decared that a world's crisis exists and that only serious remedies would be discussed.

WILL PROTEST DESTRUCTION OF RHEIMS CATHEDRAL

PARIS, Sept. 21.—The Havas agency says that the government will lodge a protest with all the powers against the destruction of the cathedral at Rheims. It is said that the cathedral sheltered a large number of wounded Germans who had been picked up and were being cared for by the French hospital authorities.

TO DEFEND THE GERMAN FRONTIERS

LONDON, Sept. 21.—An officer just returned from Soissons states that an aeroplane reconnoisance has given rise to the conviction that a large portion of the German force is retiring with its trains and heavy stores, says a despatch from Paris to the Express.

It is believed that orders have been received from Berlin for the main forces to retire and defend the German frontiers.

CHRISTIANIA, via London, Sept. 21. Dr. Fridtlof Nansen, former Norwegian minister to Great Britain, caused a sensation Saturday night in this quiet and punctilliously neutral capital, where he stated, before an assembly composed of prominent members of the cabinet and students of Christiania university, that Norway's situation is as precarious as that of Belgium.

Dr. Nansen's proposal for one year compulsory service in the army was coldly received by the members of the government, but with cheers from the remainder of the audience.

"If Belgium had been prepared," he said, "Germany never would have violated her neutrality and possibly the whole war would have been averted. Our position is as serious as Belgium's. We are between two oceans where the big naval battle of the war probably will be fought. Belgium proved that neutrality without military preparation is not sufficient production."

PARIS, Sept. 21.—After having become accustomed to good news during the days of the German withdrawal, Paris was made a little nervous through the silence of the war office.

Now the capital is reassured by the steady file of prisoners arriving from the scene of action. Saturday 1500 prisoners were brought here. Friday 1200 arrived and on the preceding days since the Germans first fell back, 1000 to 1500 has been the daily average. More than 10,000 prisoners of war are now here.

Reference to last night's official statement, which spoke of numerous prisoners, further encouraged the people of the city.

It is insisted here that there are continued indications that Gen. von Kluck's army is in a critical situation. British officers who returned from the scene of the battle last night are silent under orders concerning the details of the fighting.

Speaking in a general way, however, one of them said: "The official statements of our successes are very much below the truth. This has been true ever since the retirement of the Germans from the region of the Marne."

The bombardment of the cathedral of Rheims has raised a strong protest, as it is declared that the action cannot be justified by any necessity of the war."

CATHOLIC MISSION FIELD

Instead of the usual sermon at all the masses at the church of the Immaculate Conception yesterday, Rev. Joseph F. McGlinchy, D. D., of Boston, diocesan director of the society for the propagation of the faith, spoke most interestingly on the work of the society he so ably represents, and urged the congregations to become active members. Before entering on his subject he expresed thanks to Fr. Tighe, O. M. I. for allowing him the opportunity of spreading knowledge of a work to which he is zealously devoted and on which he is an undisputed authority, having had years of experience in every branch of foreign missionary labors.

At the morning masses Dr. McGlinchy gave a brief review of the entire missionary field of the Catholic church, illustrating his remarks by facts that have come to his own personal notice. IN FORT PICTURES CASE

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21.—For photographing and printing pictures of Panama fortifications Charles K. Field, editor of Sunset Magazine; Reilly P. Scott, of the Army Aviation school, Robert Fowler, an aviator, and Ray Dubon, a photographer, were held Saturday for action of the U. S. district court by Commissioner Francis Krull.

Field's magazine published photographs taken from an aeroplane which Fowler piloted across the Isthmus of Panama and the government contended that their publication infringed a federal statute, which makes it a treasonable offense to disclose military secrets.

NOT LOOKING FOR PEACE

German's Official Organ Comments Upon Statement of German Ambassador to the U. S.

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—Commenting upon the alleged statement of Count Von Bernstorff, the German ambassador to the United States, that his nation was looking for peace upon condition that the entity of German territory would be preserved or as so claimed in Washington despatches, the North German Gazette, the official organ, declared in its issue of Sept. 20 that the government had not yet even considered the matter. His assertions are intended, the paper says, "to foster the impression that we have tired of the war in spite of our victories in the east and in the west. Peace overtures may not be looked for until the war, forced ruthlessly on our people, is brought to an honorable conclusion."

The official statement given out last night made mention of the bombardment of Rheims. It said that Rheims was in the battle line of the French and that the Germans were obliged to bombard it. Orders to save the cathedral have been given. The statement also made reference to the progress on other points of the line. In this respect, it says:

"The attacks on the French are progressing at several points in the central Vosges. At Donnon, near Serones, and at Luneville, near Snales, in the German Vosges, their offensive has been repulsed.

"There is no news from the eastern (Russian front) camp."

ATHLETES AND ATHLETICS

The Lawrence and New London players will have a much larger purse to split this year than Lowell and Hartford divided last fall. That crowd at Lawrence Saturday sent a satisfied smile to the countenance of every ball player on both dugouts. On second thought we'll amend that last statement. Nobody saw Mike Lynch smile.

Harry J. Corwin defeated Thomas Southam Saturday in the semi-final round for the championship of the Longmeadow Golf club. The only other opponent whom Mr. Corwin will have to face is E. L. Childs.

Ty Cobb certainly did some batting in the Sunday double header between the Red Sox and Detroit. The famous outfielder walloped the ball safely four times in the first once for a triple and again for a double. In the second contest Cobb was credited a double and a single. Boston won both games without an effort.

Hildebrand started things off well in the eighth by drawing a pass from the usually steady Pearson. Alec seemed unable to find the plate for some reason or other. If Thompson had been rushed to the rescue sooner it is quite probable that Lawrence might have pulled the game out of the fire.

Three games still stand between the Braves and the Giants with about three weeks more to play. Stallings' men, unless they take a bad slump, should spurt home a winner. The National league race should prove as spectacular in its finish as it has during the past two months.

The high school football team is hard at it now getting in shape for a long schedule. The squad looks better each succeeding day's workout. There is a dearth of material on hand this year for a first class eleven and with Rach Leggat and Jim Rooney at the helm their development should be but a matter of a few weeks at the most.

Manager Marcotte of the Lawrence Manufacturing company's team, is anxious to play the C. M. A. C. aggregation another game. In a communication to The Sun Manager Marcotte states that his team is willing to meet the C. M. A. C. club on October 3d at Spalding park for a purse of $100.

IROQUOIS ARE IT

Speaking of baseball championships the crowd which flocked to the North common Saturday afternoon will bear evidence that one of the hottest hit-and-run contests played in these parts in many moons was staged there on the "big fellers" diamond with the Iroquois and Athletics as combatants. Yes, it was some game.

These two teams of thirteen-year-old home run hitters mixed it up on the diamond on five previous occasions and so decided to play for a stake last Saturday. Ten large American dollars were hung up on the outcome of the contest and the eighteen youngsters "went to it."

Umpire Young Tom Ed Smith was hard put to it on several occasions but managed to cheat fair most of the time and, curiously enough not a murmur of dissatisfaction could be heard in the ranks when the smoke of battle had cleared away. Which same was probably very lucky for Young Tom Ed.

However, to get back to the game. The Iroquois sluggers were not to be denied Saturday and hammered three Athletic pitchers all over the lot. Sixteen big juicy tallies were scratched on the scoreboard for the Iroquois while the Athletics were hanging up an even half dozen.

From the manner in which the winners went after every ball which was in the vicinity of the plate we should say that they were a little short of pin money or needed the ten bucks for a vacation. Slam, bang and away went the ball a half or mile or so or less into the outfield. It was surely a great day for all those who wore the Iroquois war paint.

The lineup of the two teams was as follows:

LAWRENCE ALDERMAN SHOT

LAWRENCE, Sept. 21.—Alderman John G. Todd, director of public health and charities was in a critical state in the municipal hospital last night from the effects of a bullet wound in his right lung. At the city home, where he resides, it is stated that the injury was accidentally sustained about 3 o'clock while he was cleaning a rifle.

Mrs. Todd said that the bullet passed through the lower lobe of the right lung. His condition would not permit Drs. Dow and Allen, who were summoned, to probe. At one time it was thought that he was sinking, but later one of the physicians expressed the opinion that he had about an even chance.

The alderman was chosen a member of the city council for two years and had announced his candidacy for re-election.

MANAGER PIEPER OF LAWRENCE

Baseball Pilot Has Done Wonders With Down-river Team

Pieper May Win Series With a Club Inferior to New London Team

More and more, as the games of the post-season series between Lawrence and New London are passing into history do the fans of the down river city realize just what Manager Louis Pieper is to their city's representative in the New England league. As the innings rolled by in the games at Riverside park Friday and Saturday, a common expression heard in grandstand as well as bleachers was "that Pieper is certainly a great manager." And it was true beyond question.

To Louis Pieper belongs the credit of getting the Lawrence team into the post-season series. It has been his untiring work all season and his wonderful accumulation of baseball brains that lifted Lawrence into the lead and then kept her there.

Now with four games of the series already played and the two clubs on even terms, Pieper's part in the inter-league struggle becomes even more pronounced. In other words it is now "up to Pieper" to pull off the deciding games with an inferior ball club.

It is Pieper's vim and, dash, his spirit of never-give-up and his indomitable fighting qualities which are relied upon now by the Lawrence fans to win the large end of the purse for the defenders of the New England league inter-league championship which Lowell won last season.

LOUIS PIEPER

SERIES TIED UP

New London Wins 4th Game 4-3 and Evens up With Lawrence

New London came from behind Saturday in the eighth inning of the fourth game of the inter-league series and batted out three runs and a victory. There was no more scoring after this and New London was returned the winner over the New England league champs, 4-3.

Powers the most dependable slabster of the Eastern Association club and Alec Pearson veteran pitcher in this circuit were opponents from the firing and strangely enough neither of them finished the game. Pearson was driven from the box in the eighth while Powers was taken out in this inning to allow Hildebrand to bat for him.

It was another interesting contest with thrills and excitement galore. Several innings were played while the spectators watched the game's progress with bated breath. Errors were quite freely scattered through the game and the hitting was harder and more frequent than in any of the previous games.

New London landed on the ball for no less than ten safe blows while Lawrence was present with only half that number. In fact the only earned run which the down river club had to its credit was a four base lift over the left field fence by Danny O'Connell in the seventh.

Thompson finished the game for Lawrence while Greenwell went in to work for New London. Neither southpaw was in danger in the ninth although Greenwell was wild at the start.

Over five thousand fans took in Saturday's game a delegation of several hundred Lowell people being present. The score:

C. M. A. C. WON

Defeated Lawrence Co. 8 to 4—Game Was for Purse

Spalding park Saturday was the scene of an interesting diamond battle between local amateur clubs, the C. M. A. C., and the team from the Lawrence mills, in which the former team was returned the winner by an 8—4 score. Quite a delegation of fans turned out to the game in spite of the fact that the recent conflagration at the ball park made grand stand seats unpurchasable.

Kentucky feuds had nothing at all on this game, and Umpire Joe Cronin kept his hand on his life insurance policy wherever he was called upon to render a close decision. Luckily for Joseph a single run did not decide the contest.

From start to finish both teams went after the game. To make matters more strenuous a well filled purse was hung up for the winners to grab and this fact, added to the "antip" in evidence under ordinary circumstances, made the game well worth the price of admission.

If "rooting" could win ball games the winner of Saturday's diamond squabble would have been hard to pick. Each team had its constituents lined up in goodly array and the opposing pitchers, as well as the rest of the team, got theirs.

However, to hie back to the game: The winners deserved to win and even admitted so themselves. Prescott was "touched up" for 13 bingles and his share of the purse, while Little held the weavers, spinners, dyers and whatever else they do in a mill, to eight safe hits. After all's said and done, 'twas a good game.

After the game the C. M. A. C. team and their rooters made merry to their hearts' content. The city was not allowed to remain ignorant of the fact that they had won a ball game. Trucks bore the victorious club about the principal streets while their loyal backers modestly announced to the public at large the outcome of the afternoon's contest. The box score of aforementioned contest readeth as follows:

CHARLES F. TAYLOR DEAD

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Charles F. Taylor, aged 60 years, probation officer of the East Boston district court and a lifelong resident of East Boston, died yesterday forenoon at his apartments in the Mayerick House, East Boston. Heart failure was the cause of death.

He had been in poor health since last May, but he managed to attend to his duties until the latter part of last week.

Born in East Boston, Mr. Taylor, before he reached the age of 12 years, was forced to leave school and help support a widowed mother. He went to sea for many years, first sailing on a fisherman and later taking to the coastwise traffic. He sailed into almost every port on the Atlantic ocean and served as first mate on several ships.

He was also a master pilot, serving in the position of pilot for five years with the Boston & Bangor Steamship company. Most of his earnings were speedily dispatched to his mother.

After a number of years on the sea he returned to East Boston at the request of his mother, and then followed the painting industry until 20 years ago, when he was made custodian of the old East Boston courthouse. Ten years ago the late Judge Albert E. Cleary appointed him probation officer of the East Boston court.

The late Justices Cleary and Dinlek and the present Justice Joseph H. Barnes had frequently complimented him for the efficiency of his work.

Mr. Taylor leaves one sister, Mrs. Ellen Needham of Wireton, Penn. The funeral will take place Wednesday afternoon at 386 Meridan street, Ea. Boston.

LYNN BOY IS MISSING

LYNN, Sept. 21.—In an effort to secure information concerning the whereabouts of her 17-year-old son, John R. Kelley, an English high school pupil, who has been missing since July 8, Mrs. Fred G. Kelley of 178 Beacon Hill avenue has asked the assistance of the police.

The boy is supposed to be in Maine. He left home, presumably, to seek a position as pianist in an orchestra in a New Hampshire summer hotel. His father has discovered that the boy did not secure the position, if he applied for it. The father has searched quietly several Maine cities and towns and believes that in Portland he found a clew which points to the fact that the boy was in that city during the summer.

ESCAPED FROM HOSPITAL

MAN MENTALLY UNBALANCED CAUGHT BY OFFICER MALONEY

After regaining consciousness in St. John's hospital, where he had been removed Saturday night after a near successful attempt at suicide, William L. Cahill of Bridge street wrapped himself in a white sheet and was making a quick getaway via Stackpole street when he was apprehended by Patrolman Maloney and marched back to the hospital. However, the hospital authorities believed that the man had recovered sufficiently and he was sent to the police station for the night and released early yesterday morning.

According to a story told the police Cahill was out Saturday night and when he arrived home suddenly became despondent and secluded himself in his sleeping room. His wife stepped out of the house for a short time and when she returned, it is claimed, her husband was lying across the bed overcome by gas.

Patrolman Jack Sullivan, was soon on the scene and sent in a call for the ambulance, in the meantime administering first aid treatment. Cahill was removed to the hospital and when he showed signs of recovery the doctors left his bedside, believing that he would sleep the rest of the night. But, the man was not satisfied with the surrounding conditions and in some way he made his exit and was detected flying down Stackpole street, clad in nothing but a sheet and was quickly held up by Officer Maloney. The man seems to be mentally unbalanced.

CAMPAIGN COMMITTEES

"Joe" Hibbard take notice!

Only 10 of the candidates for party nominations at the state primaries tomorrow have complied with the provisions of the new corrupt practices act of 1914 which declares that "No person acting under the authority or in behalf of a (campaign) committee (not elected by the voters of the commonwealth) shall receive any money or other thing of value, or expend or disburse the same until the names of the chairman and treasurer and the names of such additional members in the case of committees not elected, shall have been so filed."

In other words, all candidates who have campaign committees must file with the secretary of state the names of the men constituting such committees and especially the names of the chairman and treasurer. Unless candidates get busy they are liable to be charged with violations of the law. Just how seriously offenders will be treated, as this is the first year of the act's operation, is another question, but the law remains, however.

Those who up to yesterday had complied with the provisions of the new act are Henry C. Atwill of Lynn, candidate for the republican nomination for attorney general; Frederick W. Dallinger of Cambridge, candidate for the republican nomination for congress; Carl C. Emery, Newburyport, candidate for representative nomination in the 25th Essex district; Edward G. Frothingham of Haverhill, candidate for councillor nomination in the 5th district; Harry C. Howard of Brockton, candidate for congressional nomination; Albert P. Langtry of Springfield, candidate for the republican nomination for secretary of state; Hon. Samuel W. McCall of Winchester, candidate for the republican nomination for governor; George E. Moulton of Newburyport, candidate for representative nomination in the 25th Essex district; Frederick H. Tarr of Rockport, candidate for councilor nomination in the 5th district, and James MacPherson of Framingham, candidate for representative nomination in the 7th Middlesex district.

It is provided that whoever violates any provision of this section (658), which requires the filing of the names of chairmen and treasurers of campaign committees before any money is received by them or paid out by them, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $100, or by imprisonment for not exceeding three months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

According to the law, it is the duty of the secretary of state to report to the attorney-general all violations of the corrupt practices act.

Today's paper had a political advertisement in behalf of Hon. Joseph H. Hibbard, signed by several well known men as a "Hibbard campaign committee." "Joe" had better get their names down to the state house by next mail and avoid complications. No other local candidates appear to have campaign committees.

MASS. STATE FIREMEN

WILL HOLD ANNUAL CONVENTION IN ATHOL BEGINNING WEDNESDAY—LOWELL MEN TO ATTEND

Fire Commissioner James H. Carmichael, Fire Chief Saunders and a number of the local firemen are planning to attend the 35th convention of the Massachusetts State Firemen's association which is to be held in Moose hall, Athol, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week. Committees have been working diligently for several weeks to make this event as memorable as those in the past years and it is certain that each member of the local fire department whose day off comes while the convention is in session will attend and join with the firemen of the state to make the meeting the largest ever held in Athol.

Between 500 and 600 delegates are expected to attend and Chief F. P. Hall of the Athol fire department has been a busy man arranging to house them all.

The convention will be called to order by President (Chief) Edward W. Dahill of New Bedford at 2.30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. There will be addresses by George W. Bontelle, chairman of the Athol board of selectmen, and Chief Hall.

A feature of the first meeting will be a report on the firemen's $15,000 relief fund by former Chief E. S. Hosmer of this city. On Wednesday evening there will be an address by William O. Arnold, chief of the Salem department on "The Recent Conflagration at Salem." Other speakers are on the program. An interesting program has been arranged for Thursday which will include a speech by Capt. James F. McKissock of this city. Friday will also be taken up by speaking and discussions on topics of interest to fire fighters.

The members of the Athol fire department have appointed sub-committees whose special duties will be to promote the interests of the convention in every conceivable way. In addition to making extensive plans for the comfort and entertainment of the members of the association who may attend, they are also preparing an interesting entertainment program for the ladies in attendance, and it is expected that a large number of the firemen's wives will be present and become interested in the work.

The officers of the association are; President, Chief Edward W. Cahill of New Bedford; first vice president, Chief W. H. Pierce of Arlington; second vice president, Joseph A. Sanders of Somerville; secretary, D. Arthur Burt of Taunton; treasurer, Supt. H. R. Williamson of Worcester.

"DRY" CAMPAIGN

Opposed by C. L. U.—Will Take Resolutions to State A. F. of L.

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—A resolution calling for the opposition of organized labor to the Anti-Liquor League campaign which is to be carried on in this state this week, was adopted at the meeting of the Boston Central Labor union yesterday.

The same resolution will be presented at the convention of the Massachusetts State Branch, A. F. of L., which began this morning, and a hard fight will be waged to enroll the support of the hundreds of thousands of men and women in this state against the passage of the Hobson-Sheppard bill, now before congress, for nation-wide prohibition.

Every delegate to the C. L. U. who attended the meeting yesterday, was recorded in favor of the resolution.

Text of the Resolution

The resolution was:

"Whereas the object of this crusade is to create a sentiment among the voters of this state favorable to the passage of the so-called Hobson-Sheppard bill, now before congress, which provides for national prohibition and the summary closing of the doors of thousands of breweries, distilleries, cooperage plants, and other establishments throughout the country that are now engaged directly and indirectly in the manufacture of beer, wine and other liquors, and,

"Whereas the employing brewers of this country, and in sharp contrast to the attitude of the big interests conforms to the principal of the eight-hour day, the closed shop, and pay a higher rate of wages and provide more decent working conditions than any other industry in this country, and most especially the big interests, whose whole endeavor is to bring down wages and crush organized labor down to their own level, as recently witnessed in the states of Texas and Colorado, resolved by the Boston Central Labor union,

"That the intelligent workingman of this country is a conservator of that grand principle written in the Declaration of Independence: the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. He sees in the destruction of legalized industry a violation of that principle—the loss of his employment, the confiscation of his employer's property, and the casting adrift of hundreds of thousands of unemployed upon an already overcrowded market, an invasion of liberty, an obstruction to the pursuit of happiness, and he sees, looking at the case from a personal standpoint, that it is his industrial life that is taken from him, his liberty to work that is invaded and his happiness after years of citizenship and homemaking that is ruthlessly torn from him."

Approve Bridge Tenders' Request

Among the other resolutions adopted were: "That the common welfare demands the immediate establishment of a general freight, passenger and intelligence post covering the entire business of public transmission and that every senator and representative elected to the 64th congress should be pledged to this program."

The second approved the request for increases in wages of the members of the Bridge Tenders' union employed by the Massachusetts highway commission.

The third endorsed the bill before congress known as the Palmer bill, at the request of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks. This bill is for the reduction of night work in postoffices and allows overtime pay for work done outside of the hours allowed by law.

Still another resolution read:

"Resolved, That the manufacture and sale of instruments of war for private profit should be prohibited within the borders of the United States.

"Resolved, That the government of the United States should hereafter undertake the manufacture of such instruments of war as it deems necessary for national defense."

President William Kobs was elected to represent the organization at the American Federation of Labor convention, which opens in Philadelphia on Nov. 9.

Credentials were received and delegates seated from Machinists' union, Local 264; Typographical union 13 and Newspaper Writers' union 1.

Secretary Dunderdale announced that all organizations which have not received their donation to the Higgins and Young bail bond fund can get a check by calling on him at the C. L. U. headquarters on any night except Wednesday.

Titus, for many years a resident of Squantum, was sung by Mrs. Brigham.

STREET CORNER BADLY LIGHTED

It will be remembered that about a year ago a young lady was assaulted and knocked down at Dow's corner, which at the time was well lighted "by the lights from the store windows." The young lady suffered a nervous breakdown as a result of the attack. The man was arrested. At the present time under similar circumstances the same thing could happen or even worse and the chances would be in favor of the culprit escaping.

C. hall yesterday afternoon. About 300 voters were present and all listened attentively to the remarks made by the respective candidates. The meeting was presided over by Lawyer Arthur L. FRENCH SEABORNE TRADE UNFETTERED

An Official Communication From Bordeaux Reviews Work of Fleet Since Outbreak of Hostilities—Army and Navy Cooperate

BORDEAUX, Sept. 21.—An official communication addressed to the navy and reviewing the work of the fleet since the outbreak of hostilities says:

"The navy was called upon to cover the return of troops to France from Africa, which was done satisfactorily.

"Assisted by the British forces in the channel and the North sea, the command of the sea was attained from the first day the war broke out. The French and British fleets also assured the security of the Mediterranean after the flight of the Goeben and the Breslau and the enemy has not appeared again. The German fleet did not leave its base. Nevertheless, the British fleet was able to fight a naval battle off Heligoland, from which it emerged victorious. It is impossible to know whether the enemy's fleet will end by accepting the challenge but meanwhile the allied squadrons are mistresses of the sea and are blockading the German and Austrian coasts forcing the enemy to live almost exclusively on themselves and reckon only on their own resources. This is certain assurance of ultimate success for us if the war is prolonged."

The communication proceeds to show that French seaborne trade continues to enjoy full liberty of movement and concludes by emphasizing the manner in which the navy and the army have co-operated for the defense of the country.

FRED H. STUDLEY

BOSTON, April 21.—Fred H Studley, 38, married, of 507 East 6th street, South Boston, was found dead in the engine room of the steamer Loretta at the Public landing, City Point, So. Boston, at 5.20 yesterday morning. Although it is believed that death was due to a fall down the ladder, there are mysterious circumstances connected with it that bother the friends of the dead man.

Studley was an engineer and up to two years ago was employed by Capt. Frank Gethro, proprietor of the boats at the Public landing, including the Loretta. His last employment, it is said, was with the George Lawley company, at Neponset. He was well known about the City Point district. It is said that of late he has been about boats most of the time.

Capt Ed Junkins and Engineer Geo. Kaulback of the Loretta were getting the boat ready for a big party of members of the South Boston Yacht club that enjoyed an outing at Peddocks yesterday. Junkins and Kaulback boarded the Loretta. Kaulbach went to the hatchway, which is on the main deck directly in front of the pilothouse. He says that he had to push back the hasp on the side of the hatchway before opening it. This part of the hasp has been broken several days and consequently the hatchway was not locked.

When he threw back the cover and prepared to step in, he was horrified to see at the foot of the iron ladder the body of Studley. The feet were away from the foot of the ladder, the right knee drawn up and the head was thrown backward and rested on several life preservers.

Capt. Gethro notified the police and soon Medical Examiner McGrath arrived and ordered the body removed to the North Grove street morgue. From his casual observation of the body he said that Studley had been dead but a short time.

From the story of several persons about City Point who know Studley quite well, the police are satisfied that he was under the influence of liquor late Saturday night. He was refused admission to one of the yacht clubs and went his way, only to be taken in charge shortly afterward by Harold Peacock and James McCorry, two well known young men of the Point district. They say that Studley was in a dazed condition and did not seem to know where to go. They brought him to the Public landing and placed him in the forward cabin on a settee and resting on several life preservers. That was at 11.45 Saturday night, they say.

The friends of Studley and the police are unable to account for his getting into the engine room below the deck and reached only by an iron ladder containing 10 rounds. It is possible, and thought quite likely by the police, that after sleeping a couple of hours in the forward cabin, Studley may have felt the cold, and wanting to get under cover, started for the engine room. The iron ladder is quite steep and difficult, under ordinary conditions, to get down. A man even slightly under the influence of liquor would have great difficulty in making his way down.

The police are of the belief that death was accidental, although unable to account for the hasp being closed on the hatchway. It would be almost an impossibility for anyone to go below against their will, as the opening is only large enough for a body to crowd through.

MEETING OF WARREN CLUB

The members of the Warren club held their regular weekly meeting yesterday morning in the club rooms in Middlesex street. President John H. Farrell occupied the chair and called the meeting to order promptly at 11 o'clock. A grist of important business was transacted and reports of committees read and accepted. A committee of two, Frank Finnerty and Fred Smith, was appointed to arrange for an exhibition at the coming dance and were instructed to engage two prominent dancers. Secretary Edward Barrington's report showed the club in a flourishing condition and everything going along nicely. After the meeting dinner was served and the afternoon was spent enjoyably in a musicale at which many of the friends of the members were present.

GRAPHIC STORY

Of Rheims Cathedral—Priest Sprang Between Men and Rifles

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The Rheims correspondent of the Daily Mail sends this story of the damage wrought in the cathedral there.

"The magnificent cathedral of Rheims, which was a national monument of universal fame, is now no more than empty shell of charred and blackened walls. It is not yet known to what extent its stonework has been weakened by the flames and whether it can later be restored but it will never be what it was before.

"The fire started between 4 and 5 Saturday afternoon after shells had been crashing into the town all day. Over 500 fell between early morning and sunset. A quarter of the city several hundred yards square was set afire, the flames spreading from street to street.

"The cathedral on Thursday had been turned into a hospital for the German wounded so as to secure for the building the protection of the Red Cross flag. When the first shell struck the roof everyone believed it was merely a stray shot but later in the day a German battery on a hill four miles away began making the great gothic pile its particular target.

"Shell after shell crashed its way into the old masonry and stonework that had stood the storms of centuries or fell into the deserted streets round about. At 4.30 some scaffolding around on the east end of the cathedral where repairs were going on caught fire and soon the whole network of poles and planks was ablaze. Then the roof of the old oak timbers caught fire and soon the ceilings of the nave and transepts were a roaring furnace.

"The blazing pieces of carved woodwork crashed to the floor, where piles of straw had been gathered in connection with the work of the field hospital. As soon as this caught fire the paneling of the altars, the chairs and other furniture were devoured.

"The German wounded would have been burned alive if the French doctors had not removed them at great personal risk. There was a bad moment, while these German wounded were being removed. A crowd of people had gathered outside watching the flames and when the Germans, some in uniform, were brought from the transept door, the crowd gave a howl of uncontrollable rage and earnest voices 'screamed: 'Kill them! Kill them!' Some of the soldiers in the crowd actually leveled their rifles to despatch the Germans when a little priest, the Abbe Andrieux, sprang between the Germans and the rifles.

"'Don't fire,' he exclaimed. 'You would make yourselves as they are.'

"The crowd calmed somewhat and the Germans were carried into the shelter of the museum amid hoots and threats."

SICK CHILDREN LOVE CASCARETS FOR THE BOWELS

Most of the ills of childhood are caused by a sour, disordered stomach, sluggish liver and constipated bowels. They catch cold easily, become cross, listless, irritable, feverish, restless, tongue coated, don't eat or sleep well and need a gentle cleansing of the bowels—but don't try to force a nauseating dose of oil into the little one's already sick stomach—it is cruel, needless and old-fashioned.

Any child will gladly take Cascarets Candy Cathartic which act gently—never gripe or produce the slightest uneasiness—though cleanse the little one's system, sweeten the stomach and put the liver and bowels in a pure, healthy condition.

GREAT ARTILLERY DUELS ARE BEING CARRIED ON

PARIS, Sept. 21.—There is little change in the situation in the great battle of the Aisne, according to the latest official announcements. The extreme left of the allies continues to bear the brunt of the fighting and one time Saturday or Sunday—the official reports do not bring out the time clearly—the Germans in a furious counter attack gained some ground which, however, was speedily regained by the allies.

Elsewhere along the big battle front the successes of one side have been counter-balanced by forward movements of the other but military experts here claim the allies have bettered their position so far as it affects the continuation of that struggle since they have reached and entrenched themselves on high ground.

The best opinion here, however, inclines to the belief that the frontal attacks of forces, both apparently of equal strength, will continue for some time yet without result unless something unforeseen happens.

The havoc wrought in the famous cathedral of Rheims by the German guns, as told in official and other despatches from the front, is the subject of bitter comment here. It is stated that the French government will lodge a protest with all the powers regarding the bombardment of the cathedral which unofficial despatches say was sheltering several hundred German wounded and flying a Red Cross flag.

Tension is Frightful

Copies of letters said to have been found on German prisoners continue to be made public here. One credited to a Brunswick non-commissioned officer reads:

"Our life is not a gay one. For nine days we have camped in water and we are living on beets and sugar. Bread is a luxury. The tension is frightful and our losses are enormous. There is not a single officer left in my company, which has been reduced from 250 to 60 men."

Other letters of a similar tenor are given out and wonder is expressed at how men living on raw vegetables have still the courage to fight with such desperation, especially under the most trying weather conditions.

LETTER FROM AUSTRIA

Frank Holecek, of 21 Fourth street, employed as a printer in the Merrimack Manufacturing company has received a letter from relatives in Prague, Austria, describing the hardships caused to families in that country by the European war. The letter which was posted in Austria five weeks before it was received here, states that all the flour, sugar, etc. in the homes of the non-combatants were seized by the military authorities. These were placed in storage houses for the use of the army in the future. Mr. Holecek states that only cows were left on the farms and at the time the letter was written, it was feared that they would be seized. All men between 20 and 37 had been called out to fight in the Austrian army and it was believed that the age limit would be increased to 45.

VICTIM OF BURNS

Lillian A. Belanger, aged 4 years, 7 months and 26 days, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Albert Belanger of 7 Henry avenue, died this morning at the Lowell hospital, the result of burns received late Saturday afternoon.

As published in the late edition of The Sun Saturday afternoon, the little girl found matches and ignited them while her mother was shopping in the city. Her clothes caught fire and soon the little one was a mass of flames. Her little sister managed to extinguish the flames but not before the child had received fatal burns about the body and face. The ambulance was summoned and the little girl was removed to the Lowell hospital, where despite the best of medical attendance she passed away at 3 o'clock this morning. The body was this forenoon viewed by Medical Examiner J. V. Meigs and later removed to the home of the parents.

TEDDY'S WESTERN TOUR

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 21.—Refreshed by a good night's rest, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt today entered upon the second day of speechmaking on his western tour. His first address of the day was in Kansas City, Mo., at noon. Tonight he will speak in Kansas City, Kas.

Colonel Roosevelt's voice is holding up well under the strain of the trip although he has several times violated physician's orders and made impromptu speeches.

MUST USE SOFT PEDAL

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—"Rag" with the soft pedal on is the newest rule at the Back Bay telephone exchange on Belvidere street. No more may the girls at midnight gambol to the raucous strains of "Oh, My Love," played fortissimo, and all because the remainder of Belvidere street wish to sleep o'nights.

The girls on the night shift at the exchange have been having a heavenly time in the wee small hours with their songs and piano playing, but the residents have declared that it is as otherwise than heavenly as is war. They have protested collectively and individually and many have packed their tents and fled.

Landlords who discovered that the proximity of the exchange meant a proportionate absence of tenants finally appealed to the telephonic powers, with the result that the girls are allowed to play the piano with the soft pedal on, but that on sufferance, and if any more complaints are heard the piano is closed forevermore after the day shift has left the office.

THE KASINO

Lowell people who enjoy good dancing and who wish to profit by observation, will flock to the Kasino tomorrow night, when Mr. George Coffey and his sister, Miss Anna Coffey, are scheduled to make their first appearance in this city. These artists come direct from the Castle House, Coney Island, where they have given exhibitions daily the present season to thousands of people. In their conception of such dances as the maxixe, the hesitation and the one-step, they are said to be exceptionally good. The Kasino will be open three nights this week, tonight, Tuesday and Saturday nights. As usual, Miner's orchestra will be there.

ATTEND THE PRIMARIES

Every Voter Should Go to the Polls Tomorrow Between the Hours of Noon and 9 P. M.

The state primaries will be held tomorrow in every city and town in Massachusetts and in Lowell, the polls will open at noon and close at 9 p. m.

A movement has been on foot for some time, to change the hours of the primaries to correspond with those on election day when the polls are open from 6 in the morning until 4 in the afternoon, but nothing was done toward making the change this year, and hence the caucus hours tomorrow, will be as they were last year.

Although there have been few of the spectacular features that have sometimes characterized the local campaigns, it is expected that a fairly heavy vote will be cast. The voters are becoming educated to primary voting, for its importance is now being generally appreciated as the result of weak nominations made in the past through the apathy of the citizens at large. The fact that there are many lively contests on, in the republican ranks from the state ticket and down the line, and in the democratic, on county, senatorial and representative offices gives assurance of a good vote, in the cities at least. On the republican state ticket contests of unusual importance are being waged for every office except that of governor, with a particularly lively fight in progress for attorney-general in which the candidates involved are: Former District Attorney John J. Higgins, of Somerville; J. Mott Hallowell, of Newton; John A. Curtin, of Brookline; Henry C. Atwill, of Lynn and James A. Stiles, of Gardner. Lowell has a special interest in John J. Higgins, whether "for better or worse" because of the fact of his wide acquaintance here, and his former connection with this city as the county's district attorney. Many entertain the belief that Lowell has some kind of a grievance against the former district-attorney and will knife him at every possible opportunity but others are of the opinion that the enmity has been softened by time and the satisfaction of having defeated him a year ago and that his ability will be recognized and a good vote given him at tomorrow's primaries.

Joseph Monette, of Lawrence, one of the republican candidates for state auditor should get special recognition in this city, and undoubtedly he will, because of the fact that he started his career in this city, upon his admission to the bar, and resided here for several years before going to Lawrence. Outside of Messrs. Higgins and Monette there are few familiar names, from a local standpoint, on the state ticket.

The republicans have contests on for county commissioner and senator in the seventh and eighth districts and in the representative districts, though in the 19th district, Rev. C. M. Williams of Billerica, has withdrawn leaving a clear field to Former Alderman Burton H. Crosby, who will contest at the polls with Rep. Kiggins, Maj. Barnes, of Newton is making a red hot fight against County Commissioner Gould while Julius Meyers of Cambridge, the third republican candidate is campaigning actively though his activities have not extended as far north as Lowell. In keeping with his statement made some time ago to the effect that Lowell will decide the democratic nomination for county commissioner, Deputy Sheriff Walsh of South Framingham has spent much time in this city, and was here yesterday. Judging from the expressed sentiment he will poll a big vote in this city. Associate Commissioner John J. Butler, of Wakefield, who enjoys the distinction of being the first democrat to get even an associate commissionership in Middlesex, has made several speeches here and will be here again this evening. Senator McCarthy of Marlboro has friends in this city but little has been seen of him locally, as he has been devoting his energies to the lower end of the county. The three Cambridge candidates have not been heard from beyond their own city.

With the opposing democratic candidates for senator in the seventh, representing the cities of the district, Lowell and Lynn, there is little doubt that a good democratic vote will be cast in the four wards of those cities. On the republican end, Candidate Kimball hails from Littleton and therefore should get out the county vote while Candidate Reither lives in Lynn whose two wards in the district are democratic.

In the eighth district the vote will come out largely in both parties, owing to the variety of contests involved. Candidate Dunigan whose home town in North Chelmsford expects to see a fair-sized democratic vote from the country towns. There is no question about the size of the vote in the seven Lowell wards that are included, owing to the lively contests for representative. Mr. Dunigan has made certain that the Dracut demmies will have no excuse for not coming out by providing a special car to take them to the polls. The Courier-Citizen's political writer sprang a joke at the expense of the democratic candidates in this district in today's issue, but as he omitted to provide a diagram with it, the point hasn't been recovered, if it ever existed. Little has been heard from Messrs. Marchand and Best, the republican candidates in this district, though each has done much personal canvassing.

The representative contests have been so zealously waged that there is little doubt that nearly all the democratic voters in ward two, and the republicans in wards three, six and seven will visit the polls.

This year as last you will still be obliged to call for your democratic and republican ballot as heretofore, but next year there may be a change, for there is now before the legislature a bill which provides for a secret ballot at the primaries. Under this proposed law the voter will receive a ballot containing the names of the candidates of both parties and as he enters the booth there is no way of telling how he is going to vote. To preserve party lines, however, the law will provide that whichever party the voter selects in his preference for the head of the ticket he must adhere to strictly in voting for the other officers and any ballot on which the voter has expressed a preference for candidates of two parties will be thrown out. It would seem that this will involve a large number of "split tickets" and hence a number of blanks, but the secrecy feature is what makes the proposed law popular.

Don't forget to go to the polls, between the hours of noon and 9 p. m.

BARN FIRE STARTS OTHERS

Charles Connors of Watertown Sustains $1000 Loss—Outbuildings Are Also Destroyed

WATERTOWN, Sept. 21.—While eating breakfast yesterday morning Charles Connors of 65 Gilbert avenue was startled to see his barn in flames. He despatched a neighbor to sound an alarm and tried to subdue the fire. He managed to save his horse.

On the arrival of a fire-fighting force the barn was found burned flat. The wind blew the sparks a quarter-mile and menaced the whole western residential section.

The side of the house of Daniel Flynn, 49 Charles street, which is in the rear of the Connors property, was scorched and two small outhouses nearby were destroyed.

It is said that men were smoking in the Connors barn and that sparks ignited the hay. The loss will not exceed $1000.

THEATRE VOYONS

A two-part Vitagraph comedy entitled "Rainy the Lion-Killer," with that funny fellow, Sidney Drew, will be our feature today. Taken by mistake for a lion tamer, Mr. Drew portrays the part of an adventurer, who has to show his power, before the people. How he does it would make a horse laugh especially the scene where the bears chase him. "The Better Man" is a very strong offering with an interesting story. Mary Pickford in a new offering, Sofie Clutts in a piece of comedy and the Patho Weekly complete the show.

TWO AUTOS COLLIDED

Several persons had a narrow escape from being seriously injured about 7.30 o'clock last evening when two automobiles collided near Byam's corner on the Littleton road, about a mile from Chelmsford Centre. Upon hearing the crash, residents of that section rushed to the spot but fortunately no one was injured. The automobiles were badly damaged. The names of the owners of the machines could not be learned, but it is said that one belonged in Concord, Mass., while the other was on the way to Manchester, N. H.

VERY FORTUNATE MAN

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21.—It was not until a voyage of 172 days from Emden, Prussia, was completed here after passing through heavy storms off the coast of Uruguay and being ice bound off Cape Horn that the captain of the French bark La Fontaine learned of the European war. Captain Pierre Rathouss, the vessel's commander, said he saw two sailing vessels capsize in a storm off the southeastern coast of South America, but was unable to give assistance.

OFF TO AUSTRALIA

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21.—The steamer Maitt of the Union line left port for Australia early today, having been delayed 36 hours by a war strike of the stokers. The stokers went aboard an hour before sailing time and demanded an extra $25 in wages for the return trip for "war risk." It was refused and they all went ashore where they were soon arrested for disorderly conduct. Late last night the company officials appealed to Mayor Rolph, who obtained the release of the stokers and they went back to work at the old rates.

SLEEPYTIME TALES

BY VIRGINIA VALE

"The Chicken With the Brass Ring"

NOTE—The Sleepy Time Tales, as the name implies, are planned to interest children when nothing else will. They will appear daily in The Sun. Watch for them.—Editor.

Once upon a time a great many little chickens were eating their breakfasts from bits of bread that were near the steps of the kitchen. Cook looked out and saw them and said: "The poor things. They look hungry."

So she shook the tablecloth which had some scraps in it out the door at their feet. Madly they rushed for the pieces and one fluffy brown chick found for his portion a small brass ring which had rolled down with the crumbs.

As he pecked at it to see what it was the ring flew up in the air and over the chicken's head much to his surprise.

"Look! Look!" he said. "See what I have on my neck!"

The rest of the chicks crowded around and all looked at him in wonder, and thought how great he was. This pleased him so much that all that day and the next he went around holding his head very high in the air.

As the days passed he grew very fat, for all of the others would step aside when he came up to eat, and he would eat as much as he could stuff. Then he would walk away with him head in the air and the brass ring shining in the sun.

When he was a few months old the man who owned all of the chickens came into the yard to look them over. When he saw the one with the brass ring around his neck he said: "Ah, that is a fine fat young broiler. How did he get so much fatter than the others? That one will make me a fine breakfast."

That night the chicken with the ring around his neck was taken away from his friends and they never saw him again. Even to this day, if you go to his old home you will find some of the chickens telling their chicks about the chicken with the brass ring.

IS SLEEP AN ILLUSION?

Statement That Man Does not Require Slumber—Invisible Prompter Tires of Performing

Gabriel d' Annundio as a believer in the occult and a student of a physical phenomena is the new role wherein the poet is about to reveal himself to Paris in a book entitled "Asperity of the Unknown."

After many months of investigation, during which he has attended with leading scientists of the day numerous seances, at which the services of the best known mediums were invoked, d'Annunzio has arrived at the conclusion that man does not like an undivided individual life. Always by his side, he insists, is his double, magic being, working out for him and prompting all actions.

"Man himself," the poet asserts, "does not require sleep, which is only an illusion. It is his invisible prompter that tires of performing for him those every-day actions which man attributes to his own personality.

"When man's mysterious partner requires rest, all he does is to remove form the mundane body something essential to man's wakefulness, whereupon sleep supervenes.

"The process is like that of the mechanic who, wishing to damage a piece of machinery, removes an essential part. Exactly what man's magic aid removes in order to send him to sleep I do not know, but I am convinced we shall discover in time."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

PROF. HORRIGAN DEAD

PEABODY, Sept. 21.—Prof. Thomas F. Horrigan died suddenly at Sydney, N. S. Saturday. He was born in Peabody 49 years ago, graduated from the public schools and from Holy Cross college, class of 1884.

He was professor of languages at Antigonish college at Sydney, N. S. He was a member of Knights of Columbus and A. O. H., in that city. He leaves three sisters, Mrs. Nellie M. Sullivan of Peabody, Miss Norah Horrigan and Sister Julia Aloisa, Notre Dame college of Providence; two brothers, David J. and Richard F., both of Peabody. The body will arrive here Tuesday.

DEFENSELESS MAN

A woman writes to a Manhattan newspaper denouncing men. This time it is for the women's hats. According to this writer, men set the styles and design and manufacture the hats, and women are "at their mercy."

There seems to be some refuge. Man devised all the things women want, and he also is responsible for all the things they don't want. Man invented the ballot, the Welsh rabbit, public office at public expense, university degrees, the woman's page, public oratory and the monocle. All all have been wrested from him. He also invented the sensible shoe, and at any cost he is to be made to see he cannot retain the monopoly.

But there is the other side of the picture. It seems he invents the millinery. As it is well known he also invented the high cost of living, staying out after 11 p. m. (if he can get away with it), baldness and the science of grumbling at the way the steak is cooked, there is a damning catalogue of offenses to his credit.

Who can say a good word for man? It counts for nothing that he invented the four-in-hand tie and bar examinations, for it has taken the whole force of a movement to make them available to the protesting sex. And in revenue for the breaking of this age-long privilege, he glowers in a corner and invents women's hats.

Let him be exposed in all his machinations. Perhaps he invented the hatpin, too.—Brooklyn Standard Union

CALL FOR RIVERMEN

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—In order to meet the scarcity of experienced men for river and canal traffic, the military authorities have ordered that all rivermen belonging to the Landsturm need not enlist, and a call has been made for old rivermen, who have entered other trades, to return immediately to river work.

It is pointed out that it is of vital importance to keep commerce on the inland water routes going, for the transportation of foodstuffs, fuel and other necessities, and the authorities are doing their utmost to maintain this service. The only thing lacking, it is said, is the experienced river man, so many of whom have gone to war. So far as ships and other shipping facilities go, it is declared, there is no handicap.

GERMANS FALLING BACK

GERMANS BOMBARD PRINCIPAL BUILDINGS

CHALONS SUR MARNE, Sept. 21.—The Germans continued bombarding the principal buildings of Rheims today and wrought heavy damage. Persons who have returned here from Rheims say that it is difficult to find words to describe the attacks and counter-attacks of infantry amid showers of shot and shell and in a deluge of rain. The Germans, they declare, seem in a desperate hurry to finish their task and are enraged at the stubborn resistance of the French. The Germans, they say, had all the best of the opening of the battle, but the situation is now changed and the French have been able to gain positions on high ground that will enable them to fight on even terms and they declare the Germans will never be able to break their lines at Rheims.

Soldiers are coming back here covered with mud and drenched to the skin by the heavy rains which continue to fall. The chalky clay ground north of Rheims has been so softened, they say, that it will be impossible for a retreating army to get away its artillery. To this fact they attribute the desperation with which the Germans are fighting. Floods caused by the continuous rains are likely to greatly impede military operations, especially in the east where the streams are beginning to overflow. The River Savonreuse already is out of its banks and some habitations are isolated. While rescuing a family, M. Goublot, the administrator at Belfort was seriously injured. He was mentioned in the order of the day for bravery by the general in command.

Germans Retreating to Own Border Fortifications—Heavy Rains Make a Morass of the Valley of the Oise—Germans Claim That Cathedral of Rheims Could Not be Saved

LONDON, Sept. 21.—While the fortunes of battle fluctuate along the line extended in France, desperate efforts are being made to execute turning movements on both flanks.

The Anglo-French left wing is exerting every ounce of strength to turn the flank of the German general, Von Kluck, who is reported to have received reinforcements; while the German left, according to a cautiously worded announcement in Berlin, is making equally strenuous efforts to outflank the French right resting on Verdun.

Under ordinary weather conditions the Anglo-French task would be the easier, for the reason that Verdun, heavily fortified must fall before the French right can be seriously threatened but on the German right the heavy rains have made such a morass of the valley of the Oise that the allies are hardly likely o move along what would be their natural course until the German front north of Soissons has been driven back. The high ground between Noyon and Chauncy has been heavily fortified by General Von Kluck and dominates the whole valley of the Oise.

That the Germans chose their present defensive position deliberately is indicated by the fact that their heavy artillery rests on cement foundations which must have taken time to construct

Some reports received in London declared that the reason for the desperate German counter-attacks on Rheims is found in a movement of the allies which has virtually isolated Rheims from Laon, a town 30 miles to the northwest. If this is true all of General Von Kluck's marvelous strategy in protecting his sorely pressed left flank will have proved futile.

More or less definite rumors continue to circulate in London to the effect that the Germans are preparing a great retreat from France on their own border fortifications.

The latest of these is a story related by a French officer who has returned to Paris. This officer declared that an aeroplane reconnaisance has given rise to the conviction that a large portion of the German forces is retiring, accompanied by trains of heavy stores and leaving only 200,000 men to cover the retreat.

One reason for the dearth of news from the battlefront is to be found in the bad weather, which has rendered ordinary signaling and aeroplane scouting unreliable. Stories now filtering through set forth that the Germans made desperate efforts, the middle of last week to recapture the ground they had lost along the river Aisne. Day and night the assaults continued. The Germans, played into action by bands rendering military airs, hurled masses of men upon the hastily constructed intrenchments of the allies. It was cold steel against cold steel and ended in the allies holding the positions desperately won by them.

Could Not Save Cathedral

Rheims, where the ruins of the famous cathedral are still smoking is likely to prove an object of controversy long after the military forces now in the field have ceased to contend for its possession. The Germans claim that the cathedral was in the line of fire and that it was impossible to save it in spite of their instructions to spare the building.

As had been anticipated a check had been given the operations of the victorious Russians in Galicia by the strong fortress of Przemysl, which had opened fire with artillery on the Russian invaders.

According to advices received here the advance of the Serbo-Montenegrin forces into Austria continues while the Montenegrins are reported as within a few miles of Sayajevo, the capital of Bosnia. According to this intelligence, the Serbo-Montenegrin force expects to enter Sayejevo within a week.

A. F. OF L. PRESIDENT AGAINST STATE BOARD

Would Appoint Single Commissioner Who Should be Bona fide Labor Man—Annual Convention Opened in Boston Today

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—The affiliation of 62 additional labor bodies, representing more than 10,000 members during the past year was reported at the opening session of the four days' annual convention of the state branch, American Federation of Labor today. President Edward S. Alden in his annual report advocated the abolition of the state board of labor and industries and the substitution of a single labor commissioner who should be a bona fide labor man.

In commenting on the labor measures considered by the last legislature, the president's report said:

There were several men in the last legislature, holding membership in unions, that proved faithless to their obligation to do all in their power to improve the condition of the toiler.

Hon. John J. McManmon

FOR SENATOR

From the eighth district, is well known to the citizens of Lowell as a vote getter in the past. For two years he represented Lowell in the house of representatives and did such capable work in the interest of his constituents that he was given the nomination for senator from the eighth district which, though then strongly republican, he succeeded in turning over to the ranks of democracy. In the senate he was given membership on the committees on public health and agriculture and did excellent service on both. He is entitled to a good share of the credit of pushing along the work on the three new infirmaries for the care and treatment of tuberculosis. Also for better sanitary regulations in the factories and workshops.

HON. JOHN J. McMANMON

Ex-Senator McManmon was defeated for his second term to which he was justly entitled because of the divisions and general democratic discontent created that year by the Springfield democratic convention. Mr. McManmon has many friends in the republican and progressive parties who would like to see him again nominated and if given the nomination with a united democracy at his back, he will be sure to make a lively and successful fight for election.

MRS. JENNIE SNYDER WROTE SHE WAS GOING ON AN AUTO TRIP TO CAMP

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Mrs. Jennie Chisholm Snyder, since the death of her husband about four years ago, had acted as housekeeper for her father, Alex Chisholm, a carpenter, with whom she made her home at 9 Goldsmith place, Roxbury. She was about 30 years of age, and besides her aged father and three sisters she is survived by her two young sons, Robert, 13 years old, and Eugene, 11 years old. She was born in the South End.

The first news of the accident was brought to the father of the dead woman by reporters. He knew only that his daughter was on an automobile tour, the latter information being discovered by him on a piece of paper when he arose yesterday morning. Mr. Chisholm notified one of his daughters, Mrs. Marion Kimball of Adams street Roxbury, who went to Nantasket by boat, reaching there shortly after her sister had passed away.

It was learned last night that Mrs. Snyder left her home about 4 o'clock yesterday morning intending to motor with some friends to Cohasset, where the party were to spend the day in a camp.

FIRE LOSS ABOUT $500

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Rats and matches caused a fire last evening in the fourth floor of the building 497 East Broadway, South Boston, owned by George H. Bond of Newton. The upper part is occupied by Elisha Goldthwaite as a lodging house, and on the lower floor is the real estate office of James E. Coveney.

Fire was discovered in the roof gutter over the alley at the side of the building, and when the firemen arrived the building was full of smoke. The flames worked inside the rear wall on the fourth floor and the firemen had to do much chopping and tearing away to put them out. The loss was about $500.

FIRE AT FITCHBURG

SMUDGE IN RUBBISH BARREL IGNITES—LEGLESS MAN TAKEN FROM BLAZING STRUCTURE

FITCHBURG, Sept. 21.—A fire that started in a barrel of rubbish in the rear of the two-story brick block, 1060 to 1072 Main street, yesterday, damaged the block and contents $12,000. The fire was discovered by Lewis Morin, who saw the smoke, and, after he took Gustave Bjern, a legless man, from the building, he pulled in an alarm from box 9. The department found volumes of smoke pouring from the building when it arrived and several streams of water were turned on the flames. The firemen succeeded in checking the fire in the east end of the block and had it under control within a short time.

The second story of the block was occupied by J. F. Bowden and family, Edwin S. McField and family, S. J. Talbot and Mrs. Bridget Bjern. The first floors were occupied by the Watson bakery and Fitchburg public market, and the adjoining stores by James Ramage and Carl Nelson. The flames swept through that part of the building occupied by the bakery and gave the firemen a stiff battle owing to much inflammable material being stored there. The volume of smoke drove all of the tenants from the building and smoke filled the store of the Fitchburg pubic market and adjoining stores. The fire broke into the tenement occupied by J. F. Bowden and family and considerable furniture was destroyed, while water and smoke damaged that which was saved.

The smoke also damaged the furniture in the tenement occupied by Mrs. Bridget Bjern and in that of Edwin McField. The fire was evidently burning for some time before it was discovered.

A further investigation will be made by Chief Murnane. Mr. Watson, proprietor of the Fitchburg bakery and Fitchburg public market, said that his damage would be between $5000 and $6000. The bakery, he said, was practically destroyed, while his stock in the market was damaged by smoke. The building is damaged to the value of $3600, which is covered by insurance. The other loss was to the tenants, part of which is covered by insurance. The block is owned by Mrs. Alice Sargent and is one of the old landmarks of the city. It was recently remodeled.

PRISONER STABS ANOTHER

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Rumors of a stabbing affair at the state prison, Charlestown, were circulated last evening, which, upon investigation, proved to be grossly exaggerated. It was said that a prisoner stabbed another with a knife, inflicting a serious wound in his chest.

Acting Warden Allen said last night that last Monday, when the prisoners were marching to their workshops, a prisoner, who has been examined by Dr. Steadman and adjudged insane, stepped from the line and struck another prisoner with a shoe knife, inflicting a slight cut. The wound was so small that Dr. Joseph J. McLaughlin, the prison physician, decided that to stitch the wound was unnecessary, and the injury was dressed at the prison hospital. The blade of the knife was about an inch and a half long.

The assailant was taken to a cell, examined the following day, and on Wednesday was removed to the Bridgewater Insane hospital. A prison official said that he had no trouble with the prisoner and the attack was one which could be expected only from an insane man.

FLOWER SUNDAY SERVICE

Wellesley College Exercises in Houghton Memorial Chapel Attended By More Than 1500

WELLESLEY, Sept. 21.—Never in the history of Wellesley college was the opening of an academic year preceded by a more striking Flower Sunday service than that of yesterday in Houghton Memorial chapel on the campus.

More than 1500 persons, indicating practically every undergraduate, filled the chapel. Following a custom inaugurated by the founder of the college, Henry Fowle Durant, the chapel was banked with masses of flowers from the college greenhouses. On the text "God is Love" Rev. Dr. George A. Gordon, pastor of Old South church, Boston, preached a sermon in which he gave the students, particularly freshmen, kindly counsel.

This evening the student body assembled in chapel again, when a memorial service was conducted for Wellesley's founder.

The academic year will begin tomorrow morning. The first recess will be from Nov. 25 to Nov. 27.

BOY FELL FROM TRAIN

G. A. POWERS, AGED 9, OF FITCHBURG, SERIOUSLY INJURED ON RETURN FROM HOOSAC TUNNEL

FITCHBURG, Sept. 21.—George A. Powers, the 9-year-old son of Anna M. Powers of Green street, is at Burbank hospital in a dangerous condition as a result of falling from a train between Royalston and Baldwinsville yesterday. The boy left this city with his grandparents yesterday to see the Hoosac tunnel.

He was about to leave the rear platform, from which he was viewing the scenery, when he lost his balance and fell over the guardrail. He was placed aboard the train and taken to the hospital, where an operation was performed. The boy has a fractured skull, fracture of the left elbow, multiple bruises of the body and probable internal injuries.

CARPET MILLS TO UNITE

Offer Made to the Bigelow Stockholders—Merger to Form Biggest Carpet Unit in the U. S.

Following the financial organization of the Bigelow Carpet corporation by bankers and other interests closely identified with the Hartford Carpet corporation, R. P. Perkins, who is president of both corporations, has addressed a circular letter to stockholders of both corporations outlining a plan for their consolidation. Since the refinancing, the Bigelow company has been practically under the management of the Hartford carpet corporation but the actual merging of the two companies would be followed by considerable economies in management, manufacturing and selling. If the stockholders approve of the merger it is proposed to transfer all assets of the Hartford carpet corporation to the new Bigelow carpet corporation, the authorized capital of the latter being sufficient to cover the necessary stock issues. It will have outstanding its authorized capital of $13,550,000 consisting of $5,500,000 at 6 per cent. cumulative preferred and $8,050,000 common, thus making it the largest carpet unit in the country and one of the biggest textile propositions in New England.

The 7 per cent. preferred stockholders of the Hartford will receive 1 1-2 shares of new 6 per cent. preferred of Bigelow Carpet, common stockholders of Hartford will receive 1 1-2 shares of new Bigelow Carpet common. Upon the present Hartford common 7 per cent. is now being paid. No rate has yet been set for the Bigelow Carpet common. In addition Hartford Carpet stockholders will receive proportionate dividends, covering the period from July 1 to October 1.

JURY IN BRASSARD CASE REPORTED A DISAGREEMENT THIS MORNING

When superior court reconvened this morning the jury in the case of Rose Brassard, charged with keeping a house of ill fame in Hanover street, reported that they were unable to reach an agreement. They were out from 12 o'clock Friday noon until after midnight. The defendant was held in $1000 bonds for the December sitting.

The facts surrounding a row which occurred in Framingham on the afternoon of July 5th, were heard by Judge Keating and a jury in the criminal session of superior court today when James Dargenio pleaded not guilty to assaulting a fellow patriot and carrying a concealed weapon, contrary to law. The case was called shortly after the resumption of court and continued throughout the forenoon session.

It seems that the complainant was standing in front of his house in Framingham on July 5, when the defendant came along and an altercation over some tomato plants was started. The government alleges that Dargenio drew a long knife from his hip pocket and stabbed his companion, inflicting a wound which required medical attendance. He was arrested a short time afterward and denied the charges.

At 3.40 o'clock the jury in the Dargenio case reported that it had found the defendant guilty in both counts. A six months' sentence to the Lowell jail was imposed on the first complaint while the second was placed on file.

Two charges, using profanity and drunkenness, were preferred against Thomas J. Duris of Cambridge, aged 22 years, when he was arraigned on continuance in superior court this afternoon. Defendant pleaded guilty to each complaint and was ordered to pay a fine of $25 off each one.

Duris, it will be recalled, was one of a gang of young men that was causing an alleged disturbance at Lakeview one evening during the past summer. When accosted by Officer Cullinan and Messrs. Ferguson and Colburn, proprietor of the bath house, it is claimed Duris used profane language and strongly resisted arrest.

The Dracut officer claimed that the defendant stated that if he were arrested he would carry the case to the superior court and secure a discharge as he is a member of the same club as the district attorney. However, today's decision did not corroborate with his statement. Duris was fined $15 for drunkenness and $5 for profanity in the lower court.

Filipi Impara of Framingham failed to answer to a complaint charging him with the larceny of a watch valued at $25 and his default was recorded. Richard F. Smith, non-support, was also defaulted.

Bertha Hunnewell of Winchester pleaded guilty to being an idle and disorderly person and was placed on probation.

Edson A. Pero, proprietor of the Paul Revere house, an historic Lexington hotel, was arraigned in the criminal session of superior court today charged with illegally keeping liquor with intent to sell. The Paul Revere house is one of the oldest hotels in the town and had been conducted by the defendant for about two months before the seizure of liquor.

Chief Maguire and two Lexington police officers testified that they raided the Paul Revere house on the afternoon of July 7th and found about 33 bottles of beer and a small amount of whiskey. One of the officers testified that he saw a number of men enter and leave the house daily and when cross-examined stated that the only evidence he found on them was "that their breaths smelled of liquor."

The defendant claimed that he was celebrating a wedding anniversary and purchased the liquor for his guests.

BIG JEWELRY ROBBERY

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—Three men believed to be the remainder of the quintet which robbed Mrs Nellie Clark of jewelry valued at $50,000 at Kankakee last week were arrested here today.

On their persons the police found diamonds valued at $4,000 and $6,000 in currency. Two alleged members of the gang were captured Saturday.

FERRYBOAT COANICUT BURNED

JAMESTOWN, R. I., Sept. 21.—The passenger ferryboat Coanicut, which plies between this town and Newport, was burned to the water's edge at her wharf here yesterday. The fire is believed to have started near the boilers. The Coanicut was built in 1886 at a cost of $50,000. It is believed that part of her engines can be used again.

VON KLUCK CHECKS TERRIFIC PRESSURE

Retirement of German Forces From French Soil Must Shortly Become Inevitable Unless Offensive is Assumed — Austrians Appealing for More Nurses and Doctors

LONDON, Sept. 21, 1 p. m.—England waited in vain today for confirmation of the reported beginning of a retirement of the bulk of the German army from France and is prepared for another period of anxiety and suspense which must last so long as the great battle of the Aisne, now in its tenth day, remains undecided.

Though British official reports say that the allies still are gaining ground their progress necessarily is snail-like and the public here is beginning to feel that the turning point of the battle never will be reached until one side or the other has been outflanked. The suggestion that the allies would accomplish this Saturday or Sunday on the German right was not fulfilled and apparently their efforts are being continued today.

For days the British press referred to Von Kluck's peril, but so far the German commander has been able to check what must have been terrific pressure from the British and French left.

Naturally, there has been no intimation from German sources in corroboration of the report that a comparatively small part of the German army proposes to maintain merely a defensive position in France while the main body makes a stand on the frontier, but optimists among the allied adherents believe it to be extremely improbable that Emperor William's troops again during the present war will assume a general offensive on French territory. Then contend, moreover, that a retirement of the German forces from French soil must shortly become inevitable unless the offensive is assumed.

In British eyes a further encouragement is seen in the backward movement of the army of Crown Prince Frederick William, which, it is argued, means the failure to establish for the invaders new and shorter communications by way of Metz and the Rhine.

Destruction of Rheims Cathedral

Hardly less discussed today than the battle itself is the destruction or at least the partial destruction of the Rheims cathedral. This edifice has been called the urn of French history and its loss perhaps will be a greater shock to historians and worshippers of antiquity than was the destruction of the library in the Belgian town of Louvain.

The Germans were quick to issue a formal statement from Berlin saying that the damage to the cathedral was unintentional and was incidental to absolutely necessary operations.

AUSTRIANS APPEALING FOR MORE NURSES, DOCTORS AND MEDICAL SUPPLIES

Vienna despatches say that the newspapers of the Austrian capital continue silent concerning the operations in the Austrian province of Galicia and against the Servians, but they are appealing daily for more nurses, doctors and medical supplies to be sent to the front. The Austrian hospital equipment is said to be woefully inadequate, the wounded often lying on the field from 24 to 48 hours, greatly increasing not only the suffering but the mortality.

From Trieste, the principal Austrian seaport on the Adriatic sea concerning whose attitude in case of attack there has been so much speculation, came a statement today from the government that in case of being attacked he would not evacuate the city.

"Trieste," he said, "will resist. The Anglo-French fleet, however, before attacking Trieste must deal with the Austrian fleet at Pola."

LOWELL BOARD OF TRADE

The executive committee of the Lowell board of trade started work on the various matters suggested by the directors at the recent meeting assigning work to the committees. This action was taken today at a meeting of the executive committee.

Direct action was taken on the matter of a census of the city to be secured by the water department meter readers. Supt. Thomas of the water department was consulted and urged to have the meter readers secure the number of persons in each house thus tabulating a total of population without regard to names. Supt. Thomas agreed to suggest the plan to Commissioner Carmichael and said that he could see no reason why the work could not be undertaken. He thought that the general public should be given to understand plainly what is being done in order that no one might connect the questions asked relative to numbers in each house with any idea that it would affect water bills.

Secretary Murphy was instructed to make a definite request of the city government that Chester and Windsor streets be made one way streets. It was also agreed by the executive committee members that in the present state of finances in the city any urgency on the part of the board of trade for expensive municipal work would be inadvisable.

Germans and French Engage in Battle of Bayonets in Holes Dug by the Germans

LONDON, Sept. 21.—5.40 a. m.—The correspondent of the Times at Laferte-Milon, under date of Friday gives a description of the German counter-attack made on Wednesday to recover ground lost on the Aisne. He says:

"They came on singing, with their drums beating behind them. Even at night they had their band to play them to the attack.

"We met them in the holes they themselves had dug and as a French soldier who told the story said: 'You know in a fight like that we had them at an advantage for our bayonets are longer than theirs, only all these straps about our chests and shoulders get in our way and hinder our movements. The Germans are better off in that respect and so are your soldiers, as they can use their arms freely.' The Germans would break for a while and go back but as soon as we sent them running another lot would come on and so it went, time after time."

LOCAL MUSICIANS' UNION

WILL CALL OFF THE STRIKE THIS WEEK—AGREEMENT REACHED WITH SOME THEATRES

It was announced this morning by the secretary of the local musician's union, Charles A. Delaronde, that the musicians' strike in this city will practically be settled this week. Already an agreement has been reached between the union and the following theatres: Royal, Jewel, Colonial and Academy of Music, while in the Opera House, Keith's and the Owl it is hoped some settlement will be reached before the end of the week.

The musicians employed at the Royal, Jewel, Colonial and Academy of Music are to return to their work this week. The official of the musicians' union refused to disclose just what agreement had been reached between the proprietors of the above theatres and the union, saying that a favorable agreement had been reached.

RALLIES THIS EVENING

THE CANDIDATES WILL ALL BE ON THE FINAL ROUND AND MAKE KNOWN THEIR QUALIFICATIONS

There will be political speeches galore this evening for a number of candidates for the nomination in the various state offices have planned to tour the city and expose their platforms. In many instances the speakers will use the traditional soap box as a platform, while in other cases the candidates will speak from an automobile or carriage.

One candidate for representative, however, has made arrangements for a novel campaign and this evening he will tour the city in an automobile followed by a large auto truck containing a piano and some 25 singers, and a real concert will be given. This will be a stormy night on the coast and undoubtedly the many voters who will gather on the streets will be well repaid for their trouble.

Mill News

Industrial conditions in Dover, N. H., are even more encouraging at the present time than they have been in several previous years at a similar period of the season. This appears to be especially true of the Pacific mills, the officials of which anticipate new developments within a short time on the site of the print works recently removed to Lawrence.

A three-story brick mill, 73 by 267 feet, is contemplated by the Industrial Tape Mills Co.

Property in Franklin, Mass., comprising 160,000 square feet, has been transferred to the Massachusetts Waste Co. to be used as a site for a factory building. It is claimed a new process for cleaning cotton mill sweepings and waste will be installed. It is estimated the building, with equipment, will cost approximately $75,000.

It is reported that the Eagle Knitting company and the Eagle Spinning mills, Ltd., Hamilton, Ontario, have practically accepted a very attractive proposal to enter a merger of all the largest knitting mills of Canada, including that of Penman's Ltd., Paris, Ontario. It is expected that the Hamilton companies will be taken in at a valuation of $1,500,000.

The Cordis Mills, Millbury, manufacturers of coarse color cottons, are making additions to their plant which will double the present capacity. One building will be 300 by 82 feet, three stories high, and a picker house 50 by 46 feet, 2 1-2 stories high. It is expected that everything will be completed in about three months.

Installation of new machinery at the plant of the Brown Manufacturing Co., Concord, N. H., chambrays, ginghams, and outings, is complete, and in operation. It comprises 24 spinning frames, totaling 6000 spindles, and 40 Draper looms. This enlargement makes equipment of plant 16,000 spindles and 540 looms.

Fort Drummer mills, Brattleboro, Vt., intend to increase capital stock from $75,000 to $525,000. This issue is in form of 6 per cent. preferred stock, payable on any interest period at par after 20 years. The equipment of company consists of 40 cards, 36,000 ring spindles and 650 looms.

Simple Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring, use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve, and entirely destroy, every single scale and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

BATTLE ON BOULEVARD

TWO SPANISH WAR VETERANS ROUTED AFTER BRIEF ENGAGEMENT

Sergeant William Prescott, and Private Fleming, engineer and oiler at the boulevard pumping station and veterans of the Spanish war, had an experience last night they will not soon forget. Brave soldiers as they are recorded to be, they made a bold assault upon the enemy; but after the first onslaught they turned and fled to the garrison where reinforcements gave them first aid to the wounded. The odor which arose from the dum dum bullets almost stupefied the gallant occupants of the fort; but they stuck manfully to their task until the unfortunate soldiers were divested of their clothing. The pole cats when attacked did a fine job, and at last accounts they were still looking for other victims; but the fort smells like a perfume factory. Prescott and Fleming were seen at an early hour this morning clad in strange habiliments going by the most secluded routes to their respective homes refusing to answer any question relative to their thrilling adventure.

NOTES OF THE CHURCHES

The Man is a Failure Who Says the World Owes Him a Living—New Feature at St. Anne's

The morning service at the Kirk Street Congregational church yesterday was addressed by Rev. Charles H. Williams of Gloucester, whose text was taken from the words of Paul: "I am indebted alike to the Greek and the barbarian, the wise and the unwise." Rev. Mr. Williams' sermon was forcible. He declared that the man who says the world owes him a living is a failure and that success is the knowledge of responsibility.

Eliot Congregational

There was a large congregation at the Eliot Congregational church yesterday morning. The pastor preached a sermon on the subject, "The Worth of a Man," comparing the value of one man's soul with the material things of the world, and said that it more than outweighs wealth, culture and all other things that are good in the eyes of man. The pastor said that the real sadness of the great war is the future of the children, who will be forced to grow up in poverty and misery. A special musical program was also given.

Rally Sunday

Next Sunday will be observed as rally Sunday, and the Sunday school services will be held in the auditorium at the usual school hour. A meeting of the Knights of King Arthur will be held this evening and officers will be elected to serve for the ensuing year.

Centralville M. E. Boy Scouts

The Boy Scouts of the Centralville M. E. church will hold a meeting this evening in the church vestry and a large attendance is desired. The Kirby club has a meeting scheduled for tomorrow evening while the quarterly conference will be held Wednesday evening at 6.30 o'clock.

St. Anne's

The regular schedule of services was resumed at St. Anne's church yesterday. Rev. Appleton Grannis officiated at the first service at 7.30 o'clock and at the 10.30 o'clock service, when a sermon was delivered. The Sunday school session was held at 12 o'clock under the direction of Rev. John W. Suter. Rev. Samuel H. Jobe officiated at the evening service which was held at 7 o'clock. Previous to the service the regular choir of the church, assisted by the choir of the Guild of St. Cecelia sang in the church yard for about 15 minutes and a large number of passersby stopped and listened to the hymns.

CATHOLIC MISSION

of Japan and the other millions in India. To give a faint realization of the vast hordes of China he said that if the people of that country were to pass a given point at the rate of 100 per minute, it would take eight years for all to pass.

To carry the gospel of Christ to these millions throughout the world, there are 65,000 Catholic foreign missionaries consisting of 15,000 priests, 15,000 sisters and 5000 brothers. These have left all that makes life worth living for people generally and have undergone fearful privations to spread the Gospel of Christ. Most of them are wholly or almost wholly dependent on funds supplied by the faithful, and they labor amid privations which in many cases break down their health. Dr. McGlinchy told of having received photographs of missionaries' dwellings which would not be tolerated as shelters for dogs in Boston. He mentioned one instance of a convent in the Philippines which had an empty cracker box for a tabernacle and he told of the hundreds of chalices that were sent last year from the Boston headquarters of the society. He related the life of one Swiss missionary—a typical mountain man of rugged constitution—who, after a few years of activity in mission work lost his splendid color, had become stooped and had changed into a prematurely old and broken man. In a letter telling of his death his bishop wrote to Dr. McGlinchy: "It was a case of starvation, pure and simple."

One of the most interesting parts of the reverend speaker's sermon had to do with China. He related how thousands of girl babies are destroyed daily and how the sisters rescue hundreds of them, thus saving them from death and bringing them up as Christians. He told of actual photographs showing the infants dying from exposure after having been thrown over the wall of the city or even having been thrown to the dogs and the pigs. One of the most pitiable aspects of foreign mission work, he said, is revealed by letters from the missions telling how they are compelled to refuse such doomed girls because of their inability to feed them.

After the vesper service in the evening Dr. McGlinchy spoke particularly of the great work of those who follow in the footsteps of Fr. Damien in the leper colony of Molokai. He told many incidents in the life of the illustrious martyr and of his successor, Brother Dutton, a Vermonter and a Civil war veteran who, after becoming a convert to Catholicity devoted his life to the lepers. In his last letter Brother Dutton enclosed a picture of Fr. Damien on his death bed showing the ravages that his terrible experience had made on the self-sacrificing missionary. Another interesting incident referred to a Fiji chief who boasted that he had killed and eaten 600 human beings. He afterwards became converted and presented to a missionary bishop who had labored among the cannibals for 30 years, a plot of ground on which to build a church. Not all the incidents were of a tragic nature. Many of the stories told of quaint, entertaining and humorous experiences such as are described in letters from the far away fields of missionary labor.

In conclusion Dr. McGlinchy spoke in detail of the society for the propagation of the faith urging its importance and its universal charity on those who heard him. It is world-wide in its scope and last year distributed $1,500,000 to the Catholic missions of the earth. One may become a member on payment of five cents a month, and there are various degrees of membership, entailing different degrees of payment, up to a full membership which is secured by the payment of $40 once in a lifetime. Last year $24,000 was realized in this diocese from full membership fees. The eloquent speaker asked for promoters to go among the people of Lowell and organize bands of zealous members, each promoter being asked to look after ten members. There was a generous response, many young women of the Immaculate Conception parish going to the altar rail and giving in their names at the conclusion of the various graphic addresses.

Valuable Discovery in Complexion Beautifier

Because of its peculiar power of absorption, also because it serves every emollient purpose, ordinary mercolized wax is perhaps the most valuable complexion beautifier discovered within recent years. If one uses this she needs no toilet cream. Some use powder afterward, but this is not necessary. This rule for applying mercolized wax has been found satisfactory: Wash the face with warm water, drying lightly. Before thoroughly dry, anoint face and neck with the wax, but don't rub it in. The favorite way is to use before retiring, allowing it to remain on all night and washing it off in the morning with warm water. All druggists have this wax in original one-ounce packages.

For the removal of a wrinkled or flabby condition there's nothing better than to bathe the face in a solution made by dissolving 1 ounce powdered saxolite in 1-2 pint witch hazel. Beneficial results are quickly noticeable.

Here Is The New Style Range

Instead of having the ash pan in front of the range, that takes a lot of room unnecessarily, the ash pan is in the base of the range in the shape of a coal hod, which is much easier to carry and to dump into your sifter. And instead of a hearth in front of the range there is another shelf on the front of the top, same as on the rear of the range, giving more room on top to hold kettles, giving you a better looking range with the same oven and fire capacity and a larger top and taking less space in the kitchen. This pattern is copyrighted and is not found in any other make than the CRAWFORD RANGE; neither is the single damper nor the cup flue joint nor the dock ash grate nor a dozen other improvements that make the Crawford such a wonderful selling range. There are many other good ranges, but if they are good and do good work without these improvements, the Crawford certainly is better with those aids to economy in fuel and durability and convenience. THESE PICTURES TELL A TRAGIC STORY OF DEVASTATION OF TERMONDE, BELGIUM

PHOTOS © 1914 BY AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

BY GWEN SEARS

"The Woman With Unattractive Elbows"

Note—Under this head The Sun will publish daily a brief article giving reliable advice on how to preserve and promote some feature of feminine beauty. Every treatment here suggested is applicable at home and at little or no expense.—Editor.

Few women possess soft, white and prettily rounded elbows, yet this defect is due in great part to their own carelessness.

A good scrubbing of the elbow with a stiff bristle nail brush, using green soap and warm water, is the beginning of the treatment to improve the elbow's appearance.

Follow the cleansing with massage, rubbing cocoa butter or a good massage cream. In massaging the elbow or any part of the arm, clasp it firmly with the hand, when the motion is backward and forward, rather than up and down.

A very simple bleach to apply to the arms is plain washing starch. After the arms have been washed in warm water and before they are dry, rub the starch on, allow to dry five minutes and rinse with cool water. The skin is left smooth and white.

There is frequently a peculiar tendency in the skin along the elbow to show a nutmeg grater like hardening of the epidermis. If the case be a mild one, sometimes rubbing lightly with a pumice stone after cleasing the skin is sufficient to remove it.

However, a more efficacious method of doing away with it is to scrub the surface twice a day, using a nail brush and green soap, following with a massage of cocoa butter or massage cream. When the horny krowth persists, green soap should be smeared on thickly and rubbed in with a nail brush, after which it is bound on with a muslin bandage, remaining on for two or three hours a day.

Then the arm is scrubbed off and rinsed with warm water. If the soap application proves too irritating, remove it within an hour. Massage with a skin food cream, of which lanolin is an ingredient, should follow.

LADY LOOKABOUT

I wonder how many housekeepers regret that new covers cannot be secured for their glass jars when preserving time comes around each year. In many cases the old ones, be they metal or glass, are often destroyed or lost; and with one exception, there is not a jar in the market for which new covers are furnished. It is a hardship to housekeepers to be obliged to purchase new jars when they have old ones exactly as good, but minus tops. If any dealers carry these covers, will they please advertise them? I know there is a demand.

Dangerous Poles

The angles at which some of the poles on the streets of Lowell are tilted, suggest the leaning tower of Pisa rather than the supports of trolley and telegraph wires. I am reminded particularly of one near Ellsworth street on Gorham. A few days ago I saw this pole remove part of a load of hay, yet the hay wagon was being driven at an apparently safe distance from the curbing. These poles are unsafe and a menace to the public and should be reported before actual harm has been done by them.

Making People Stingy

We all feel a wave of sympathy for the Knights of the Road, traveling gentry, unkindly known as hobos, who in their recent convention denounced the war because it makes people stingy. They feel that the possibility of being obliged to seek employment is rapidly becoming a probability, and the outlook is dismal indeed. They should be listened to as each of them, if he only attaches himself to a locality for a certain short period of time, is entitled to vote. Their number is so great that even in a city like New York they could swing an election their way. To be sure, they are mere flotsam on the stream of life, yet each of them, by virtue of being of the masculine gender, is freely accorded the privilege of the ballot, while honest, hardworking women, mothers of large families, as well as laborers in the vineyard, must obey laws of their making— Oh, what's the use!

Pupils and Teachers

School has reopened and again the small boy is hard at work. Judging from personal observation, I think the funny paragrapher who is sympathizing with the small boy on his return to school is miles away from the small boy's true attitude towards school and teachers. It is in only a few rare cases a teacher is disliked; for the greater part, children look upon their teachers as their friends, and there is a spirit of real comradeship between them which is the rule rather than the exception. The old attitude which Mr. Funnyman reflects in his jokes is a relic of his own school days, probably of a generation or more ago, when every boy looked upon his teacher as an enemy waiting to club him for imaginary offenses. Here in Lowell, as in nearly all places at the present time, there is no excuse for the complaint of overwork or of too hard work, owing to a good system of grading which insures the completion of one year's work before promotion to another, and the child who makes these complaints invariably can be found lacking in application and industry. Other causes for these complaints are poor attendance and lack of interest on the part of parents. This last entails not only a close following of the pupil's progress, as indicated by the card he carries home weekly, but by seeing that the child has sufficient hours of sleep, together with proper nourishment. Teachers are not entirely heartless, neither are they the enemies of children. If parents would appreciate these points and not uphold Johnny when he comes home with a story of abuse piled upon him by his teacher, much of the friction between all parties concerned would be removed.

Also if parents would realize that teachers cannot manufacture brains in their pupils, that they must do what they can with that which comes to them, we would hear less of the child who, if he be promising, takes after his father, but if the reverse be true and his possibilities in scholarship limited—then he has a very poor teacher.

Today the applicants for teachers' positions are required to qualify so highly before even presuming to apply, and they are then so sifted and so culled in order that only the best may be chosen, parents may feel reasonably sure that school committees are doing all in their power to provide the children of Lowell with the best possible teachers.

Getting in Your Way

Have you ever noticed that when you take pains to stand on the outer edge of the sidewalk to read the bulletin-boards at Merrimack square, just so you will avoid standing in front of anybody, somebody is sure to come and stand directy in front of you? Such an act of thoughtlessness is unpardonable, yet it is done every day by persons whose manners, apart from this instance, are faultless. Sometimes it is a man, preoccupied with business and filled with haste. More often it is a woman, and even though she be clad in an X-ray gown, one's line of vision is broken, and frequently, in the latter case, his mind is diverted wholly from the business of gathering free news. The next time you stop to scan these interesting boards, kindly assure yourself that you are not blocking somebody's view. Your thoughtfulness will be appreciated.

Like Distant Cannonading

Last Monday evening one would have been forgiven for thinking a naval engagement was going on just off the Massachusetts coast. Reports, loud and distant, coming at irregular intervals, certainly suggested it to many and when the anxiety was relieved by being assured that it was a celebration of some feast day in Lawrence at which bombs were exploded by way of expressing the holiday spirit of the participants, peaceful sleep followed. The sounds reminded many of the old settlers of war-time, and I venture to say that in more than one home the evening wore away while tales of those unhappy days were rehearsed. The reports, which resembled the sounds of shelling, brought to many the thought that we may yet be entangled in the dreadful international war, for the cessation of which we are all urgently asked to pray.

Things That Count

Nature keeps the balance of things pretty well considering her great age and man's—or woman's—many attempts to upset her plans. Last winter, while the earth was shrouded in snow, before a bird was to be seen, before even the pussy-willow dared to put forth, many women were wearing the most fragile and summery of summer hats. Mine was of open-mesh lace straw with apple blossoms and the dearest little white wings, and I never even sneezed, although a cruel March wind played havoc with me by piling freckles on top of freckles. Two months ago, before the gunpowdery smell of the Fourth of July celebration, which we did not have, had left the air, heavy velvet hats covering the head and ears closely were in order. What do we care for comfort when Dame Fashion speaks! Uncomfortable as a summer hat may be in midwinter, or uncomfortable as a heavy winter hat may be in July, there is no discomfort in the world that can equal that of being "out of style." And the man—no woman would attempt it—who tries to change this order of things is working for a forlorn cause.

CAUSED BY OVEREATING

Deficient gastric secretion, meaning a lack of the fluids necessary for digestion, is a prevalent condition. You may have it now and not know it because you are able to get along without actual discomfort even with your enfeebled condition.

But if you overeat—then you are in trouble. You have indigestion because you have given your weakened stomach too much to do. The deficient gastric secretion was what doctors call the predisposing cause, the overeating was the exciting cause. It is easy not to repeat the overeating but the predisposing cause must be corrected if you are to be well.

The secretions that digest the food come from glands that are nourished directly by the blood. When these secretions are insufficient the only way to restore their healthful condition is by building up the blood. This can be done by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the non-alcoholic tonic that assists nature in keeping the body in health. Proper attention to diet and the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills should be tried in cases of disordered digestion because it is the simple and natural way to correct the trouble.

AN OVERBURDENED WIFE

If the work that women do and the pains they suffer could be measured in figures, what a terrible array they would present! Through girlhood, wifehood and motherhood woman toils on, often suffering with backache, pains in side, headaches and nervousness which are tell-tale symptoms of organic derangements which Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—made from roots and herbs—can undoubtedly correct. Women who suffer should not give up hope until they have given it a trial.

The consciousness of being correctly gowned would enable a lady general to win a battle which would turn the tide of the world's history against the greatest odds. Joan of Arc, inspired as she was, saw to it that her beautiful white charger and her suit of white mail were in order before going into battle. These things always counted.

NEW ELEVATOR LAW

BUILDING DEPARTMENT WILL ISSUE LICENSES TO OPERATORS

A new law will go into effect October 1, by which all operators of elevators or escalators will be required to secure a license, and the office of the public building department of this city is getting ready to hold such examinations as required by law and issue the licenses.

The examinations in this city will be held under the supervision of Commissioner James E. Donnelly of the public building and license department, and conducted by the inspector of public buildings, Francis A. Connor.

(a) No person shall operate and no owner, lessee, employer or his agent shall cause or permit to be operated the elevators specified in this regulation to be operated by licensed operators, unless the person operating the same is duly licensed; provided, however, that in case of emergency such operation by a competent unlicensed person may be permitted for a period not exceeding seven consecutive days.

(b) Power passenger elevators shall be operated by licensed operators, except (1) the selective automatic push-button type when equipped with the required safeguards; and except (2) elevators with shipper ropes accessible from the landings, when equipped with the required safeguards; and except (3) a passenger elevator in a private residence occupied by one family; and except (4) a passenger elevator serving two landings only when such elevator is equipped with the door interlocking devices required on a selective automatic button-control elevator.

(c) Power freight elevators shall be operated by licensed operators if the elevators run at a speed exceeding 100 degrees per minute.

(d) Power freight elevators, except hatchway-type, carriage-type, sidewalk-type and dumb-waiters, and except elevators serving only two landings, shall be operated by licensed operators whenever (1) they are used for carrying more than three persons, including the operator, or whenever (2) they are not provided with landing gates.

(e) Licensed operators are not required for elevators used in uncompleted buildings for hoisting workmen and materials.

(f) A license shall not be required of an elevator contractor or of a mechanic engaged in the construction and repair of elevators, or of an inspector having authority to inspect elevators.

LOMASNEY FOR TAGUE

STRONGEST TO MAKE FIGHT AGAINST KELIHER—DECISION REACHED BY HENDRICKS CLUB

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Martin M. Lomasney and the other democratic leaders of ward 8, in this city, will support Representative Peter F. Tague for the congressional nomination in the 10th district.

The Hendricks club, the well-known democratic organization in the West End, had a "conference" yesterday afternoon and voted to use its influence for Mr. Tague in preference to Ex-Congressman John A. Keliher, Senator James H. Brennan, or Representative Thomas A. Noland, all of whom are seeking the democratic nomination to succeed Congressman Murray.

This action by the ward 8 leader was by no means unexpected; indeed, it has been commonly believed from the first that Mr. Lomasney would support Mr. Tague, but the matter was not definitely settled until the meeting yesterday afternoon.

The friends of Senator Brennan, the other congressional candidate from Charlestown, have done their utmost to persuade the ward 8 democrats to support him in the primaries, and it is known that Mr. Lomasney has been well disposed toward the Charlestown senator, but the ward 8 people decided that Mr. Tague would be the strongest candidate against Mr. Keliher, whose defeat they are anxious to accomplish.

It is now certain that the real fight at the primaries next Tuesday will be between Mr. Keliher and Mr. Tague.

If Mr. Lomasney is as successful in controlling the democratic voters of his ward as he has been in past campaigns that ward will give a substantial majority to Mr. Tague, probably quite enough to counterbalance the lead which Mr. Keliher will obtain in the South End—wards 7 and 9.

The chances are that neither of the two leading candidates will get a very large majority in wards 1, 2 and 6. East Boston has in Mr. Niland a candidate of its own, but he can hardly expect to win the nomination. The vote in Charlestown will be divided between Mr. Tague and Mr. Brennan; now that the former has secured the support of ward 8 the chances are that he will have a decided majority in Charlestown also, but it is said that Mr. Keliher himself has considerable strength there.

Mr. Keliher has back of him also the influence and prestige of the administration in city hall, for Mayor Curley has stated that he would support the ward 9 man.

Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald is not taking an active part in this campaign. He has been counted as a supporter of Mr. Tague, but the ex-mayor has so many friends on each side of the fence that he has determined to keep his hands off.

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Three scientific safebreakers, who wore white gloves to prevent possible identification by means of finger prints, were caught by the Chelsea police shortly before 3 o'clock yesterday morning in the basement of the store of F. W. Woolworth & Co. at 290 and 294 Broadway, Chelsea.

The cracksmen had thrown the safe over on its back and were preparing to force it with a 18-inch steel jimmy when they were detected by Patrolman Edward Ishister and Reserve Officer Valentine Elmore, who were passing the store.

Elmore drew his revolver and stayed on guard, while Ishister went to the rear entrance to the store on Cherry street. As he neared the store he heard a heavy crash, which afterward proved to be the noise made by the safe when it was overturned. He also heard footsteps inside and rapped with his night stick for assistance.

Elmore heard the call for aid and shouted to Joseph Carolan of Congress avenue, who was passing, to shout for help if anyone attempted to leave the building. He then ran around to Cherry street.

Ishister told him to get some more officers. Sergt. Shannon and Patrolmen McGauley, Glennan, E. McCarthy and Hickey soon appeared on the scene and the building was surrounded. Sergt. Shannon and Patrolmen Ishister, Glennan and Elmore broke in the rear door.

The burglars had been apprised of the presence of the police when Ishister rapped with his night stick for help, and could not be found in the upper store. The basement was then searched and two men were detected crouching behind a partition of a small room, and the third was discovered by Sergt. Shannon crouching on some boards that were nailed near the ceiling.

The police all had their revolvers drawn, and the burglars were backed up against a wall and handcuffed. One of the men wore a white glove, the other gloves were found near the safe.

Few Implements Found

A 15-inch steel jimmy and a dark-light were also found near the safe. A small bottle labeled "spirits of nitre" contained a liquid which was at first believed to be nitroglycerin, but inspectors from various departments doubted it and it will be analyzed.

The men arrested gave their names and addresses as John, alias Jack Snyder, aged 24, of 33 Stanford street, Boston; Joseph Gordon, aged 30, of 7 Dartmouth street, Boston, and Harry Davis, alias Harry Michaels, aged 21, of 21 Revere street, Revere. The names and addresses are all said to be fictitious. It was learned yesterday forenoon that Davis' right name is Jack Miller and his home is in New York.

The capture of the three burglars is one of the best catches made in police circles for some time. Thirty-five stores of the Woolworth company have been broken into throughout the country in the last few months. Most all of the breaks were made under circumstances similar to the Chelsea robbery.

Lynn Robbery Recalled

A jimmy almost identical with the one found yesterday, was left in a Lynn store which was entered a short time ago. Inspectors Kane, Thorpe and Broad of Lynn, Maurice Finn and Connolly of the Metropolitan park police and Mike Morrissey of this city visited Chelsea and scrutinized the imprisoned trio. None recognized them as local crooks and they are believed to be New York and Chicago men.

The men are charged with breaking and entering in the night time, larceny, and with having burglars' tools in their possession. They were unable to secure bail. When searched they had about $15 between them. No guns or weapons, bits, gimlets, sectional jimmies, known as "can openers," were found on them.

The police believe that the men hid their implements, if they had them, in the cellar, and Manager John E. Jeheridge will have employes overhaul the goods today to search for the tools.

May Have Cracked Bacon Safe

It is believed that the men may be responsible for other burglaries and an investigation has been started. The watchman of the William A. Bacon company, who was bound and gagged by three men several months ago when the safe was robbed, will see if he can identify the man.

The prisoners refused to talk, but conferred with their counsel, Representative Maurice Caro, in Yiddish.

Miller's identity was learned when his brother-in-law, Myer Schlesinger of New York, called at the station at 2.30 yesterday afternoon. He told the police at first that Miller was only an acquaintance whom he had met in Webster hall, at a dance and that he had promised to look him up when he came to Boston. He said he inquired at the Stanford street adress and was told by a man by the name of Dave Alexander that Miller was locked up in Chelsea.

Schlesinger was questioned by Inspector Morrissey and finally admitted that Miller was his brother-in-law. He disclaimed all knowledge of the burglary and said he left New York on the 1 o'clock train Sunday morning and was returning to New York last night. He said Miller was in New York two weeks ago.

Finger prints of the prisoners were taken by Special Officer Cahill of police headquarters. Photographs and measurements will be taken this morning after the men are arraigned in the Chelsea police court.

Patrolman Ishister was highly commended by Capt. Fitz Roy Grover for his alertness and prompt action. Officer Elmore was also praised for his assistance.

Mr. Jeheridge said last evening that there was $600 in cash in the safe.

The burglars gained entrance by cutting a panel in the Cherry street door and turning the wooden bar which fastens the door on the inside. After getting inside they again barred the door.

Best Laxative For Children

When your baby is cross and fretful instead of the happy, laughing little dear you are accustomed to, in all probability the digestion has become deranged and the bowels need attention. Give it a mild laxative, dispel the irritability and bring back the happy content of babyhood.

The very best laxative for children is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, because it contains no opiate or narcotic drug, is pleasant tasting and acts gently, but surely, without griping or other distress. Druggists sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle. For a free trial bottle write to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 451 Washington St. Monticello, Ill.

BENTLEY & & & SHAW &

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Though Walter Johnson has not been the star this year that he has been heretofore, Clark Griffith has uncovered two other youngsters who have done much to keep his team to the front. They are Shaw and Bentley. They have recently been pitching games that entitle them to be considered topnotchers, and with more experience they are expected to become reliable performers.

THE HEBREW NEW YEAR

OBSERVED IN LOCAL SYNAGOGUES—FEAST OF YOM KIPPUR COMES ON SEPT. 30

At sundown last evening, the Jewish New Year 5675 was ushered in with services in the synagogues of this city and most other cities in the world. New Year, the feast of "Rosh Hasonah," inaugurates the most solemn season of the Jewish religious year, and is most strictly observed by all Hebrews. The holy day, which began last evening, was also observed today by the Hebrew congregation and Tuesday will be observed in all the orthodox synagogues. New Year day is the beginning of a long list of important holidays, of which the day itself and Yom Kippur, the day of the Long Fast, are most strictly observed. The ten days between the New Year and the Day of Atonement are the ten penitential days.

There are several reasons why Jews celebrate the New Year in the fall. The month of Tishri—which begins at this time—is the seventh month of the year, and yet on the first of this month the synagogue year is celebrated because the number seven has been sacred to Hebrews from time immemorial. The seventh month is the holiest in the year, and during the entire month all of the principal holy days and festivals are observed.

The feast of Yom Kippur will be observed Sept. 30.

OVERDUE BOHEMIAN

Sends No Wireless—Ships Carrying 150 Refugees Sends No Report of Whereabouts

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Great inconvenience was caused yesterday because no wireless message was sent from the Leyland line steamship Bohemian, which should have arrived early in the day from Liverpool with a shipload of passengers. Not only did the liner not arrive at all, but up to twelve hours after she was looked for by the company officials not a word had come through from the skipper.

Friends of the 150 war refugees on board were on the anxious seat all day and kept the wires hot with their queries as to the whereabouts of the ship, and, of course nobody could tell them. The officials at the United States barge office at Long wharf were so busy answering the calls from all over Greater Boston and from other sections that they scarcely had time to attend to their work.

While fear of capture by Germans cruisers is said to be the reason for the non-receipt of any message, those best informed on the subject declare there isn't a German warship within 1500 mile sof Boston.

He had been employed about the beach for many years, last summer at a store in Paragon Park. He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Annie Black of Quincy.

"The Beauty Patch"

Note—Under the above caption will be published daily delightfully written articles filled with useful information on household subjects for women readers. We advise their careful perusal.—Editor.

"Marie," began Marjorie, dimpling and showing an unwonted timidity in approaching her subject, "do you suppose it would be all right for me to wear a beauty patch?"

"Why, yes, I think so, most decidedly," answered Marie.

"About every so often this artful little black patch comes into vogue and after a tentative period when "nice" women try to resist its allurement because it is supposed to be "fast," its fascination becomes irresistible and everybody takes it up until the craze runs its natural course and goes out of fashion.

"Just now the beauty patch is at the height of favor. One sees it on young girls, on smart, well groomed matrons—even on women over 60, who cling desperately to a coquettish and youthful mode of dress.

"A bit of makeup, however, is almost imperative as a background for beauty patches, effectively worn. Only the debutante with skin of peaches-and-cream tones can paste a black beauty patch against her natural complexion and stand the test.

"The least hint of pallor or sallowness will be cruelly revealed by the accentuating black patch, and even if rouge is not tolerated, a bit of powder is best for the purpose.

"This liquid white finish is easy to apply evenly and if used in moderation is less artificial looking than a coating of ordinary powder rubbed down with a cloth or bit of chamois skin.

"Color in the face is not fashionable now, an ethereal, delicate look being the ideal aimed at; but the beauty patch is rarely becoming against a dead white skin. A little color in the cheeks makes its effect a deal more coquettish—as the colonial belle well knew.

"There is a great deal of art in the application of the beauty patch. Its effect must be studied carefully and many experiments should be made before the final location of the patch is decided upon.

"If the face is very narrow, a patch at the outer corner of the eye will make it appear wider. On a broad, heavy face the patch should be placed at one side of the chin or near the corner of the mouth. And be very careful not to get the patch too large.

"An infinitessimal speck of black on the complexion will show up conspicuously, and, as a rule, the smaller the beauty patch is the more becoming it is. Just a dot of black, no larger than the head of a pin, will sufficiently call attention to a dimple if placed beside it."

These prices were actually reduced like this by women all over the country, showing that the high cost of living CAN be reduced. What they did YOU can do.

A solution of the problem of the high cost of living that is so simple, so sensible, so easily done, that every woman who reads the article will say, "Why didn't I think of that?"

ONE DEAD, FOUR DYING

Woman Killed and Man Fatally Hurt in Automobile Crash—Others More or Less Injured

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Two are dead, four perhaps dying, and four less seriously hurt as the result of Sunday accidents in New England, in most of which automobiles played the leading part.

One of the deaths, which occurred at Windsor, Vt., was due to drowning. The other death resulted from an automobile accident at Hull, in which another person was probably fatally hurt and four more slightly injured.

Accidents in Worcester and Waltham

Worcester and Waltham were scenes of accidents in which three persons sustained internal injuries, and the first-named city likewise provided a garage fire. The least harmful of the day's automobile crashes occurred in Cambridge, where a motor car ran down a patrol wagon, but did little damage.

WOMAN KILLED, MAN DYING

HULL, Sept. 21.—One woman dead, a man dying and four other persons injured, is the toll of an early Sunday morning automobile accident at Warwick's Hill, Nantasket, when a motor car owned by Frank P. Magann, a garage owner of Brighton, and driven by his son, Edward, crashed into a stone post at the bottom of the hill, throwing out its seven passengers.

Mrs. Jennie Snyder, formerly Miss Jennie Chisholm of 9 Goldsmith place, Roxbury, is dead, and Michael Feeney of 138 Athens street, South Boston, is dying at the Sylvester Private hospital, Allerton, with a compound fracture of the skull and internal injuries. They were both occupants of the car.

Magann, the chauffeur, was placed under arrest by the Hull police, charged with reckless driving, and later bailed out in $3500 bonds. According to Magann's father he was hired to take the party to Nantasket for the day, and was just arriving at the beach, shortly before 7 o'clock, when the accident happened.

The party was composed of young Roxbury, South Boston and Cambridge people, who were on their way to spend the day at a clubhouse at Nantasket. They left Boston at 4 o'clock yesterday morning. Besides the injured there were Joseph Hanrahan and Edward Duffy of Roxbury, Jeremiah Sullivan of Cambridge and a young woman called Agnes, of Roxbury.

According to the story told by Hull police by the occupants of the car, the machine was coming down Warwick hill, near the Villa Napoli, at high speed, when something went wrong with the steering gear. At the foot of the hill the heavy machine crashed into a stone post.

All seven occupants of the car were thrown out. Feeney and Mrs. Snyder were picked up unconscious. Feeney was taken to the Sylvester hospital and Mrs. Snyder to the Sturgis hospital at Allerton. Mrs. Snyder died from a fractured skull a few minutes after reaching there.

The other occupants of the car were cut and bruised, and the other young woman is said to have been severely injured, but was taken from the scene in another automobile.

The automobile was demolished.

Warwick Hill is one of the steepest in the vicinity and the roadway is curved. According to the Hull police Magann was driving at a high rate of speed when the accident occurred. He was arraigned in the Hull court today.

Mrs. Snyder, who was killed, lived with her father, Alexander Chisholm, at 9 Goldsmith place, Roxbury. She was 30 years old.

MEN DANGEROUSLY HURT

WORCESTER, Sept. 21.—Two men of this city were run down by the automobile of Mrs. L. C. Palmer of Commonwealth avenue, Boston, just over the line in Shrewsbury yesterday and are now at the City hospital, suffering from internal injuries. Both are on the danger list.

The men are Frank Secretano, 30, and Salvator Garbarillo, both of East Central street. Witnesses of the accident say that the men were running to catch a car and darted across the road just ahead of the machine.

PROVIDENCE MAN DROWNS

WINDSOR, Vt., Sept. 21—John W. Glassey of Providence, R. I., was drowned yesterday by the capsizing of a canoe in which he and another young man were paddling. His companion was rescued. Glassey was a bricklayer.

KNOCKED FROM WAGON

WALTHAM, Sept. 21.—James Mayuse, 35, of Felton and Water streets, is at the Waltham hospital suffering from internal injuries received Sunday morning when a wagon he was driving was struck by a trolley car at Bacon and Lexington streets.

Mayuse was thrown heavily to the ground. No blame has been placed by the police.

BLAZE DESTROYS AUTOS

WORCESTER, Sept. 21.—An electric spark produced in the charging of an electric runabout in the garage of Dr. Charles H. Nichols, a wealthy physician of this city, caused a fire Sunday that destroyed two valuable automobiles. Three cars were run out of the garage, and were not harmed. The loss will be about $5000.

Dr. Nichols whose home is at 38 Cedar street, was in the garage at the time the fire became noticeable, and narrowly escaped being overcome by smoke. He managed to crawl through the smoke to the door and suffered no serious effects.

AUTO HIT POLICE WAGON

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—A collision between an automobile and the police patrol of station 2, Cambridge, at Prospect and Hampshire streets, Cambridge, late yesterday afternoon, was remarkable for the little damage that resulted. The wagon was called to Kendall square, where James H. Delorey of 49 Harvard street, Cambridge, was arrested on a charge of drunkenness, and before the prisoner had been put into the wagon Officer Mullen, driver of the wagon, received word from the station house to proceed to Inman square, where another man had been placed under arrest.

As the horse turned into Prospect street an automobile coming from the direction of Massachusetts avenue came across Hampshire street. The front of the machine struck the horse midway, felling him in his tracks, crashing both shafts and throwing Driver Mullen to the ground.

Mullen landed on his feet. The front wheel passed over the body of the horse and left him directly under the wagon. Beyond a few scratches the horse was not injured, but the wagon was out of commission.

While the officers were busy with the fallen horse, the man driving the automobile moved on, but the police managed to obtain his registration number.

FOUR BUILDINGS DESTROYED

BOSTON, April 21.—The residential section of West Watertown was endangered by an early morning fire yesterday, when a barn and three sheds were destroyed and a house badly damaged. The total loss was more than $1000.

The fire started in a barn owned by Charles Connors at 65 Gilbert street. A horse was taken out on the arrival of the fire department, but died a few moments later in the yard.

The efforts of the fire fighters were centered on a house owned by Daniel Glynn at 19 Charles street, to which about $500 damage was done. Three sheds near by also caught fire. Two hours' work was necessary before all of the blazes were out.

EARLY MORNING FIRE

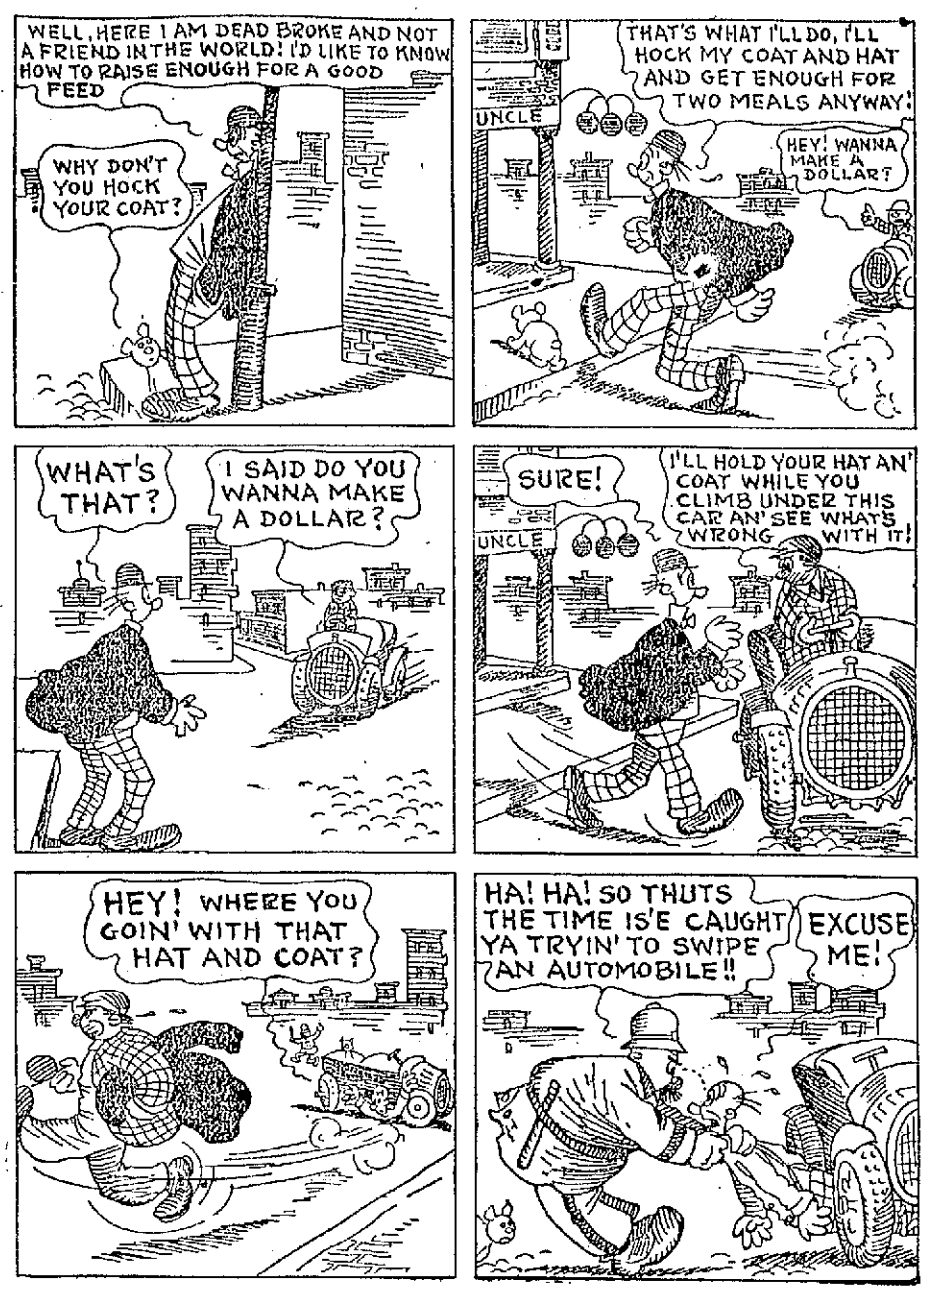
LEXINGTON, Sept. 21.—Heavy firing was held in the outskirts of Lexington early yesterday, but casualty lists are minus. The Lexington police department mobilized to repel the invaders but found no invaders to repel.

A fusilade of shots rang out about 1 o'clock, but efforts to trace the origin of the gunplay were unavailing. The only clue yet unearthed is that three men were seen quarreling about an hour before in Muzzey street. No dead or wounded have been found.

HOWARD L. GRAY DEAD

THOMASTON, Me., Sept. 21.—Howard L. Gray of Stetson, overseer of the wood shop of the state prison, died suddenly of heart disease Saturday night. He is survived by his wife and one child, who had arrived yesterday to spend a fortnight's vacation with him.

EXCUSE ME



NATIONAL PROHIBITION

CAMPAIGN STARTED AT MELROSE—SPEAKER WAS FOUNDER OF ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE

MELROSE, Sept. 21.—The prohibition party formally opened its nation-wide campaign for national prohibition Sunday afternoon at a meeting in Memorial hall. The speaker was Rev. H. H. Russell, founder of the Anti-Saloon league of America. A large audience attended and much interest was shown. Speakers from other states will give addresses at meetings throughout Massachusetts during the week, it was announced.

Rev. Harold Marshall opened the meeting in the afternoon. After a short address he introduced Dr. Russell.

Dr. Russell stated that 50 years ago the churches were divided by sectarian antagonisms, while the north and south were embittered by warfare. He declared that today all these barriers against the battle with the liquor traffic had been swept aside and that the south was leading in the fight for the abolition of the saloon as he north had led the fight against the abolition of slavery.

He also stated that it was the firm belief of the temperance advocates that the prohibition of the liquor business was only a matter of a short time, in view of the tremendous organization which was arrayed against it.

The evening meeting was held at Melrose Highlands at the Green Street Baptist church. Among other things, Dr. Russell said:

"This is one of thousands of convocations held and to be held in the Bay State and in all the states. They are called by this ringing title, 'See This Thing Through Recruiting Rallies.'

"Last year was the jubilee year of the Anti-Saloon league, the 20-year jubilee. It began in November, 1912, with a state victory. West Virginia voted dry by 32,400 majority. The jubilee also was cheered by a National victory. On the last day of February in the senate and on the first day of March in the house, the national congress, over the veto of the president, passed the Webb-Kenyon bill, insuring drouth in dry territory for the future. Then began preparations for the jubilee convention at Columbus, O., in November, 1913. Five thousand delegates from all states, representing all political parties, all temperance organizations and all churches, unanimously agreed to send a committee of 1000 to Washington to introduce a most important measure.

"The committee of 1000 men, swelled to 2000, accompanied by many delegates of women's organizations, marched up Capitol hill and delivered the measure to a member of the house and senate, and the Sheppard-Hobson bill was immediately filed in both houses. At the big ratification meeting held later in Washington all present lifted the right hand and shouted, 'With God's help we will see the thing through,' and then we all hastened to the various states to begin the campaign to see it through.

"It is a joint resolution to amend the constitution of the United States, which when passed by a two-thirds vote of both houses, and when ratified by a majority of the members of a majority of the state legislatures, will bring this to pass namely, the permanent prohibition of the manufacture, sale, importation, exportation and transportation of intoxicating beverages throughout our United States of America.

"The board of trade of Pittsburg recently passed with a cheer resolution for national prohibition. Everywhere business men and great manufacturers are coming with us. Sobriety is now known to be essential to safety and efficiency.

"Another ground of hope is found in the attitude of the liquor men themselves. Their organs editorially give up the fight when, as in their national journal, it is stated: 'For us there is the handwriting on the wall, and its interpretation spells doom.' The whole salers give it up when they say, as did a Pittsburg brewer recently to the other officers and stockholders: 'Gentlemen, we may as well recognize the fact that the shutting down of our business is only a question of time. And the retail dealers when they lease a building now for a term of years put in the condition: 'Provided we are permitted to continue the sale of liquor.'

"Today the oral allies of America are united, steadily fighting a winning war, while now the liquor traffic is breaking, fearful, and speeding toward its final and full defeat."

WALL OF WARSHIPS

LONDON, Sept. 21.—A "solid wall of warships" is thrown across the northern part of the North sea, according to the captain of a British trawler who has just arrived from Iceland. The skipper said it was "absolutely impossible for any fot to break through undetected," so constant and thorough was the patrol to the north. It was his own experience to be halted and searched, and after being released his boat was followed by two torpedo boats until it reached its destination.

The thoroughness of the patrol was further testified to by another North sea skipper. His trawler was lying along shore, when shortly after midnight it suddenly found itself hemmed in by a huge black object which proved to be a British cruiser. Its officers seemed to have had cat's eyes. From the dark a voice demanded to know the identity of the trawler It was promptly shouted back.

"The name is quite correct, sir,' came another mysterious voice astern of us," said the skipper. "A submarine had crept up behind us and read our name. Although all of our crew had come on deck to see what was happening, not one of them had seen the submarine appear. The whole episode only occupied a few minutes and the cruiser, after wishing us 'Good morning,' and plenty of fishing, disappeared in the darkness."

FROM SOUTHAMPTON

SOUTHAMPTON, Sept. 21.—The despatch of troops from Southampton continues, but the movements are now kept less secret than during the passage of the first expeditionary forces. The record then made provided an excellent test of the facilities here for handling such a great movement of troops.

Although the expeditionary force was despatched from several points, Southampton handled the bulk of the 150,000 to 200,000 men who were sent to the continent during two weeks' time. The docks at this place afford more than one and one-half miles of water front, with railway lines so close to the ships' docks that it is but a moment's work to transfer train loads of men, horses and equipment from the railway to the steamships. The precision with which the transfer was made was so marked that an entire train was frequently unloaded in three minutes, and it was not uncommon for 20 trains to enter the docks and complete their task of unloading with a single hour.

The plan had been worked out by the war office two years before. The small cars used for transporting horses, accommodating only seven or eight animals, proved a great factor in the speedy transfers. Each horse had a separate compartment, and the sides of the cars dropped down in such a manner than the animals stepped out without the slightest confusion. Some Americans who witnessed this movement remarked that the cars were far more practical for this sort of work than the large freight cars used in America, into which a number of horses were crowded.

Scores of hospital cars still line the dock tracks here ready for the reception of sick and injured returning from the continent. Red Cross signs are displayed and surgeons and nurses are in the cars with everything ready for the wounded. The hospital trains are made up of converted passenger coaches and sleeping cars. All have the small compartments common to English railway coaches with doors opening at the sides. Litters are provided which will enter these small side doors and consequently it is much easier to place the seriously injured in berths than it would be if it were necessary to carry them through the doors common to American sleeping cars and along narrow aisles or hallways.

Baggage cars have also been converted into hospital cars where patients can be placed who need attention of a sort which can be rendered more satisfactorily in a roomy car than in a small compartment.

THREE DOLLARS PER YEAR. TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER MONTH

MADE IN LOWELL

There is no doubt that the "Made in Germany" signs which have decorated everything from a needle to an anchor for many years past have had something to do with starting the war, for whether we regard it from the side of the allies or from the point of view of the Kaiser, industrial supremacy was one of the ends sought. The methods of bringing it about are responsible for the catastrophe in no slight degree. At the present time the Krupp engines of death are the most advertised "Made in Germany" products, and industrial Germany suffers as a consequence. Even should the Fatherland be eventually victorious, its economic and manufacturing systems will take many years to ascend to their olden pinnacle. Many incline to the view that politically, industrially and commercially, Germany will take decades to recover what she has lost or will eventually lose. He this as it may there is a moral in the situation for industrial America and for industrial Lowell into the bargain.

From one end of the country to the other, clubs, societies and active organizations are boosting the slogan "Made in America," advising our people to demand American-made goods, not so much to appropriate the prosperity of any nation but to prevent future American dependence on foreign manufacture as far as possible. There has been no real need for the total reliance with which some most important lines of American industry looked to foreign sources and as a consequence America shared in the temporary stagnation and uncertainty following the war, instead of getting ready to meet the augmented demands that were certain to come our way. Anything that has been done abroad can be done in America—in the line of invention and manufacture—and in this case war proved the necessity that is the mother of invention.

Already papers throughout the state are commenting favorably on the initiative of the Lowell textile school in starting to manufacture dyes hitherto neglected. Should things turn out as anticipated, Lowell will be known as the centre of textile enterprise, and will consequently gain in prestige and popularity to a degree not hitherto enjoyed or furthered by other aspects of our activities. In this connection it is noteworthy that Lowell leads in some of the finest lines of manufacture, textile and otherwise, and that the trade-mark "Made in Lowell" adorns the finest grades of finished commodities in the show places of metropolitan stores.

To strive to advance Lowell prosperity by creating a demand for Lowell goods within the city proper would be provincial and ineffectual, but there would be a decided benefit in a concerted effort to make the brand "Made in Lowell" stand for the best in every line of manufacture in which the city excels. Everybody knows the value of "Sheffield" stamped on steel, the prestige of "Pittsburg" on machinery, the conviction that "Brussels" carries on carpets. Why then should not the magic "Made in Lowell" mean as much on woolens or cotton? Is there not danger that the city sits back complacently, satisfied with past achievements and neglecting the competitive and progressive spirit of the times?

To advance the "Made in Lowell" policy a real working agreement should be entered into between our mill officials, our business heads, our board of trade, our municipal authorities. At present industrial Lowell takes little part in its public affairs, apparently, and though the city has made its world-wide reputation in textile manufacture, we hear less on public affairs from its noted mill men than from any other group of notables within its boundaries. When industrial Lowell, political Lowell, commercial Lowell and Lowell in every other phase will all act in harmony and with a common end "Made in Lowell" will mean far more than it means at present.

SIGNS OF IMPROVEMENT

In many lines of business are growing indications of the prosperity that has been predicted for American industry as a result of the war. Manufacturing is improving, farm produce is finding a ready market and finance is establishing itself on a sounder basis. Any uncertainty which obtained immediately following the opening of the European contest has been completely dispelled.

A contemporary points out as one of the surest signs of this improvement of domestic conditions "the decline in foreign exchange" to a low figure which it regards as "a most significant evidence of improving business and monetary conditions." Since the beginning of August international money markets have been decidedly unsettled, and our merchants have been handicapped in meeting their foreign debts by the high rate of foreign exchange. Instead of the normal rate of $4.78 for each pound sterling they have been forced to pay a rate of from $5.60 to $5.08—an increase of $1.62 for each dollar owed abroad. In the aggregate this amounted to an enormous increase and it did a great deal to keep business stagnant. Added to this was the fact that foreign creditors refused to extend the usual credit and demanded a gold basis of payment.

The falling in the rate of the foreign exchange is a sure indication that this country has sent enough gold abroad to offset the heavier indebtedness and that, therefore, the government and our financial interests feel confident of American stability. At first this country hoarded its gold and did not send it abroad until it was proved absolutely safe to do so. New York city alone has arranged for the payment of $80,000,000 of bonds held by foreigners and the outward shipping of our natural products is getting to a normal basis. It is now expected that our business with England will soon be as satisfactory as before the war.

No country can have industrial prosperity unless it has financial stability, and nowhere is this better understood than in America, which has devoted its best efforts to furthering a safe financial policy since the war began. There is a greater degree of co-operation between the government and the leaders of American finance than ever before and the result will soon be seen in the prosperity which grows more certain as the war drags on.

PROSPECTS OF PEACE?

When two men go to fight with their fists in the heat of passion, they are in no mood to listen to reason. A peacemaker may stand nearby and air all manner of fine sentiments but the combatants burn with the desire to inflict corporal punishment on each other and they will not cool off until their frenzy has been lessened by solid punches given or received. When the first ardor of battle recedes, they may go on fighting automatically but one of them is apt to keep an ear open to offers of mediation.

The same is true to some extent of two armies. When their national pride is aroused to a pitch where it ill too becomes passion they fight madly and blindly, each striving for the total annihilation of the other. When they cool off and begin to count the mutual cost one of them at least is generally in a receptive mood for offers of settlement. If one side has shown a decided mastery the cause of mediation is so much the more advanced.

It is generally felt that the present war is a war to the finish, but peace lovers are already hoping for some settlement. The offer of President Wilson still holds good, but he will in all probability repeat it when the fortunes of war favor its being received more favorably. As yet there has been no direct reference to peace on either side, but the American expectancy of a speedy settlement grows. Our government may be depended on to advance the cause of peace at the earliest possible opportunity, consistent with national dignity.

VOTE AT PRIMARIES

Whether you be a democrat or a republican or a progressive or an independent or something which has not yet been named, go to the polls tomorrow if you are a voter and register your choice of men for the state offices. It is not a matter of personal choice with you; it is a strong duty, the general neglect of which would be a national menace. At present you cannot be compelled to go. If you should choose to stay away, but as a reasonable man you must see the importance of exercising your right and your obligation as a citizen. Any limb which is not exercised soon becomes worse than useless. It eventually decays. A voter is one of the limbs of the body politic and as such must exercise his functions if he would not endanger our institutions.

A special word to Lowell democrats: Among the candidates for senator and representative and the other offices are men of integrity and ability. You can pick a strong one to offset every strong one offered by any other party. Vote, then, for the man that can win in the final elections, paying attention to his ability and to his qualities of fitness rather than to his personality. The time for voting for "good fellows" is past and public institutions are neither grafts nor public charities. Poor government is costly government for all of us. Pick your best men and line up back of them so that the present victorious sweep of democratic policies from the federal government down may be continued.

IMPROVED FREIGHT CONDITIONS

The business men of Lowell have reason to be grateful to Mr. W. G. Parkin, the local general agent of the Boston and Maine railroad, for bringing about the important change in the handling of freight which, though apparently slight, is in reality one of the most far reaching improvements that have taken place for years past. Lowell suffers from an unusually complicated railroad system, comprising several small and widely scattered yards, two inadequate freight houses, antiquated track arrangements and awkward facilities generally, to remedy which would take a far greater outlay than the railroad can afford at the present time. Anything then that would bring even a slight degree of improvement is to be commended, advancing as it does the interests of the individuals and concerns that constitute Lowell's industrial supremacy. The recent change must have necessitated a great deal of previous planning, but it will simplify freight handling to a degree that will confer a lasting benefit on the city and that will reflect favorably on the railroad.

Commencing this morning all outward freight, whatever the destination, will, if it is to pass over the Boston and Maine system, be taken at the Western avenue freight house and on the other hand all inward freight will be distributed at the Thorndike street freight house. This will do away with the annoyance and uncertainty which caused frequent strained relations between railroad officials and business men in the past and it will also show the public that there is need for forbearance in bettering conditions which cannot be justly attributed to local management but which are a heritage of antiquated systems.

Once again the record breaking crowds that have swarmed to the agricultural fairs in various surrounding towns prove that the old appreciation for all relating to the country and growing things is returning. Years ago such fairs were the event of the year but with the taste for tawdry theatricals and a lower range of pleasures their vogue fell off. Now after the musical comedies, the movies, the dance halls and pool rooms it is refreshing to find that the call of the farm is still potent to lure city dwellers from their accustomed haunts—for a day at least.

Slowly, but surely, foreign-built vessels are being admitted to American registry and in a short time the American flag will again have become a familiar sight on the commercial routes of the seas. The innovation has commended itself to all Americans, irrespective of party, and it is probable that what was begun as an emergency measure will be perfected as a permanent measure in the next session of congress.

The scarcity of sea engagements of any magnitude has been one of the greatest surprises of the present war. England must be anxious to try her guns, being confident of naval superiority as well as more advanced armament, but she hopes in vain for an opportunity to demonstrate her power. Germany has shown unique cleverness in keeping her fleets out of the open.

The first shower of crimson and golden leaves is falling from the trees and there is a melancholy swirl of faded glory along the road ahead. Every step stirs up ghosts of summer delights and occasionally the foot step is deadened by the carpet underfoot. Very soon the trees will again stand forth in stark nakedness and the myriads of leaves will have vanished like a generation that is passed. But what a sad pleasure lurks in the plaintive passing!

Peace on earth—but not just yet.

SEEN AND HEARD

Every man has his followers, even if they are only bill collectors.

Some history may repeat itself. But your neighbors will attend to repeating your history.

Tell a lie to save a man and the only thing he will ever be able to remember about you is that you are a liar.

They are making wedding rings out of platinum because it wears longer than gold. But a ring made of snow would outlast some of the modern matrimonial alliances.

A scientist claims that a man has six times more lung capacity than he needs. This scientist must have examined a suffragette who was masquerading in men's clothes.

Luke McLuke says he will study anatomy to find how a Boston woman was shot in the dining room and a Pittsburgh woman was stabbed in the back yard.

It is funny that a girl can be as graceful as a nymph when she is dancing and yet get off a street car in the attitude of a grizzly bear.

Any time a woman goes into a shoe store and insists upon having a pair of shoes that fit her you can bet that she is more than fifty years old with no matrimonial prospects.

Socks patterned after the design of the American flag are on sale in London. One purveyor asserted today that those "Uncle Sam" socks were meant to establish the identity of Americans going on continental missions.

Stripes run from top to bottom of the socks, with the exception of three rows of stars on a blue field just above the ankle. It was argued by one plausible merchant that no passport would be needed for the wearer of such a creation. Low shoes must be worn to get the proper effect.

To the large assortment of postcard photographs, which are now in great demand, has been added a picture of President Wilson. It has been one of the most popular pictures, so stationers assert, and has been enjoying a large sale.

Miss Ethel Barrymore will begin her season under Charles Frohman's management early in December, in a new play "The Shadow," which was to have been produced next month in Paris by Mme. Rejane. The war prevents this, so Miss Barrymore will be the first actress to appear in the play on any stage. It is by Messrs. Dario Niccodemi and Michaell Morton, the authors of "The Prodigal Husband," in which John Drew, Miss Barrymore's uncle, is appearing at the Empire theatre, N. Y. "The Shadow," in three acts, will give to Miss Barrymore, it is stated, opportunities different from any heretofore arranged for her.

Editor Lowell Sun, Lowell, Mass.

Dear Sir: I am in receipt of a copy of the souvenir edition of The Lowell Sun and as it came in a special wrapper, I assume that you are the sender, and if not I thank the sender, as I thank you for it. I assure you I appreciated it very much and after reading it through I cut out all the pictures and tacked them up on the walls of my quarters here so that I can imagine that I am in Lowell again. I am sure that the people of Lowell must be proud of the grand building and the progress you have made in the past, and I wish you success in the future. By this mail I will send you a copy of the Bogota special edition of the Gaceta Republican, Colombia's Independencia dia, 20 Julio, 1810-1914. They do not celebrate their Independence day here as we celebrated the Fourth of July. The sun shines here all day and at night it sets beautifully, but The Sun that I received today is shining brightly tonight on the walls of my quarters. I am in excellent health and wish to be remembered to all my Lowell friends.

With best wishes,

D. J. Farley.

BELGIUM'S FAMOUS ANTHEM

Since the outbreak of war patriotic feeling in Belgium generally has been stirred to a fierce blaze. On every hand one hears the national anthem of the country, the famous Brabanconne. Appended is a somewhat free translation:

Find the years of servile shame!
Wear again thy glorious name
Spread thy banner on the blast.
Sovereign people in thy might,
steadfast yet and valiant be.
King, and Law, and Liberty.

Strive, nor seek discharge at length,
Hold thy courage as thy crown.
God, who keeps thee in His strength,
On thy labors smileth down.
Over all thy fruitful land
Labor's prize is full and free,
On thine arts enthroned stand,
King, and Law, and Liberty.

Foes, that were our friends of old,
Are returned to love at last.
All the free we prize as gold,
Praying that our strife be past.
Belgians and Batavians, friends,
Knit in brotherhood shall be:
King, and Law, and Liberty.

Belgium, Mother, thus we vow,
Never shall our love abate.
Thou our hope, our safety thou
Hearts and blood are consecrate.
Grave, we pray, upon thy shield
This device eternally.
Weal or woe, at home, afield,
King, and Law, and Liberty.

MADE IN AMERICA

The "Made in America" legend on an article would mean that the article was of superior quality; that it was made by persons who received fair wages, and it would help wonderfully in making foreign buyers change their minds about the necessity of buying foreign goods. Every man or woman who advocates the "Made in America" labelled goods is indeed a really worth while citizen. Are you doing your share in this good work?—Providence News.

MEXICO'S FUTURE

Carranza's position is stronger than Madero's was, and this fact is owing principally to the circumstance that the United States has frowned upon all other forms of government. Our right to do this may be questioned, but our power in the premises is manifest. Remembering the fate of Huerta, it will be long, we trust, before another military adventurer, posing as the true government, murders officials and plunges Mexico into chaos again. Gen. Carranza and Gen. Villa are moreover a doughty pair, full of victories and prestige, and it is to be hoped that they can and will keep order. Mexico has occupied the limelight long enough.—Woonsocket Call.

AMERICAN DYES

In establishing a course in dyemaking, the Lowell Textile school sets an example which the Fall River school should be prompt to follow. The dye situation in America is acute, and it is likely to remain so because the cutting off of the supply from Germany cannot be off-set by our own manufacturers. Granting that this is partly on account of the large numbers of United States letters patent on standard chemicals and even upon certain shades and colors, held by Germans, it is still more due to the lack of knowledge of the art in this country. The textile industry, which is the largest sufferer from the shortage, owes it to itself to make an effort to remedy this condition; and the textile schools afford the means for an immediate beginning.—Fall River News.

SEX HYGIENE

The United States commissioner of education has of late come in for considerable criticism, because of an indorsement, in his recent annual report, of sex hygiene for the public schools. This is not surprising, in view of the widespread resistance to this attempted innovation in popular education.

Many leading statesmen, educators, clergymen, and even physicians of national reputation, are on record as being uncompromising in their opposition. Ex-President Taft, in addressing the graduates of the Pierce business school of Philadelphia, held that pursuit of education in sex hygiene is full of dangers, if carried on in the general public schools.—New Bedford Times.

COSTLY CARS

And now come the automobile manufacturers with those tempting offers for 1915 models to distract us. Considerably less than $1000 will buy a good deal of car just now. The moderate priced outfit is evidently here to stay and it will appeal to the masses while the higher priced output will be left for the wealthy.—Portland Express.

HIGH RATES

It wouldn't be entirely surprising to learn that some of the Americans who grumble at increased passenger rates on the Atlantic draw their incomes from products which leaped to war prices long before the poor steamship lines had snatched a dollar.—Brockton Times.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

"Doing Well, Thank You!" an irrepressible comedy, featuring James B. Donovan and Marie Lees, will be the topline feature at the B. F. Keith theatre, beginning today and continuing through tomorrow and Wednesday. The fact that two such chipper funmakers as Mr. Donovan, "the King of Ireland," and Marie Lee, "the little beauty," are putting forth the comedy is quite guarantee enough that it has tons of merit to it. Mr. Donovan doesn't appear in anything which isn't filled to the brim with real humor, and he is capable of inventing some funny patter and business himself. In addition he is also known as a singer and dancer of note, while little Miss Lee shines in both of these lines. It is a real, "big time" act and one which Lowell theatregoers will turn out and welcome, for Donovan is well known here and has been for a number of years. A real kangaroo, imported from his native bush in Australia will spring the second surprise of the bill. This particular jumper is a fully developed fellow, and his specialty is boxing, in fact, he is the only boxing kangaroo in existence. Gordon Brothers, who guide the fortunes of this wonderful animal, will offer an act positively unique. Both of the Gordons are boxers, and it is necessary for both of them to alternate in the ring with the pouchy-wonder, for the kangaroo strikes a terrific blow and no ordinary ring-fighter could stand up before him for any length of time. The act came to this country shortly after the outbreak of hostilities in Europe, it having toured the continent during the spring and summer months. Mr. and Mrs. Thornton Friel in the rustic comedy called "At Economy Junction" are first-raters in fun-making. Their little comedy glints with brilliant comedy, and there are many patches of real atmosphere to it. The best quartet of banjoists in the world is that made up of King, Carlton and the Clifton Sisters. They strum everything, from the rattling finale of an overture to the most tantalizing maxixe. If you want to get music that makes the feet tap incessantly listen to this quartet.

This is the line-up of acts for the first three days of the week, and in addition to the vaudeville four special feature pictures will be shown. Never before have motion pictures been brought out so clearly as at the Keith theatre, this season, and the fact is very largely due to the use of the new Radium Gold-Fibre screen. Made of a fabric which strengthens the detail of motion pictures, and brings into instant relief all movements of the actors. It really shows motion pictures at their best.

For the concluding half of the week four new vaudeville acts and four feature pictures will be shown. The front feature in vaudeville will be offered by the Hirscoff troupe of Russian dancers, singers and instrumentalists. Four men and four women make up the troupe, and they dance their wild measures and sing their Cossack songs with an abandon which is unforgettable. The Van Der Koorrs, with their "quack" illusion act, featuring Felix the mind-reading duck, will score strongly. Benton & Howard are snappy singing and talking performers, and Jeanette Childs is a dainty singing soubret. Performances begin at two, and 7 and 9 p. m. Phone 28.

THE OWL THEATRE

A strange love story in which a western hero and a heroine from picturesque far Japan are the two principals is seen in "The Wrath of the Gods," the most stupendous production ever attempted by American companies. This high-priced attraction has been secured for two days only, today and tomorrow at the Owl and performances will take place as usual, every afternoon and evening. The regular program will contain five others, among them the following: "The Bank Burglar's Fate" in two parts; "The Belle of the School," a comedy drama; a Keystone comedy, and others. To return to the feature, a program from one of Boston's most famous picture houses, announces this same feature at prices ranging from 25c. to 50c., and no other picture on the program but this one. The Owl offers this six-reel masterpiece and five other great photoplays for their well known regular price of 5c and 10c. You will wonder how the management can offer such sterling performances. They want to keep their reputation of giving the best show in this city, and will go the limit to secure worth-while productions, to gain the approval of their many friends. There is so much to be said about this grand production that the writer hesitates to start on his task. The most salient scene of this play is a volcanic eruption, so close and so realistic that it seems absolutely incredible that such things could be photographed, but the producers, William H. Clifford and Thos. H. Ince, America's most famous producers, whose work has placed them the peers of all producers, have succeeded admirably in their attempt, not without many hardships and dangers. A company of noted Japanese actors has been engaged specially for this production, and they are helped by the very best actors of all the affiliated Mutual program companies. The story deals with the love of a Japanese girl for a lad from her own land. Upon learning of a supposed curse laid upon her and her father, an old lord, he stops his attentions, and the girl revolts. She wishes for an unbeliever who could console her in her renunciation of her God, and her prayer is answered when an American sailor is washed ashore, during a terrible typhoon. He is nursed back to health by the girl and her father, and falls in love with the Japanese girl, and arranges for a marriage. Succeeding events are indescribable. The volcano has an eruption and thrill succeeds thrill.

MERRIMACK SQUARE THEATRE

The greatest of all crook plays, "Alias Jimmy Valentine" will be the offering in which the Merrimack Square Theatre Stock Co. will open a week's engagement at this pretty little playhouse this afternoon. It will be given with Sam A. Meharry as Valentine, a role in which he has played many times before and a complete surrounding cast. An unusually fine production has been built for this week and patrons may look forward to seeing something in all respects out of the ordinary. Daily matinees will be given starting at two afternoons and performances in the evening will begin at eight. Announcement is made that in the near future free photographs of each member of the company will be distributed. Prints and flags have in the past been given but never anything quite so nice or expensive has ever been distributed. Watch for announcement of the date.

THE ROYAL THEATRE

The stormy days of the French and English war in Canada will be vividly brought back to you, when you witness "Wolfe" or "The Conquest of Quebec," the marvelous five-part photo masterpiece to be shown at the Royal theatre today and tomorrow. The courage shown by both generals of the fighting forces offer excellent material for dramatic actions, and the death of Wolfe and Montcalm in their different camps, are wonderfully acted. Montcalm's dying words, upon being told that he would not live long were these: "So much the better, I shall not live to see the surrender of Quebec," and like the brave soldier that he was, he died in a few hours, but his memory will always live with the patriotic French-Canadians. Wolfe on his side, was also stricken to death, and his last words were: "They run! Thank God, I die happy." The Kalem company is the producer of this sensational production, and the pick of their many companies has been gathered, and cast in the different leading roles. This production has no equal in realism, and photography, it has made the whole United States and Canada talk. Every scene has been photographed on the exact spot where it was actually fought, another thing that adds to the realism and beauty of this marvelous offering. And in order to give a gala performance, five other brand new photo-plays have also been booked to complete the biggest program of the week, of any theatre in the city. There will be special vocal selections, in English and French.

FASHION NOTES

SOCIAL GOSSIP
FEMININE LORE

PRACTICAL GARMENTS WILL BE IN DEMAND FOR SCHOOL WEAR

October brightness is apt to mean also October chill, and topcoats will be needed, while now that the school doors are thrown wide, attractive aprons will be in demand. Consequently, these three little garments are especially timely. The girl's coat is a very new one with a circular flounce that has a fashionable flare at the lower edge, but, since it is cut in Japanese style, it is extremely simple to make as there are only two seams. For the 6-year size will be required 2⅜ yards of material, 27 inches wide, or 2¼ yards 44, with ½ yard 27 for collar and cuffs.

The boy's coat shown on the second figure is made in the raglan style that means exceeding smartness and incidentally does away with all difficulty in fitting. It includes the big pockets that are always dear to the masculine heart, and is altogether a most satisfactory garment. For the 6-year size will be required 3¼ yds. of material 27 inches wide or 1⅜ yards 44, with ½ yard 21 for the collar.

The apron with long sleeves is a necessity for real protection, and the pretty little model No. 8387 is made in that way. It can, however, be finished with a round or high neck and, in case of need, with shorter sleeves. It is a very simple as well as a very practical garment, being cut all in one piece with just the underarm seams to be sewed up, which extend into the sleeves and give shape. It is closed for its entire length at the back. For the mornings at home it can be worn in place of a frock as well as over one. For the 4-year size will be required 2 yards of material 27 inches wide or 1⅜ yards 36, with ⅝ yard 27 for the bands.

That Paris should have been cut off from free communication with the rest of the world just at this period means, of course, that we must depend largely upon ourselves for the development of fall fashions, although advance rumors and earlier models that already have been received unquestionably will be taken as a guide. Just how far the conditions will become the opportunity for which designers on this side of the sea claim to have been waiting only the future can decide. At the moment, we have the assurance that if the materials can be obtained, velvets and satins will be exceedingly fashionable and lace will be worn in profusion, but what will take their place when the supply will, of necessity be cut short, will depend largely upon the ingenuity of the dealers and manufacturers on this side of the sea.

One enterprising firm has already opened a showing of fall costumes and these costumes arrived from Paris just in time to be received and unpacked before war was declared. That they are authentic the reputation of the firm assures and they are perhaps of double interest at this time for the reason that the unusual later models cannot be received.

As has been stated in previous letters, we are to have a great deal of embroidery of various kinds. Soutache is being employed in effective ways, heavy embroideries are being seen upon handsome street costumes as well as upon indoor gowns and there is a notable tendency toward the use of metal effects while beads of various kinds frequently are seen used in combination with silk threads.

At this writing, it seems probable that coats will vary largely in length. For the early season at least, short ones will be worn with tunics and fancy skirts as well as the redingote models which latter are really more appropriate for the colder weather.

An exceedingly handsome suit seen in the collection referred to above is of forest green broadcloth. The skirt is a somewhat unusual one, full and draped over the hips with pockets introduced in the drapery and these pockets are richly embroidered in self colored silks combined with tan colored wooden beads of about the size of a pea. There is a deep fitted belt over the yoke which gives a slight suggestion of the favorite waistcoat idea and the coat is a very short one, extending only just below the waist line where it is finished with embroidery of silk threads and beads. The lining is taffeta in one of the new shades that is neither tan nor brown and the same silk makes the big flaring collar. It is expected that green in such shades will be pronounced favorite and it assuredly is beautiful in combination with the new tan.

That capes would influence the season's styles has been known for a considerable period. A second costume in the same collection is made of gabardine in the new blue that is known as Vendome and is trimmed with heavy black silk braid that takes the form of wide bands on the tunic and of binding on the coat edges. The skirt is plain, narrow, but not so narrow as have been the skirts of the summer, and the tunic is oddly shaped at the lower edge with lapped edges at the front and back allowing effective use of the braid. The coat is a short and jaunty one, terminating just at the waist line, and takes the form of a blouse at the front and a cape at the back. That it is finished with a big flaring collar becomes almost a matter of course, for such finish is almost universal upon the coats that thus far have been seen.

A third costume is made of blue gabardine with tunic skirt and long cape and all the edges are finished with inch-wide worsted fringe and from all these costumes will be seen that suggestion is not lacking however much supply may have been cut short.

In the handsome tailor-mades for afternoon visits and the like, gold and silver soutache is expected to be used. Touches of the metal effects are to be found upon some of the tailor-mades of more simple sort, such as blue gabardine and the like that are designed for many occasions and for many needs.

SLEEVES AND FLARING COLLARS MAKE INTERESTING FEATURES

No matter what the season, new blouses are of interest. They are necessities for wear with coat suits and they are entirely satisfactory for many other occasions. Here are three excellent ones. The one at the extreme left is of striped material and combines full fronts and full back with the raglan sleeves that are so much liked and so generally becoming. The high, flaring collar can be made either of the same or of a contrasting material, but in this instance it and the cuffs are made of white. The blouse itself is made of striped tub silk. For the medium size will be required 4 yards of material 27 inches wide, 2 ¾ yards 36, or 2¼ yards 44, with 3-4 yard 27 for collar and cuffs.

The blouse at the center No. 8379, is a perfectly plain one with set in sleeves and a rolling collar. It is especially desirable for washable satins, for taffeta and similar silks, and also for the linens, soft-finished piques and the like that make ideal waists for autumn and winter wear. For the medium size will be required 3 3-4 yards of material 27 inches wide, 2 3-4 yards 36, or 2 yards 44.

The vest effect and the roll-over collar make important features of the third blouse. Like the first one, it is made with raglan sleeves, but the little vest and the collar are quite individual and the rolled-over cuffs exceedingly becoming. As shown here it is made of washable silk, dotted for the main portion and plain for the vestee, collar and cuffs. The lace banding may be of any preferred sort, for every kind of lace is to be worn.

WHAT THE COOK SAYS

NOTE—Those who are interested in culinary matters should watch for what the Cook says in the articles to appear under this head as a feature every Monday. Don't miss them.—Editor.

Cook gave me some hints on making good bread this morning. Always buy the best flour, she says. It is the cheapest in the end, you have good bread and it goes farther. It is unnecessary to knead your dough often.

Once when you make your sponge and when you mold it in loaves for the oven is enough. Should you get dough too stiff, grease the board, but do not add more flour. It will be soft and spongy when you put it in the pans. The fresh yeast you get daily is the best.

Two cakes of yeast make four loaves of bread, or three loaves and a pan of light rolls. To make light rolls, when you make your dough into loaves for the last time save a little of same, pinch a small piece off at a time, work in some butter and sugar, place in pan and sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon.

If you want to get your money's worth when using the oven of the gas range, says Cook, arrange a combination of articles to cook at one time. When you wish to roast a small piece of meat (four or five pounds), you have room for at least two other dishes and shelf space for baking potatoes around the small roasting pan.

Dried fruit already soaked is delicious baked.

The combination when baking might be roast meat, potatoes, bread, dried prunes or apricots, or baked apples or brown betty.

Cook told me this morning that rusty irons should be heated, rubbed on a piece of beeswax tied in linen, and then with a coarse flannel cloth, sprinkled with household salt. This will give a polish like glass.

She said also to keep the ironing board when ironing is over, make a charming cretonne cover for it, it takes but a moment to slip the board into this, and hang it on the wall out of the way. The cover keeps the board clean, and looks very neat and nice.

Cook says to preserve meat boil together one quart good vinegar, two ounces of salt, two ounces of sugar; when cold wash the meat over with this mixture.

Tough meat, she says can be made tender if placed in vinegar water a few minutes.

"When boiling fowls or fish," she remarked, "add to the water in which they are to be boiled the juice of half a lemon. This will make them beautifully white."

"Fish may be scaled much easier by first dipping them into boiling water for a minute," she says.

A beautiful smell in the kitchen this morning made me curious. Cook said it was from a little pan of cloves which had been sprinkled with a few drops of spirits of lavender.

Put a few bits of charcoal into the bottom of the pan. If the charcoal is not convenient some bits of orange peel will do, as they soon turn into charcoal. Sprinkle the cloves liberally on these and when wanted to perfume the house place on the stove until they begin to smoke.

The fumes will soon penetrate the house, and is very much like the odor of carnation. It will effectively cover the cooking odors, as of fish, cabbage, turnips and the like.

WHAT HORTENSE TOLD ME

NOTE—The Hortense articles to appear in The Sun every Monday will give valuable hints on cosmetics and hygiene, taking up some feature of importance and offering the most scientific advice.—Editor.

Hortense told me a very clever way to perfume the handkerchiefs and muslin underwear.

"On washing days," she said, "I supply the washerwoman with a good sized piece of orris root, and she throws it into the water where my handkerchiefs are boiling. When they come up from ironing they are as redolent of orris as can be.

"Then I slip them between the folds of a sachet filled with violet powder and they never lose their fragrance. Violet and orris scent together make a real violet odor."

I had been worried for sometime about my eyes aching frightfully and Hortense advised me very wisely.

"Never forget to rest the eyes occasionally during the day, as it is unwise to try them to their limit," she said.

"Stop before your eyeballs ache, and, closing your eyes, rest quietly for five or ten minutes if this much time can be spared; if not, a two or three minute rest for the eyes will do much for them.

"Don't wear dotted veils, as they are deadly enemies to the beauty and health of one's orbs. It is impossible for the eyes to keep well if they are constantly being strained to avoid this dot and that."

"The teeth should be cleaned at least twice a day with a suitable brush and dentifrice, paste or powder," advises Hortense.

Particles of food should not be allowed to cling to the teeth or gums or remain in the mouth after a meal. Always rinse the mouth thoroughly and remove particles of food on or between the teeth with a brush or dental floss.

In brushing the teeth do not confine the motion to up and down or straight across movements. The brush should be given a rotary or circular motion, cleansing the gums as well as the teeth, and removing any tarter that may have collected at their base. A lime water solution is helpful in rinsing the mouth.

Hortense advises that hands and lips which crack easily when exposed to the cold can be kept in the best of condition if annointed nightly with a lotion made of equal parts of glycerine and lemon juice.

This is a simple remedy but a very effective one. Some prefer glycerine, rosewater and benzoin and for dry skins it is a little better than the glycerine and lemon juice.

Camphor ice is also good for chapped lips and hands. You must take care to dry the hands thoroughly after washing them and not to wet the lips when in the open air.

Hortense says to thicken thin eye brows anoint the eyelid edges with warm seasame oil. Do not get the oil into the eyes.

The eyebrows can also be massaged with yellow vaseline for five minutes every evening. Always massage with the fall of the hair, not against it.

So much can be said about sleep. I have a habit of remaining up quite late every night to read and Hortense says:

"It does not matter what time you go to bed so long as you have a regular hour and stick to it. The old saying that an hour of sleep before midnight is worth two after is not true, but it has this much truth in it.

"That the early hours of sleep are worth more than the later. The man who remains healthy goes to bed about the same hour every night, and it makes little difference whether this hour be 9 p. m. or 3 a. m."

SEASON OF BEAUTY

MORE GRACEFUL COSTUMES ARE COMING INTO VOGUE—OSTRICH MUFFS AND BOAS WILL BE WORN

We are entering a season that promises real beauty. Let us hope that no unfortunate travesties will mar the effect. Manufacturers are being made happy by the use of a greater quantity of material. Costumes are infinitely more graceful because of that added width and there is just the tendency toward a natural figure that should lead to the best possible results.

As must be the case when velvet is to be much worn, all velvet-finished fabrics also will be smart and there is promised a new wool velours and a new duvetyn of exceptional beauty. Dark, rich shades are to be the favorite ones for street wear. Unquestionably black will be extensively worn and such colors as tete de negre, chestnut brown, taupe, rich greens and purples will be seen. For the fancy street costumes, jet buttons are fashionable and jet trimmings will make a rather important feature of indoor dress both for afternoon and evening occasions. Blues are fashionable and some of the new dark blues are exceedingly rich and beautiful in color. There is a rich wine color that is particularly successful in the soft satins and in moire, whether in velours or bengaline. For the early season, a great deal of ostrich trimming will be worn as well as ostrich boas and ostrich muffs. Since ostrich in these days is treated in numberless ways and made up into little edges as well as bands, it is easy to utilize the feather idea in a variety of ways. In a word, fall fashions are interesting and varied.

NOW IT'S BUTTONS

Since all the basques are closed at the front with buttons and buttonholes, buttons of necessity become important. For costumes of this sort, they are apt to be made for the special costume, of the material braided or embroidered or enriched in some way, or are chosen from the ready-made buttons with extreme care for the effect. For afternoon and evening basques, the most wonderful buttons are used, often for the most elaborate ones, genuine jewels are set for the purpose, while dealers are showing jeweled effects that are really wonderful in their beauty and color and that combine most satisfactorily with the metal embroideries, the silver and gold tissues and the like that are so generally talked.

LATE WAR BULLETINS

MONTENEGRIN ARMY ONLY 10 MILES AWAY

NISH, Servia, Sept. 21.—An official communication reviewing the Servian campaign says:

"The enemy's attempt to cross the Drina on the Lesnitza-Raicha line have again failed and all the Austrian attempts to cross the Save on the Mitrovitza-Shabats front have also been unsuccessful. Nothing of importance is reported from the Save- Danube front.

"The enemy, retiring from Vishegrad, Bosnia, 40 miles southeast of Sarajevo, abandoned all his stores. Our troops seized 20,000 kilograms (about 44,000 pounds) of flour, 30,000 tins of meat, many blankets, a field hospital with 100 wounded and all medical stores and 40 railroad wagons.

"The Montenegrins after carrying the fortress of Foicha and Goarsda in Bosnia, captured Jabuka on Sept. 16 and took Rogatica on the 17th. The morale of our troops is excellent but the Austrians are completely demoralized and are flying panic-stricken.

"The Montenegrin army is only about ten miles from the Bosnia capital and has captured a large amount of booty."

SERVIANS HAVE NOT RETIRED FROM SEMLIN

NISH, Servia, Sept. 21.—The Servian official press today issued a denial of the report from Vienna that the Servians had retired from Semlin, in Hungary, opposite Belgrade, after losing 6000 prisoners and several pieces of artillery.

The report admits, however, that the Servians evacuated Semlin on orders from headquarters for strategic reasons and the Austrians did not reenter the city until two days later.

PRESIDENT WILL GET REPORT FROM MEXICO

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—President Wilson will receive Wednesday a detailed report of conditions in Mexico from Paul Fuller, who has just returned from a series of conferences with General Carranza and other Mexican leaders. The president will decide today or tomorrow on the exact date for the evacuation of Vera Cruz and measures to be taken for the protection of refugees.

PRESIDENT PRAYERFULLY WORKING FOR PEACE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—President Wilson said today that he was prayerfully working for peace in Europe but indicated that nothing of a definite or formal character had yet been done. He told callers that publication of stories that he would call a world conference to discuss peace interfered with his serious work. The president decared that a world's crisis exists and that only serious remedies would be discussed.

WILL PROTEST DESTRUCTION OF RHEIMS CATHEDRAL

PARIS, Sept. 21.—The Havas agency says that the government will lodge a protest with all the powers against the destruction of the cathedral at Rheims. It is said that the cathedral sheltered a large number of wounded Germans who had been picked up and were being cared for by the French hospital authorities.

TO DEFEND THE GERMAN FRONTIERS

LONDON, Sept. 21.—An officer just returned from Soissons states that an aeroplane reconnoisance has given rise to the conviction that a large portion of the German force is retiring with its trains and heavy stores, says a despatch from Paris to the Express.

It is believed that orders have been received from Berlin for the main forces to retire and defend the German frontiers.

CHRISTIANIA, via London, Sept. 21. Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, former Norwegian minister to Great Britain, caused a sensation Saturday night in this quiet and punctilliously neutral capital, where he stated, before an assembly composed of prominent members of the cabinet and students of Christiania university, that Norway's situation is as precarious as that of Belgium.

Dr. Nansen's proposal for one year compulsory service in the army was coldly received by the members of the government, but with cheers from the remainder of the audience.

"If Belgium had been prepared," he said, "Germany never would have violated her neutrality and possibly the whole war would have been averted. Our position is as serious as Belgium's. We are between two oceans where the big naval battle of the war probably will be fought. Belgium proved that neutrality without military preparation is not sufficient protection."

PARIS, Sept. 21.—After having become accustomed to good news during the days of the Germans withdrawal, Paris was made a little nervous through the silence of the war office.

Now the capital is reassured by the steady file of prisoners arriving from the scene of action. Saturday 1500 prisoners were brought here. Friday 1200 arrived and on the preceding days since the Germans first fell back, 1000 to 1500 has been the daily average. More than 10,000 prisoners of war are now here.

Reference to last night's official statement, which spoke of numerous prisoners, further encouraged the people of the city.

It is insisted here that there are continued indications that Gen. von Kluck's army is in a critical situation. British officers who returned from the scene of the battle last night are silent under orders concerning the details of the fighting.

Speaking in a general way, however, one of them said: "The official statements of our successes are very much below the truth. This has been true ever since the retirement of the Germans from the region of the Marne."

The bombardment of the cathedral of Rheims has raised a strong protest, as it is declared that the action cannot be justified by any necessity of the war."

CATHOLIC MISSION FIELD

Instead of the usual sermon at all the masses at the church of the Immaculate Conception yesterday, Rev. Joseph F. McGlinchy, D. D., of Boston, diocesan director of the society for the propagation of the faith, spoke most interestingly on the work of the society he so ably represents, and urged the congregations to become active members. Before entering on his subject he expresed thanks to Fr. Tighe, O. M. I. for allowing him the opportunity of spreading knowledge of a work to which he is zealously devoted and on which he is an undisputed authority, having had years of experience in every branch of foreign missionary labors.

At the morning masses Dr. McGlinchy gave a brief review of the entire missionary field of the Catholic church, illustrating his remarks by facts that have come to his own personal notice. He told of zealous laborers among the 450 millions of pagans of China, the 200 millions of Africa the 40 millions

IN FORT PICTURES CASE

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21.—For photographing and printing pictures of Panama fortifications Charles K. Field, editor of Sunset Magazine; Reilly P. Scott, of the Army Aviation school, Robert Fowler, an aviator, and Ray Dubon, a photographer, were held Saturday for action of the U. S. district court by Commissioner Francis Krull.

Field's magazine published photographs taken from an aeroplane which Fowler piloted across the Isthmus of Panama and the government contended that their publication infringed a federal statute, which makes it a treasonable offense to disclose military secrets.

NOT LOOKING FOR PEACE

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—Commenting upon the alleged statement of Count Von Bernstorff, the German ambassador to the United States, that his nation was looking for peace upon condition that the entity of German territory would be preserved or as so claimed in Washington despatches, the North German Gazette, the official organ, declared in its issue of Sept. 20 that the government had not yet even considered the matter. His assertions are intended, the paper says, "to foster the impression that we have tired of the war in spite of our victories in the east and in the west. Peace overtures may not be looked for until the war, forced ruthlessly on our people, is brought to an honorable conclusion."

The official statement given out last night made mention of the bombardment of Rheims. It said that Rheims was in the battle line of the French and that the Germans were obliged to bombard it. Orders to save the cathedral have been given. The statement also made reference to the progress on other points of the line. In this respect, it says:

"The attacks on the French are progressing at several points in the central Vosges. At Donnon, near Serones, and at Luneville, near Saales, in the German Vosges, their offensive has been repulsed.

ATHLETES AND ATHLETICS

The Lawrence and New London players will have a much larger purse to split this year than Lowell and Hartford divided last fall. That crowd at Lawrence Saturday sent a satisfied smile to the countenance of every ball player on both dugouts. On second thought we'll amend that last statement. Nobody saw Mike Lynch smile.

Harry J. Corwin defeated Thomas Southam Saturday in the semi-final round for the championship of the Longmeadow Golf club. The only other opponent whom Mr. Corwin will have to face is E. L. Childs.

Ty Cobb certainly did some batting in the Sunday double header between the Red Sox and Detroit. The famous outfielder walloped the ball safely four times in the first once for a triple and again for a double. In the second contest Cobb was credited a double and a single. Boston won both games without an effort.

Hildebrand started things off well in the eighth by drawing a pass from the usually steady Pearson. Alec seemed unable to find the plate for some reason or other. If Thompson had been rushed to the rescue sooner it is quite probable that Lawrence might have pulled the game out of the fire.

Three games still stand between the Braves and the Giants with about three weeks more to play. Stallings' men, unless they take a bad slump, should spurt home a winner. The National league race should prove as spectacular in its finish as it has during the past two months.

The high school football team is hard at it now getting in shape for a long schedule. The squad looks better each succeeding day's workout. There is a dearth of material on hand this year for a first class eleven and with Rach Leggat and Jim Rooney at the helm their development should be but a matter of a few weeks at the most.

Manager Marcotte of the Lawrence Manufacturing company's team, is anxious to play the C. M. A. C. aggregation another game. In a communication to The Sun Manager Marcotte states that his team is willing to meet the C. M. A. C. club on October 3d at Spalding park for a purse of $100.

Speaking of baseball championships the crowd which flocked to the North common Saturday afternoon will bear evidence that one of the hottest hit-and-run contests played in these parts in many moons was staged there on the "big fellers" diamond with the Iroquois and Athletics as combatants. Yes, it was some game.

These two teams of thirteen-year-old home run hitters mixed it up on the diamond on five previous occasions and so decided to play for a stake last Saturday. Ten large American dollars were hung up on the outcome of the contest and the eighteen youngsters "went to it."

Umpire Young Tom Ed Smith was hard put to it on several occasions but managed to cheat fair most of the time and, curiously enough not a murmur of dissatisfaction could be heard in the ranks when the smoke of battle had cleared away. Which same was probably very lucky for Young Tom Ed.

However, to get back to the game. The Iroquois sluggers were not to be denied Saturday and hammered three Athletic pitchers all over the lot. Sixteen big juicy tallies were scratched on the scoreboard for the Iroquois while the Athletics were hanging up an even half dozen.

From the manner in which the winners went after every ball which was in the vicinity of the plate we should say that they were a little short of pin money or needed the ten bucks for a vacation. Slam, bang and away went the ball a half or mile or so or less into the outfield. It was surely a great day for all those who wore the Iroquois war paint.

The lineup of the two teams was as follows:

LAWRENCE ALDERMAN SHOT

LAWRENCE, Sept. 21.—Alderman John G. Todd, director of public health and charities was in a critical state in the municipal hospital last night from the effects of a bullet wound in his right lung. At the city home, where he resides, it is stated that the injury was accidentally sustained about 3 o'clock while he was cleaning a rifle.

Mrs. Todd said that the bullet passed through the lower lobe of the right lung. His condition would not permit Drs. Dow and Allen, who were summoned, to probe. At one time it was thought that he was sinking, but later one of the physicians expressed the opinion that he had about an even chance.

The alderman was chosen a member of the city council for two years and had announced his candidacy for re-election.

PRES. TO VOTE IN PRINCETON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—President Wilson will leave Washington at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning for Princeton, N. J., to cast his vote in the primary election. He will return to Washington at 6 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

MANAGER PIEPER OF LAWRENCE

Baseball Pilot Has Done Wonders With Down-river Team

LOUIS PIEPER

More and more, as the games of the post-season series between Lawrence and New London are passing into history do the fans of the down river city realize just what Manager Louis Pieper is to their city's representative in the New England league. As the innings rolled by in the games at Riverside park Friday and Saturday, a common expression heard in grandstand as well as bleachers was "that Pieper is certainly a great manager." And it was true beyond question.

To Louis Pieper belongs the credit of getting the Lawrence team into the post-season series. It has been his untiring work all season and his wonderful accumulation of baseball brains that lifted Lawrence into the lead and then kept her there.

Now with four games of the series already played and the two clubs on even terms, Pieper's part in the inter-league struggle becomes even more pronounced. In other words it is now "up to Pieper" to pull off the deciding games with an inferior ball club.

It is Pieper's vim and dash, his spirit of never-give-up and his indomitable fighting qualities which are relied upon now by the Lawrence fans to win the large end of the purse for the defenders of the New England league inter-league championship which Lowell won last season.

SERIES TIED UP

New London Wins 4th Game 4-3 and Evens up With Lawrence

New London came from behind Saturday in the eighth inning of the fourth game of the inter-league series and batted out three runs and a victory. There was no more scoring after this and New London was returned the winner over the New England league champs, 4-3.

Powers the most dependable slabster of the Eastern Association club and Alec Pearson veteran pitcher in this circuit were opponents from the firing and strangely enough neither of them finished the game. Pearson was driven from the box in the eighth while Powers was taken out in this inning to allow Hildebrand to bat for him.

It was another interesting contest with thrills and excitement galore. Several innings were played while the spectators watched the game's progress with bated breath. Errors were quite freely scattered through the game and the hitting was harder and more frequent than in any of the previous games.

New London landed on the ball for no less than ten safe blows while Lawrence was present with only half that number. In fact the only earned run which the down river club had to its credit was a four base lift over the left field fence by Danny O'Connell in the seventh.

Thompson finished the game for Lawrence while Greenwell went in to work for New London. Neither southpaw was in danger in the ninth although Greenwell was wild at the start.

C. M. A. C. WON

Defeated Lawrence Co. 8 to 4—Game Was for Purse

Spalding park Saturday was the scene of an interesting diamond battle between local amateur clubs, the C. M. A. C., and the team from the Lawrence mills, in which the former team was returned the winner by an 8—4 score. Quite a delegation of fans turned out to the game in spite of the fact that the recent conflagration at the ball park made grand stand seats unpurchasable.

Kentucky feuds had nothing at all on this game, and Umpire Joe Cronin kept his hand on his life insurance policy wherever he was called upon to render a close decision. Luckily for Joseph a single run did not decide the contest.

From start to finish both teams went after the game. To make matters more strenuous a well filled purse was hung up for the winners to grab and this fact, added to the "antip" in evidence under ordinary circumstances, made the game well worth the price of admission.

If "rooting" could win ball games the winner of Saturday's diamond squabble would have been hard to pick. Each team had its constituents lined up in goodly array and the opposing pitchers, as well as the rest of the team, got theirs.

However, to hie back to the game: The winners deserved to win and even admitted so themselves. Prescott was "touched up" for 13 bingles and his share of the purse, while Little held the weavers, spinners, dyers and whatever else they do in a mill, to eight safe hits. After all's said and done, 'twas a good game.

After the game the C. M. A. C. team and their rooters made merry to their hearts' content. The city was not allowed to remain ignorant of the fact that they had won a ball game. Trucks bore the victorious club about the principal streets while their loyal backers modestly announced to the public at large the outcome of the afternoon's contest. The box score of aforementioned contest readeth as follows:

CHARLES F. TAYLOR DEAD

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Charles F. Taylor, aged 60 years, probation officer of the East Boston district court and a lifelong resident of East Boston, died yesterday forenoon at his apartments in the Maverick House, East Boston. Heart failure was the cause of death.

He had been in poor health since last May, but he managed to attend to his duties until the latter part of last week.

Born in East Boston, Mr. Taylor, before he reached the age of 12 years, was forced to leave school and help support a widowed mother. He went to sea for many years, first sailing on a fisherman and later taking to the coastwise traffic. He sailed into almost every port on the Atlantic ocean and served as first mate on several ships.

He was also a master pilot, serving in the position of pilot for five years with the Boston & Bangor Steamship company. Most of his earnings were speedily dispatched to his mother.

After a number of years on the sea he returned to East Boston at the request of his mother, and then followed the painting industry until 20 years ago, when he was made custodian of the old East Boston courthouse. Ten years ago the late Judge Albert E. Cleary appointed him probation officer of the East Boston court.

The late Justices Cleary and Dimick and the present Justice Joseph H. Barnes had frequently complimented him for the efficiency of his work.

Mr. Taylor leaves one sister, Mrs. Ellen Needham of Wireton, Penn. The funeral will take place Wednesday afternoon at 286 Meridan street, Ea. Boston.

LYNN BOY IS MISSING

LYNN, Sept. 21.—In an effort to secure information concerning the whereabouts of her 17-year-old son, John R. Kelley, an English high school pupil, who has been missing since July 8, Mrs. Fred G. Kelley of 178 Boncon Hill avenue has asked the assistance of the police.

The boy is supposed to be in Maine. He left home, presumably, to seek a position as pianist in an orchestra in a New Hampshire summer hotel. His father has discovered that the boy did not secure the position, if he applied for it. The father has searched quietly several Maine cities and towns and believes that in Portland he found a clew which points to the fact that the boy was in that city during the summer.

THE COUNTY COMMISSION

HELD BRIEF MEETING AT THE COURT HOUSE THIS FORENOON

Only a small amount of routine business was transacted at the monthly meeting of the Middlesex county commissioners held at 10 o'clock this forenoon in the probate court room in the local court house. No hearings were assigned and Chairman Gould declared the meeting adjourned shortly after 10 o'clock.

ESCAPED FROM HOSPITAL

MAN MENTALLY UNBALANCED CAUGHT BY OFFICER MALONEY

After regaining consciousness in St. John's hospital, where he had been removed Saturday night after a near successful attempt at suicide, William L. Cahill of Bridge street wrapped himself in a white sheet and was making a quick getaway via Stackpole street when he was apprehended by Patrolman Maloney and marched back to the hospital. However, the hospital authorities believed that the man had recovered sufficiently and he was sent to the police station for the night and released early yesterday morning.

According to a story told the police Cahill was out Saturday night and when he arrived home suddenly became despondent and secluded himself in his sleeping room. His wife stepped out of the house for a short time and when she returned, it is claimed, her husband was lying across the bed overcome by gas.

Patrolman Jack Sullivan was soon on the scene and sent in a call for the ambulance, in the meantime administering first aid treatment. Cahill was removed to the hospital and when he showed signs of recovery the doctors left his bedside, believing that he would sleep the rest of the night. But, the man was not satisfied with the surrounding conditions and in some way he made his exit and was detected flying down Stackpole street, clad in nothing but a sheet and was quickly held up by Officer Maloney. The man seems to be mentally unbalanced.

CAMPAIGN COMMITTEES

"Joe" Hibbard take notice!

Only 10 of the candidates for party nominations at the state primaries tomorrow have complied with the provisions of the new corrupt practices act of 1914 which declares that "No person acting under the authority or in behalf of a (campaign) committee (not elected by the voters of the commonwealth) shall receive any money or other thing of value, or expend or disburse the same until the names of the chairman and treasurer and the names of such additional members in the case of committees not elected, shall have been so filed."

In other words, all candidates who have campaign committees must file with the secretary of state the names of the men constituting such committees and especially the names of the chairman and treasurer. Unless candidates get busy they are liable to be charged with violations of the law. Just how seriously offenders will be treated, as this is the first year of the act's operation, is another question, but the law remains, however.

Those who up to yesterday had complied with the provisions of the new act are Henry C. Atwill of Lynn, candidate for the republican nomination for attorney general; Frederick W. Dallinger of Cambridge, candidate for the republican nomination for congress; Carl C. Emery, Newburyport, candidate for representative nomination in the 25th Essex district; Edward G. Frothingham of Haverhill, candidate for councilior nomination in the 5th district; Harry C. Howard of Brockton, candidate for congressional nomination; Albert P. Langtry of Springfield, candidate for the republican nomination for secretary of state; Hon. Samuel W. McCall of Winchester, candidate for the republican nomination for governor; George E. Moulton of Newburyport, candidate for representative nomination in the 25th Essex district; Frederick H. Tarr of Rockport, candidate for councilor nomination in the 5th district, and James MacPherson of Framingham, candidate for representative nomination in the 7th Middlesex district.

It is provided that whoever violates any provision of this section (358), which requires the filing of the names of chairmen and treasurers of campaign commitees before any money is received by them or paid out by them, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $100, or by imprisonment for not exceeding three months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

According to the law, it is the duty of the secretary of state to report to the attorney-general all violations of the corrupt practices act.

Today's paper had a political advertisement in behalf of Hon. Joseph H. Hibbard, signed by several well known men as a "Hibbard campaign committee." "Joe" had better get their names down to the state house by next mail and avoid complications. No other local candidates appear to have campaign committees.

MASS. STATE FIREMEN

WILL HOLD ANNUAL CONVENTION IN ATHOL BEGINNING WEDNESDAY—LOWELL MEN TO ATTEND

Fire Commissioner James H. Carmichael, Fire Chief Saunders and a number of the local firemen are planning to attend the 35th convention of the Massachusetts State Firemen's association which is to be held in Moose hall, Athol, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week. Committees have been working diligently for several weeks to make this event as memorable as those in the past years and it is certain that each member of the local fire department whose day off comes while the convention is in session will attend and join with the firemen of the state to make the meeting the largest ever held in Athol.

Between 500 and 600 delegates are expected to attend and Chief F. P. Hall of the Athol fire department has been a busy man arranging to house them all.

The convention will be called to order by President (Chief) Edward W. Dahill of New Bedford at 2.30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. There will be addresses by George W. Boutelle, chairman of the Athol board of selectmen, and Chief Hall.

A feature of the first meeting will be a report on the firemen's $15,000 relief fund by former Chief E. S. Hosmer of this city. On Wednesday evening there will be an address by William O. Arnold, chief of the Salem department on "The Recent Conflagration at Salem." Other speakers are on the program. An interesting program has been arranged for Thursday which will include a speech by Capt. James F. McKissock of this city. Friday will also be taken up by speaking and discussions on topics of interest to fire fighters.

The members of the Athol fire department have appointed sub-committees whose special duties will be to promote the interests of the convention in every conceivable way. In addition to making extensive plans for the comfort and entertainment of the members of the association who may attend, they are also preparing an interesting entertainment program for the ladies in attendance, and it is expected that a large number of the firemen's wives will be present and become interested in the work.

The officers of the association are: President, Chief Edward W. Cahill of New Bedford; first vice president, Chief W. H. Pierce of Arlington; second vice president, Joseph A. Sanders of Somerville; secretary, D. Arthur Burt of Taunton; treasurer, Supt. H. R. Williamson of Worcester.

LOCAL CATHOLIC NEWS

The attendance at the Sacred Heart parochial school which totaled 633 at the opening of the school year has increased to such an extent that an extra classroom was opened this morning to accommodate the influx of extra pupils. The addition of the extra classroom brings the total up to twelve.

Rehearsals for the operetta, "The Knautical Knot," which will be given by the young people of the parish the latter part of October are progressing, and the young people assigned to the principal parts are becoming very proficient.

St. Michael's Church

The congregations at all the masses at St. Michael's church were very large yesterday and especially so at the 10.45 mass which was celebrated by Rev. Denis F. Murphy. Rev. Francis Mullen delievered the sermon of the day. The members of the Immaculate Conception Sodality received communion in a body at the early mass.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon the Children of Mary society held its regular meeting and plans for winter socials and entertainments, which promise to be of the highest order, were formulated. The circulating library which has been in existence for two years is proving to be the gathering place for all of the members who spend many pleasant evenings in the perusal of the latest and approved books. A large allotment of books has just recently been added to the library and they are proving of much interest.

Tomorrow night the Immaculate Conception sodality will hold a meeting in the school hall and matters of much importance will come up for transaction.

St. Michael's guild will meet a week from tomorrow night in the school hall and plans for the winter months will be arranged.

"DRY" CAMPAIGN

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—A resolution calling for the opposition of organized labor to the Anti-Liquor League campaign which is to be carried on in this state this week, was adopted at the meeting of the Boston Central Labor union yesterday.

The same resolution will be presented at the convention of the Massachusetts State Branch, A. F. of L., which began this morning, and a hard fight will be waged to enroll the support of the hundreds of thousands of men and women in this state against the passage of the Hobson-Sheppard bill now before congress, for nation-wide prohibition.

Every delegate to the C. L. U. who attended the meeting yesterday, was recorded in favor of the resolution.

Text of the Resolution

The resolution was:

"Whereas the object of this crusade is to create a sentiment among the voters of this state favorable to the passage of the so-called Hobson-Sheppard bill, now before congress, which provides for national prohibition and the summary closing of the doors of thousands of breweries, distilleries, cooperage plants, and other establishments throughout the country that are now engaged directly and indirectly in the manufacture of beer, wine and other liquors, and,

"Whereas the employing brewers of this country, and in sharp contrast to the attitude of the big interests conforms to the principal of the eight-hour day, the closed shop, and pay a higher rate of wages and provide more decent working conditions than any other industry in this country, and most especially the big interests, whose whole endeavor is to bring down wages and crush organized labor down to their own level, as recently witnessed in the states of Texas and Colorado, resolved by the Boston Central Labor union.

"That the intelligent workingman of this country is a conservator of that grand principle written in the Declaration of Independence: the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. He sees in the destruction of legalized industry a violation of that principle—the loss of his employment, the confiscation of his employer's property, and the casting adrift of hundreds of thousands of unemployed upon an already overcrowded market, an invasion of liberty, an obstruction to the pursuit of happiness, and he sees, looking at the case from a personal standpoint, that it is his industrial life that is taken from him, his liberty to work that is invaded and his happiness after years of citizenship and homemaking that is ruthlessly torn from him.'"

Approve Bridge Tenders' Request

Among the other resolutions adopted were: "That the common welfare demands the immediate establishment of a general freight, passenger and intelligence post covering the entire business of public transmission and that every senator and representative elected to the 64th congress should be pledged to this program."

The second approved the request for increases in wages of the members of the Bridge Tenders' union employed by the Massachusetts highway commission.

The third endorsed the bill before congress known as the Palmer bill, at the request of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks. This bill is for the reduction of night work in postoffices and allows overtime pay for work done outside of the hours allowed by law.

Still another resolution read:

"Resolved, That the manufacture and sale of instruments of war for private profit should be prohibited within the borders of the United States.

"Resolved, That the government of the United States should hereafter undertake the manufacture of such instruments of war as it deems necessary for national defense."

President William Kobs was elected to represent the organization at the American Federation of Labor convention, which opens in Philadelphia on Nov. 9.

Credentials were received and delegates seated from Machinists' union, Local 264; Typographical union 13 and Newspaper Writers' union 1.

Secretary Dunderdale announced that all organizations which have not received their donation to the Higgins and Young bail bond fund can get a check by calling on him at the C. L. U. headquarters on any night except Wednesday.

Davison, pastor of the Atlantic Memorial Congregational church, whose hard work contributed largely to the success of yesterday's realization. Rev. Mr. Davison will continue as pastor of the new church as well as in Atlantic.

Titus, for many years a resident of Squantum, was sung by Mrs. Brigham.

HON. JOSEPH HIBBARD

WHO CAN WIN

Compare him with the other candidates and you will decide in his favor—Because,

He is the best vote getter and has a large democratic and progressive a large Democratic and Progressive following.

He has served in the House and Senate and has performed the kind of service that has shown results.

He has always stood with his friends and you won't find that he has an enemy in the district.

He has looked after the interests of his own district as well as of the entire Lowell.

He was the man who made possible the continuation of the Hovey Square car line

He was the man who gave Lowell additional days for naturalization, saving a big expense for the men who were forced to go to Boston.

STREET CORNER BADLY LIGHTED

It will be remembered that about a year ago a young lady was assaulted and knocked down at Dow's corner, which at the time was well lighted "by the lights from the store windows." The young lady suffered a nervous breakdown as a result of the attack. The man was arrested. At the present time under similar circumstances the same thing could happen or even worse and the chances would be in favor of the culprit escaping.

C. hall yesterday afternoon. About 300 voters were present and all listened attentively to the remarks made by the respective candidates. The meeting was presided over by Lawyer Arthur L. Eno of this city.

FRENCH SEABORNE TRADE UNFETTERED

An Official Communication From Bordeaux Reviews Work of Fleet Since Outbreak of Hostilities—Army and Navy Cooperate

BORDEAUX, Sept. 21.—An official communication addressed to the navy and reviewing the work of the fleet since the outbreak of hostilities says:

"The navy was called upon to cover the return of troops to France from Africa, which was done satisfactorily.

"Assisted by the British forces in the channel and the North sea, the command of the sea was attained from the first day the war broke out. The French and British fleets also assured the security of the Mediterranean after the flight of the Goeben and the Breslau and the enemy has not appeared again. The German fleet did not leave its base. Nevertheless, the British fleet was able to fight a naval battle off Helegland, from which it emerged victorious. It is impossible to know whether the enemy's fleet will end by accepting the challenge but meanwhile the allied squadrons are mistresses of the sea and are blockading the German and Austrian coasts forcing the enemy to live almost exclusively on themselves and reckon only on their own resources. This is certain assurance of ultimate success for us if the war is prolonged."

The communication proceeds to show that French seaborne trade continues to enjoy full liberty of movement and concludes by emphasizing the manner in which the navy and the army have co-operated for the defense of the country.

FRED H. STUDLEY

BOSTON, April 21.—Fred H Studley, 38, married, of 667 East 6th street, South Boston, was found dead in the engine room of the steamer Loretta at the Public landing, City Point, So. Boston, at 9.30 yesterday morning. Although it is believed that death was due to a fall down the ladder, there are mysterious circumstances connected with it that bother the friends of the dead man.

Studley was an engineer and up to two years ago was employed by Capt. Frank Gathro, proprietor of the boats at the Public landing, including the Loretta. His last employment, it is said, was with the George Lawley company, at Neponset. He was well known about the City Point district. It is said that of late he has been about boats most of the time.

Capt Ed Junkins and Engineer Geo. Kaulback of the Loretta were getting the boat ready for a big party of members of the South Boston Yacht club that enjoyed an outing at Peddocks yesterday. Junkins and Kaulback boarded the Loretta. Kaulbach went to the hatchway, which is on the main deck directly in front of the pilothouse. He says that he had to push back the hasp on the side of the hatchway before opening it. This part of the hasp has been broken several days and consequently the hatchway was not locked.

When he threw back the cover and prepared to step in, he was horrified to see at the foot of the iron ladder the body of Studley. The feet were away from the foot of the ladder, the right knee drawn up and the head was thrown backward and rested on several life preservers.

Capt. Gathro notified the police and soon Medical Examiner McGrath arrived and ordered the body removed to the North Grove street morgue. From his casual observation of the body he said that Studley had been dead but a short time.

From the story of several persons about City Point who know Studley quite well, the police are satisfied that he was under the influence of liquor late Saturday night. He was refused admission to one of the yacht clubs and went his way, only to be taken in charge shortly afterward by Harold Peacock and James McCorry, two well known young men of the Point district. They say that Studley was in a dazed condition and did not seem to know where to go. They brought him to the Public landing and placed him in the forward cabin on a settee and resting on several life preservers. That was at 11.45 Saturday night, they say.

The friends of Studley and the police are unable to account for his getting into the engine room below the deck and reached only by an iron ladder containing 10 rounds. It is possible, and thought quite likely by the police, that after sleeping a couple of hours in the forward cabin, Studley may have felt the cold, and wanting to get under cover, started for the engine room. The iron ladder is quite steep and difficult, under ordinary conditions, to get down. A man even slightly under the influence of liquor would have great difficulty in making his way down.

The police are of the belief that death was accidental, although unable to account for the hasp being closed on the hatchway. It would be almost an impossibility for anyone to go below against their will, as the opening is only large enough for a body to crowd through.

MEETING OF WARREN CLUB

The members of the Warren club held their regular weekly meeting yesterday morning in the club rooms in Middlesex street. President John H. Farrell occupied the chair and called the meeting to order promptly at 11 o'clock. A grist of important business was transacted and reports of committees read and accepted. A committee of two, Frank Finnerty and Fred Smith, was appointed to arrange for an exhibition at the coming dance and were instructed to engage two prominent dancers. Secretary Edward Barrington's report showed the club in a flourishing condition and everything going along nicely. After the meeting dinner was served and the afternoon was spent enjoyably in a musicale at which many of the friends of the members were present.

GRAPHIC STORY

Of Rheims Cathedral—Priest Sprang Between Men and Rifles

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The Rheims correspondent of the Daily Mail sends this story of the damage wrought in the cathedral there.

"The magnificent cathedral of Rheims, which was a national monument of universal fame, is now no more than empty shell of charred and blackened walls. It is not yet known to what extent its stonework has been weakened by the flames and whether it can later be restored but it will never be what it was before.

"The fire started between 4 and 5 Saturday afternoon after shells had been crashing into the town all day. Over 500 fell between early morning and sunset. A quarter of the city several hundred yards square was set afire, the flames spreading from street to street.

"The cathedral on Thursday had been turned into a hospital for the German wounded so as to secure for the building the protection of the Red Cross flag. When the first shell struck the roof everyone believed it was merely a stray shot but later in the day a German battery on a hill four miles away began making the great gothic pile its particular target.

"Shell after shell crashed its way into the old masory and stonework that had stood the storms of centuries or fell into the deserted streets round about. At 4.30 some scaffolding around on the east end of the cathedral where repairs were going on caught fire and soon the whole network of poles and planks was ablaze. Then the roof of the old oak timbers caught fire and soon the ceilings of the nave and transepts were a roaring furnace.

"The blazing pieces of carved woodwork crashed to the floor, where piles of straw had been gathered in connection with the work of the field hospital. As soon as this caught fire the panelling of the altars, the chairs and other furniture were devoured.

"The German wounded would have been burned alive if the French doctors had not removed them at great personal risk. There was a bad moment, while these German wounded were being removed. A crowd of people had gathered outside watching the flames and when the Germans, some in uniform, were brought from the transept door, the crowd gave a howl of uncontrollable rage and earnest voices screamed: 'Kill them! Kill them!' Some of the soldiers in the crowd actually leveled their rifles to despatch the Germans when a little priest, the Abbe Andrieux, sprang between the Germans and the rifles.

"'Don't fire,' he exclaimed. 'You would make yourselves as they are.'

"The crowd calmed somewhat and the Germans were carried into the shelter of the museum amid hoots and threats."

SICK CHILDREN LOVE CASCARETS FOR THE BOWELS

Most of the ills of childhood are caused by a sour, disordered stomach, sluggish liver and constipated bowels. They catch cold easily, become cross, listless, irritable, feverish, restless, tongue coated, don't eat or sleep well and need a gentle cleansing of the bowels—but don't try to force a nauseating dose of oil into the little one's already sick stomach—it is cruel, needless and old-fashioned.

Any child will gladly take Cascarets Candy Cathartic which act gently—never gripe or produce the slightest uneasiness—though cleanse the little one's system, sweeten the stomach and put the liver and bowels in a pure, healthy condition.

GREAT ARTILLERY DUELS ARE BEING CARRIED ON

PARIS, Sept. 21.—There is little change in the situation in the great battle of the Aisne, according to the latest official announcements. The extreme left of the allies continues to bear the brunt of the fighting and one time Saturday or Sunday—the official reports do not bring out the time clearly—the Germans in a furious counter attack gained some ground which, however, was speedily regained by the allies.

Elsewhere along the big battle front the successes of one side have been counter-balanced by forward movements of the other but military experts here claim the allies have bettered their position so far as it affects the continuation of that struggle since they have reached and entrenched themselves on high ground.

The best opinion here, however, inclines to the belief that the frontal attacks of forces, both apparently of equal strength, will continue for some time yet without result unless something unforeseen happens.

The havoc wrought in the famous cathedral of Rheims by the German guns, as told in official and other despatches from the front, is the subject of bitter comment here. It is stated that the French government will lodge a protest with all the powers regarding the bombardment of the cathedral which unofficial despatches say was sheltering several hundred German wounded and flying a Red Cross flag.

Tension is Frightful

Copies of letters said to have been found on German prisoners continue to be made public here. One credited to a Brunswick non-commissioned officer reads:

"Our life is not a gay one. For nine days we have camped in water and we are living on beets and sugar. Bread is a luxury. The tension is frightful and our losses are enormous. There is not a single officer left in my company, which has been reduced from 250 to 60 men."

Other letters of a similar tenor are given out and wonder is expressed at how men living on raw vegetables have still the courage to fight with such desperation, especially under the most trying weather conditions.

LETTER FROM AUSTRIA

Frank Holecek, of 21 Fourth street, employed as a printer in the Merrimack Manufacturing company has received a letter from relatives in Prague, Austria, describing the hardships caused to families in that country by the European war. The letter which was posted in Austria five weeks before it was received here, states that all the flour, sugar, etc. in the homes of the non-combatants were seized by the military authorities. These were placed in storage houses for the use of the army in the future. Mr. Holecek states that only cows were left on the farms and at the time the letter was written, it was feared that they would be seized. All men between 20 and 37 had been called out to fight in the Austrian army and it was believed that the age limit would be increased to 45.

VICTIM OF BURNS

Lillian A. Belanger, aged 4 years, 7 months and 25 days, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Albert Belanger of 7 Henry avenue, died this morning at the Lowell hospital, the result of burns received late Saturday afternoon.

As published in the late edition of The Sun Saturday afternoon, the little girl found matches and ignited them while her mother was shopping in the city. Her clothes caught fire and soon the little one was a mass of flames. Her little sister managed to extinguish the flames but not before the child had received fatal burns about the body and face. The ambulance was summoned and the little girl was removed to the Lowell hospital, where despite the best of medical attendance she passed away at 3 o'clock this morning. The body was this forenoon viewed by Medical Examiner J. V. Meigs and later removed to the home of the parents.

TEDDY'S WESTERN TOUR

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 21.—Refreshed by a good night's rest, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt today entered upon the second day of speechmaking on his western tour. His first address of the day was in Kansas City, Mo., at noon. Tonight he will speak in Kansas City, Kas.

Colonel Roosevelt's voice is holding up well under the strain of the trip although he has several times violated physician's orders and made impromptu speeches.

MUST USE SOFT PEDAL

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—"Rag" with the soft pedal on is the newest rule at the Back Bay telephone exchange on Belvidere street. No more may the girls at midnight gambol to the raucous strains of "Oh, My Love," played fortissimo, and all because the remainder of Belvidere street wish to sleep o'nights.

The girls on the night shift at the exchange have been having a heavenly time in the wee small hours with their songs and piano playing, but the residents have declared that it is as otherwise than heavenly as is war. They have protested collectively and individually and many have packed their tents and fled.

Landlords who discovered that the proximity of the exchange meant a proportionate absence of tenants finally appealed to the telephonic powers, with the result that the girls are allowed to play the piano with the soft pedal on, but that on sufferance, and if any more complaints are heard the piano is closed forevermore after the day shift has left the office.

THE KASINO

Lowell people who enjoy good dancing and who wish to profit by observation, will flock to the Kasino tomorrow night, when Mr. George Coffey and his sister, Miss Anna Coffey, are scheduled to make their first appearance in this city. These artists come direct from the Castle House, Coney Island, where they have given exhibitions daily the present season to thousands of people. In their conception of such dances as the maxixe, the hesitation and the one-step, they are said to be exceptionally good. The Kasino will be open three nights this week, tonight, Tuesday and Saturday nights. As usual, Miner's orchestra will be there.

ATTEND THE PRIMARIES

Every Voter Should Go to the Polls Tomorrow Between the Hours of Noon and 9 P. M.

The state primaries will be held tomorrow in every city and town in Massachusetts and in Lowell, the polls will open at noon and close at 9 p. m.

A movement has been on foot for some time, to change the hours of the primaries to correspond with those on election day when the polls are open from 6 in the morning until 4 in the afternoon, but nothing was done toward making the change this year, and hence the caucus hours tomorrow, will be as they were last year.

Although there have been few of the spectacular features that have sometimes characterized the local campaigns, it is expected that a fairly heavy vote will be cast. The voters are becoming educated to primary voting, for its importance is now being generally appreciated as the result of weak nominations made in the past through the apathy of the citizens at large. The fact that there are many lively contests on, in the republican ranks from the state ticket and down the line, and in the democratic, on county, senatorial and representative offices gives assurance of a good vote, in the cities at least. On the republican state ticket contests of unusual importance are being waged for every office except that of governor, with a particularly lively fight in progress for attorney-general in which the candidates involved are: Former District Attorney John J. Higgins, of Somerville; J. Mott Hallowell, of Newton; John A. Curtin, of Brookline; Henry C. Atwill, of Lynn and James A. Stiles, of Gardner. Lowell has a special interest in John J. Higgins, whether "for better or worse" because of the fact of his wide acquaintance here, and his former connection with this city as the county's district attorney. Many entertain the belief that Lowell has some kind of a grievance against the former district-attorney and will knife him at every possible opportunity but others are of the opinion that the enmity has been softened by time and the satisfaction of having defeated him a year ago and that his ability will be recognized and a good vote given him at tomorrow's primaries.

Joseph Monette, of Lawrence, one of the republican candidates for state auditor should get special recognition in this city, and undoubtedly he will, because of the fact that he started his career in this city, upon his admission to the bar, and resided here for several years before going to Lawrence. Outside of Messrs. Higgins and Monette there are few familiar names, from a local standpoint, on the state ticket.

The republicans have contests on for county commissioner and senator in the seventh and eighth districts and in the representative districts, though in the 19th district, Rev. C. M. Williams of Billerica, has withdrawn leaving a clear field to Former Alderman Burton H. Crosby, who will contest at the polls with Rep. Kiggins, Maj. Barnes, of Newton is making a red hot fight against County Commissioner Gould while Julius Meyers of Cambridge, the third republican candidate is campaigning actively though his activities have not extended as far north as Lowell. In keeping with his statement made some time ago to the effect that Lowell will decide the democratic nomination for county commissioner, Deputy Sheriff Walsh of South Framingham has spent much time in this city, and was here yesterday. Judging from the expressed sentiment he will poll a big vote in this city. Associate Commissioner John J. Butler, of Wakefield, who enjoys the distinction of being the first democrat to get even an associate commissionership in Middlesex, has made several speeches here and will be here again this evening. Senator McCarthy of Marlboro has friends in this city but little has been seen of him locally, as he has been devoting his energies to the lower end of the county. The three Cambridge candidates have not been heard from beyond their own city.

With the opposing democratic candidates for senator in the seventh, representing the cities of the district, Lowell and Lynn, there is little doubt that a good democratic vote will be cast in the four wards of those cities. On the republican end, Candidate Kimball hails from Littleton and therefore should get out the county vote while Candidate Reither lives in Lynn whose two wards in the district are democratic.

In the eighth district the vote will come out largely in both parties, owing to the variety of contests involved. Candidate Dunigan whose home town in North Chelmsford expects to see a fair-sized democratic vote from the country towns. There is no question about the size of the vote in the seven Lowell wards that are included, owing to the lively contests for representative. Mr. Dunigan has made certain that the Drscut demmies will have no excuse for not coming out by providing a special car to take them to the polls. The Courier-Citizen's political writer sprang a joke at the expense of the democratic candidates in this district in today's issue, but as he omitted to provide a diagram with it, the point hasn't been recovered. If it ever existed. Little has been heard from Messrs. Marchand and Best, the republican candidates in this district, though each has done much personal canvassing.

The representative contests have been so zealously waged that there is little doubt that nearly all the democratic voters in ward two, and the republicans in wards three, six and seven will visit the polls.

This year as last you will still be obliged to call for your democratic and republican ballot as heretofore, but next year there may be a change, for there is now before the legislature a bill which provides for a secret ballot at the primaries. Under this proposed law the voter will receive a ballot containing the names of the candidates of both parties and as he enters the booth there is no way of telling how he is going to vote. To preserve party lines, however, the law will provide that whichever party the voter selects in his preference for the head of the ticket he must adhere to strictly in voting for the other officers and any ballot on which the voter has expressed a preference for candidates of two parties will be thrown out. It would seem that this will involve a large number of "split tickets" and hence a number of blanks, but the secrecy feature is what makes the proposed law popular.

Don't forget to go to the polls, between the hours of noon and 9 p. m.

BARN FIRE STARTS OTHERS

Charles Connors of Watertown Sustains $1000 Loss—Outbuildings Are Also Destroyed

WATERTOWN, Sept. 21.—While eating breakfast yesterday morning Charles Connors of 65 Gilbert avenue was startled to see his barn in flames. He despatched a neighbor to sound an alarm and tried to subdue the fire. He managed to save his horse.

On the arrival of a fire-fighting force the barn was found burned flat. The wind blew the sparks a quarter-mile and menaced the whole western residential section.

The side of the house of Daniel Flynn, 49 Charles street, which is in the rear of the Connors property, was scorched and two small outhouses nearby were destroyed.

It is said that men were smoking in the Connors barn and that sparks ignited the hay. The loss will not exceed $1000.

THEATRE VOYONS

A two-part Vitagraph comedy entitled "Ruby the Lion Killer," with that funny fellow, Sidney Drew, will be our feature today. Taken by mistake for a lion tamer, Mr. Drew portrays the part of an adventurer, who has to show his power, before the people. How he does it would make a horse laugh especially the scene where the beast chase him. "The Better Man" is a very strong offering with an interesting story. Mary Pickford in a new offering, Sofie Clutts in a piece of comedy and the Pathe Weekly complete the show.

TWO AUTOS COLLIDED

Several persons had a narrow escape from being seriously injured about 7.30 o'clock last evening when two automobiles collided near Byam's corner on the Littleton road, about a mile from Chelmsford Centre. Upon hearing the crash, residents of that section rushed to the spot but fortunately no one was injured. The automobiles were badly damaged. The names of the owners of the machines could not be learned, but it is said that one belonged in Concord, Mass., while the other was on the way to Manchester, N. H.

VERY FORTUNATE MAN

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21.—It was not until a voyage of 172 days from Emden, Prussia, was completed here after passing through heavy storms off the coast of Uruguay and being icebound off Cape Horn that the captain of the French bark La Fontaine learned of the European war. Captain Pierre Rathouss, the vessel's commander, said he saw two sailing vessels capsize in a storm off the southeastern coast of South America, but was unable to give assistance.

OFF TO AUSTRALIA

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 21.—The steamer Maitl of the Union line left port for Australia early today, having been delayed 36 hours by a war strike of the stokers. The stokers went aboard an hour before sailing time and demanded an extra $25 in wages for the return trip for "war risk." It was refused and they all went ashore, where they were soon arrested for disorderly conduct. Late last night the company officials appealed to Mayor Rolph, who obtained the release of the stokers and they went back to work at the old rate.

MANY VIOLENT ENCOUNTERS

LONDON, Sept. 21.—The correspondent of the Times telegraphed from near Soissons Sunday in describing the German counter attacks on the allies' left wing Wednesday and Thursday says:

"The men were literally thrown away to act as mere dead weight. They hurled them down at us like a landslide. Our officers were wonderfully cool and made us lay close and fight close. That and a bit of pluck did it, but it certainly did want pluck.

"Soissons has suffered terribly. It has been subjected to a regular daily bombardment and almost irreparable damage has been done.

"Today the fearful fusilade continues.

"On Tuesday, the 15th, a severe attack was made by the enemy who evidently had been reinforced and was determined if possible to break through the allied lines between Vic-Sur-Aisne and Soissons—that is—between the British and French forces.

"This attack was heralded by a tremendous outburst of heavy artillery fire, followed by systematic advance of infantry and machine guns. The allies' forces stood their ground splendidly, poured a deadly fire into the attackers, and finally in certain cases repulsing them at the point of the bayonet. This battle continued with unabated fury all night and throughout Wednesday and Thursday.

"On Wednesday night the Germans attacked the French furiously in the region near Rheims. They attacked three times but each time they were repulsed with heavy loss.

"On Thursday they attacked the British with equal fierceness in the neighborhood of Soissons when again their losses were enormous.

"The first sign of weakening was noticed Thursday afternoon after the fierce attacks of that day had been repulsed. The German losses were colossal.

"The whole idea of German strategy seems to be to throw plenty of weight in the belief that some of it is bound to get through."

THE BEST LAID PLANS OF MICE AND MEN, ETC., ETC.

BORDEAUX, Sept. 21.—The Petit Gironde has published a despatch from Verdun setting forth that French soldiers near that point found a valise belonging to a Prussian officer containing a quantity of little iron crosses strung on black and white ribbons and bearing the inscription "1814-1914." These, presumably, were to have been distributed to German soldiers after the entry of the German army into Paris.

JAPANESE AEROPLANES THROWING BOMBS

PARIS, Sept. 21.—Telegraphing from Petrograd a correspondent of the Havas agency says:

NOTHING NEW IN LORRAINE AND THE VOSGES—GERMANS FORTIFIED NEAR DELMIET

PARIS, Sept. 21, 3:01 p. m.—The following official announcement was given out in Paris today:

"First: On our left wing, on the right bank of the river Oise, we have advanced as far the heights of Lassigny west of Noyon. To the east of the Oise and to the north of the river Aisne, the Germans have given evidence of a recrudescence of activity.

"In the region of the Craonne there have been violent encounters, which did not stop short of bayonet charges. The enemy has been everywhere repulsed with considerable losses. In the country around Rheims the enemy has not undertaken any infantry attack, confining himself to artillery fire directed against our front from heavy guns.

"Second: On the center in the Champagne country and on the western slopes of the Argonne river, an exception being made of Souain, we have taken Mesnilles-Sur Lus and Massignes. In the Woevre district the enemy still holds the region of Thiaucourt and has cannonaded Passonchatel.

"On our right wing, Lorraine and the Vosges, there is nothing new. The Germans are fortifying themselves in the vicinity of Delmiet, to the south of Chateau Salins."

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Col. Golejewski, military attache to the Russian embassy issued today at the Russian consulate here the following statement which he said he had received from Petrograd.

"The Austrian rear guard which attempted to delay our advance near Baranow and Rzeszow, were driven back with heavy losses. Our artillery is bombarding Jareslau.

"Fighting with the garrison of Przyomsl has begun; the artillery of the fortress has opened fire.

REPORTED THAT GENERAL REMOVED FROM COMMAND HAS COMMITTED SUICIDE

ROME, Sept. 20, 9:55 p. m., via Paris, Sept. 21, 2:35 a. m.—The Giornale d'Italia publishes a telegram from Vienna which reports that Lieut. Marshal Wodianski, who was of Slav origin, was court martialed and shot for an alleged understanding with the Russians. The station master at Lemberg, named Redt, accused of giving information to the enemy also was shot, according to the despatch. He was a brother of Col. Redt who committed suicide in 1913 when he was accused of being a spy.

General Frorach, the same despatch says, who was removed from the command of a division of cavalry after it had been almost annihilated committed suicide.

PLAN FOR GERMAN WAR LOAN SAID TO BE A BRILLIANT SUCCESS

BERLIN, Sept. 21 (by wireless by way of Sayville, L. I.)—Subscriptions thus far received to the German war loan have assured the brilliant success of the war loan plan. One paper speaks of the public response as the victory of those "at the Somme."

The call was for 4,200,000,000 marks. With a number of reports not yet received, the total subscriptions to the imperial bonds is already 2,900,000,000 marks. The treasury certificates which were offered to the amount of one billion marks have been over-subscribed by 260,000,000 marks.

The newspapers express pride that this result has been reached without foreign subscription or the necessity of sending subscription blanks to the many well-to-do Germans now in the field.

Last night's report from headquarters stated that the German armies in France everywhere have assumed the offensive against the strongly entrenched enemy.

The Swedish explorer Sven Hedin, is a guest of Emperor William at headquarters. He will be allowed to visit the eastern and western fronts in order to give a non-partisan account of the situation.

Advices from Vienna deny the report that Henry K. Sienkiecz, the Polish writer, is a prisoner of war of the Austrians. He is in Vienna en route for the Tyrol and is preparing to write a book on his experiences in the war.

The crown council at Bucharest, capital of Roumania, on Saturday decided to continue the strictest neutrality.

The Novoe Vremya of Petrograd reports that the destroyers of the German embassy in Petrograd who were arrested have now been released as the destruction of the embassy was prompted by noble and patriotic feelings.

SENATE RENEWS FIGHT

On River and Harbor Bill—Senator Burton Prepared for a Continuous Session

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—The filibuster on the river and harbor bill was resumed in the senate today amid possibilities of compromise. After a conference with President Wilson, Chairman Simmons of the finance committee announced that the senate would stay in session continuously until the bill was passed. He expected a vote tomorrow night or Wednesday.

Senator Simmons said informal conferences with Senator Burton, leading opponent of the bill, developed that both sides might yield some points. Mr. Burton informed the senate that he would be satisfied with a lump appropriation of not more than $20,000,000 to be spent by the war department.

Senator Simmons said that there was intimation of cutting the bill so as to include any projects under way and that the president had not insisted on such a plan.

Senator Simmons called at the White House primarily to discuss the Alaska coal leasing bill which the president is eager to have passed. The senator told the president the bill could be taken up after the rivers and harbors bill.

When Senator Burton learned of the plan for a continuous session, he declared he was prepared.

"I brought with me a dress suit case," he said, "and am prepared to stay here as long as my strength holds out. In my suit case is a lounging robe and I have picked out a soft couch which will be of service when reinforcements give me a chance to rest. The outlook is for a finish fight."

It is believed that the new high school annex will be finished and ready for occupancy for the first of the month. On Saturday Commissioner Donnelly and Building Inspector Francis A. Connor went to Boston in relation to the heating system to be installed and they submitted plans to Mr. Whitney of the state police for approval. It was stated this morning that the plans submitted are for the installation of an indirect system according to law and it is hoped they will be aproved by the state police and returned to this city before the latter part of the week.

Gen. Reade's Picture

The mayor's reception room at city hall has been renovated throughout. The carpets and draperies have been cleansed and the walls and ceilings retinted. The pictures which adorned the walls have been replaced with the exception of that of Brigadier General Philip Reade U. S. A., retired, which it is presumed will be placed in Memorial hall.

About a year ago when Gen. Reade presented his picture, which is an oil painting, to the city, it was with the understanding that it would be hung on the wall next to that of the late Gen. Benjamin Butler, an uncle of the general, and shortly after Former Mayor O'Donnell accepted the gift he had the large frame hung up near the door of the reception room. For certain reasons however, Mayor Murphy has decided to replace this picture by that of Jefferson Bancroft, who was mayor of Lowell during 1846-47 and 47 and that of Gen. Reade will be found in place in Memorial hall.

School Attendance

According to figures received at the superintendent of schools' office at city hall, the attendance at the public schools this year has increased by 379. The attendance for the opening of the schools was as follows: Grammar schools, 5826; primary schools with the exception of the Billings street school, 3808; kindergarten, 382; total, 11,559.

The attendance at the opening of the schools last year was as follows: Grammar, 5601; primaries, including the Billings street school, 3979; kindergarten, 367; total, 11,332. By subtracting the attendance at the Billings street school last year, 122, we find that the increase this year not counting the Billings street school is 379. The high school attendance last year was 1385 and this year, 1573, an increase of 188.

Investigating Fire

The inspector has been here for the past two days and he will remain until tomorrow, when at 10 o'clock he will conduct a private investigation at the office of the chief of the local department at the Central fire station. The state police are alarmed over the fact that within a short time there have been seven fires in the property between Davidson street and High street.

TROOP REMOVAL

May be Delayed—Due to the Fear of Vera Cruz Refugees

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—The question of when the United States troops at Vera Cruz will be withdrawn will be determined probably Tuesday when the president and his cabinet meet.

This became known yesterday as well as the fact that the date originally set, Oct. 1, had to be set aside because of the breaking out among the Mexican refugees at Vera Cruz of a general fear of results after the American troops were withdrawn.

Before the troops are withdrawn the question of the safety of 400 priests and nuns and political refugees being harbored there will be settled most likely as follows:

The Catholic church of the United States will have to bear the expense of bringing the priests and nuns to the United States and attend to their disposition after their arrival here.

Carranza will be urged as a political expediency to grant an amnesty to those political refugees at Vera Cruz.

Administration officials here assert such a plan would solve the problem and at the same time make it safe for the United States to withdraw troops at once, as President Wilson has ordered.

In no case will the United States agree to bring officially any of the refugees at Vera Cruz to the United States. To repatriate its own citizens is one thing, but to expatriate the citizens of Mexico, and that is what the Mexican refugees at Vera Cruz are, is another, said a high official of the government, and it is needless to consider for a moment that the United States is going to expatriate any Mexicans.

While administration advisors believe the situation at Vera Cruz is one which should be settled if the troops are withdrawn, the president does not regard it as serious or as one to delay more than 10 days or two weeks the departure of the troops from Vera Cruz.

It is known that Carranza and his military leaders are opposed to the Catholic church opening their schools and convents again, and assert that if they want to return to Mexico to live they must do so as ordinary citizens.

The bitterness of the constitutional leaders toward the church is because of the land trouble. The church has obtained many thousands of acres which formerly belonged to the government and which is wanted for settlement and cultivation and mining by the people.

The church is put in the class of the big land owners, and the church and land must be separated before the land problem can be solved.

CASES IN POLICE COURT

Man Fined $40 for Assault on Officer — Unlicensed Hunters Fined — Husband Sentenced

From evidence in police court today it appears that Albert Hill intended to enter the Bowlaway on Hurd street Saturday night. Officer O'Connell was standing near the doorway and adjudged Albert to be drunk and refused to allow him to go inside. And then trouble started.

Hill, a husky young fellow of 22 years, executed a shift and brought his right smartly into contact with the officer's nose. To back up this statement the cop displayed a gory kerchief to the court which, said he, came from the defendant's blow. Just who was the better man with his fists nobody stated, but Hill was plucked anyway.

Judge Enright told the defendant that he usually inflicted a direct sentence in cases of this description but that, on account of his youth, he would let him down easy this morning. Hill was ordered to turn over $40 to the probation officer before the expiration of six weeks.

Hunting Without License

Harry R. and Robert W. Dobson decided to do a little hunting last week near their camp out in Chelmsford but neglected to procure a license so to do. The ever vigilant game warden in that district detected the hunters and demanded a look at their license. When he discovered that game were not forthcoming he made out a complaint for both men. It cost the Dobsons $10 apiece in police court this morning for their carelessness.

Liquor Case

On a charge of violating the liquor law brought by Officers Murphy and Bigelow, T. V. Leonard was fined $50 and appealed. He offered no defence. The government in one case found a man drinking in a wholesale liquor store and in another found glasses smelling of beer. The clerk in the store was also in court but his case was put over till Friday.

It is understood that he claims that no sale was made but that he had treated a party who visited the store.

Brutal Husband

Just how lacking a man can be in gratitude was amply displayed today when the complaint of a woman against her husband was heard. Sentenced to serve a term of months in jail, the man was pardoned through the efforts of his wife in his behalf.

Hardly had he left the bars and confinement behind him before he was once more causing his wife and family a life of misery. The woman and daughters were nearly nervous wrecks this morning as they sobbed out their pitiful tale to the court.

To cap the climax of inhumanity the husband and father came home Saturday night, after his family had hold him to keep away, broke in the door behind which his wife and children crouched trembling and attempted to abuse his wife. A brickbat was exhibited as the weapon used by the brutal husband.

The defendant denied everything and tried to lay the blame on his wife. Judge Enright waved him off the stand after a short while and refused to listen to his plea for clemency. Five months in the house of correction will give him a long period of time in which to change his policy toward his family.

SOUTH LOWELL RESIDENTS

ORGANIZE TO PROCURE BETTER STREETS AND SANITARY IMPROVEMENTS

The residents of Wigginville and that part of South Lowell, which was annexed to Lowell a few years ago have formed into an improvement association and they will use all their influence in bringing about better conditions in their district, which is a part of ward nine. The water question was the topic of discussion at a meeting which was held yesterday afternoon and it was stated that the water in that district was unfit for domestic use and that a number of the residents had returned to the old reliable well, while others were digging wells on their premises, rather than use the city water.

The meeting was called to order at 2 o'clock at the Artisans hall by Joseph A Plante, who explained the purpose of the gathering. Cyrille Menard was chosen president of the meeting and Mr. Plante secretary. A new organization was formd and this was named South Lowell Improvement association.

A number of complaints against the city water were filed and the condition of streets in that district was also the topic of discussion. It was stated that a number of residents who have not yet filled their wells have gone back to the use of city water, while others have given orders to have wells dug. It was voted to notify the Lowell board of health of the condition of a small brook running through the district in Woburn street, which is not very sanitary and if this is not remedied at once, to report to the state board of health.

Next Sunday another meeting will be held and a board of officers elected, after which street and other matters will be taken up. It was remarked yesterday that it is about time a sewer be extended in that locality and also that the streets and sidewalks be put in a condition which will enable safe traveling. The association counts several of the prominent residents of this district among its membership and they will endeavor to better conditions in that part of Lowell.

DR. MYERS URGES HOPE

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—"We ought to talk about this in a different way than we do, in a calmer way, making hope the great element of all our talk," said Rev. Dr. Cortland Myers in his sermon on "The American Christian and the European War," in Tremont Temple yesterday morning.

"More trouble can be caused by 60 seconds of the wrong kind of talk than you imagine," he said.

"Alfred Russell Wallace didn't get the credit for working out the theory of evolution which is attributed to Darwin because some one circulated the false report that he was a Spiritualist, and publishers refused to accept his work, accepting Darwin's instead. Mme. Curie, who deserves all the credit for the radium discovery, is not yet a member of the French Academy, because some one whisperad some utterly baseless scandal about her.

"When Wilson was elected the calamity howlers began talking panic, but we find the country getting along prosperously and we have a president who gave us peace instead of war.

"We must talk hope and faith in God. Hope is the element that won our two wars, but it is hard to remember the virtue of hope in times like these.

"We are passing through hours in human history the like of which man has never seen, and naturally enough we are living in an atmosphere of doubt, surrounded by a fence of interrogation points. Are the foundations of human faith shattered? men ask. Never! Human faith must go into the fire to be freed of the baser metals.

"Afterward we shall see what the fruits of the trial are. God left his mark after the deluge and the fall of Jerusalem, and after such minor events as the French Revolution."

CARING FOR WOUNDED OF WAR

By JOHN J. BREEN.

THE civilized world is turning its attention to the tremendous humane task of caring for the wounded in the awe inspiring war which is sweeping Europe. Immediately that the war became a stern reality there came from all parts of the globe tenders of assistance in the caring of the wounded on the fields of battle. The offers were not limited. They were spontaneous. There never was a situation that so taxed the resources of charity and philanthropy.

Historic castles, universities, country mansions and luxurious yachts were turned into hospitals, convalescent homes and Red Cross depots. Men and women of noble birth vied with each other in caring for the sick and wounded. The authorities in the stricken countries were overwhelmed with offers, and the owners of fine mansions provided full equipment for their maintenance.

The first batch of wounded in the war came into Brussels, which turned into vast hospitals the hotels, private houses and public institutions, placing them at the disposal of the Red Cross society. The wounded soldiers came from Liege. Vast crowds, with bared heads bowed in silence, watched the stretchers with their human burdens enter the stations of the Red Cross society. Save for occasional murmurs the onlookers were silent, but now and then an audible sob from some woman broke the silence.

At the head of the French Red Cross in Brussels is an Englishwoman, Millicent, duchess of Sutherland. Explaining how she came to go to Brussels she said: "I was in Paris and offered my services to the Secours des Blesses a few days after an urgent message asking for help was received from Brussels. Throughout the journey of eleven hours to Brussels I was received with the most amazing kindness. The people wept when they saw the little red cross on my arm. I confess I broke down myself."

Duke Gives Up Mansion.

The Duke of Devonshire has lent Devonshire House, his famous old mansion in Piccadilly, for the headquarters of the British Red Cross society. The great hall is filled with tables, desks and inquiry counters, and an aristocratic staff is working on the plans of organization. The reception room in the mansion is a vast workshop in which Queen Mother Amelie of Portugal, Princess Christian and many titled women are engaged daily in office work.

The dining room of Marlborough House, the town residence of Queen Alexandra, has been converted into a workroom, where well known society women under Princess Victoria cut out garments for soldiers and sailors. Princess Marie Louise has equipped her clubhouse for factory girls as a hospital. Ex-Empress Eugenie has given $1,000 to the Red Cross and also fitted up a wing in her house at Farnborough for the reception of wounded officers. The Duke of Sutherland has offered Dunrobin castle, the family's ancient seat in the Scottish highlands, for hospital purposes. The Duke of Norfolk fitted out fifty beds in Arundel castle, Sussex. Mortimer Singer offered his new mansion in Berkshire as a convalescent home. It is equipped for 200 patients, and Mr. Singer will defray all the cost of its maintenance.

Rodman Wanamaker, who gave the silver altar, costing $40,000, to the church at Sandringham in memory of King Edward, has placed his extensive premises in Pall Mall and the entire staff at the disposal of the Red Cross.

The Archbishop of Canterbury offered Lambeth palace, the picturesque London residence of English primates, as a hospital, and Cardinal Bourne tendered a large and fully equipped hospital at Willesden.

The other offers include Lord Londonderry's Fynford park as an emergency hospital, with fifty beds; Lord Curzon's Broadstairs mansion as a convalescent home for officers; Lady Samuel's mansion in London as a hospital, with fifty beds; Lord Shaftesbury's country residence as a convalescent home, and William Waldorf Astor's splendid seat, Cliveden, as a convalescent home.

How Red Cross Was Formed.

Surgery and medicine did not come into use on the battlefield before the last decade of the eighteenth century. Before that time wounded soldiers were either carried to the rear by their comrades or left unattended to and exposed until the fighting was over. Surgical assistance did not reach the battlefield until the day after the engagement or even later, and for many of the wounded it was then too late.

In 1792 Baron Dominique Jean Larrey of the French army introduced his system of "ambulances volantes," or flying field hospitals, capable of moving rapidly from place to place. They gave primary surgical treatment and removed the wounded quickly from the field. Napoleon warmly supported Larrey, and the system was soon brought to a high state of efficiency in the Grand Army.

The founder of the Red Cross society was Jean Henri Dunant, a philanthropic citizen of Geneva, Switzerland. On June 14, 1859, he chanced to be present at the battle of Solferino and was an eyewitness to the vast amount of unnecessary suffering that resulted from the inability of the regular surgical corps to care for the thousands of wounded who lay upon the field. Three years later he published a book vividly describing the horrors of war and proposing the formation of volunteer societies to supplement the military surgical corps.

After the publication of his book an agitation began which resulted in calling an international conference at Geneva in 1863. In October of that year the Geneva convention was signed which neutralized the surgical corps of hostile armies and volunteer societies caring for the wounded. The Geneva flag (the red cross) was adopted as the symbol for the International Red Cross society. Geneva has been since that time the headquarters of the International Red Cross society, and numerous international conventions have been held there.

Big Advance in Surgery.

In the American civil war eight soldiers died of disease to one from wounds. Experts expect that in the present general European struggle not more than three will fall victim to sickness to one killed on the field of battle.

Such is the advance of army sanitation and army surgery in fifty years. The Americans and the Japanese have been the leaders. The United States army hospitals have installed many remarkable innovations since the Spanish-American war, with its dreadful lesson in the danger of typhoid, and these new ideas have been adopted by the army surgeon of old world powers.

So it is expected that the present war, the greatest yet in history, also will be the most humane. There will be no disproportionate mortality list from disease and no army of cripples as an aftermath.

The modern high power, quick firing military rifle and the development in artillery will have much to do with the change. Those who die will die more quickly. Gangrene and infection will be practically unknown quantities, it is thought.

Before the Russo-Japanese conflict the armies of the world ovor used a high caliber bullet, made of unsheathed lead and greased to overcome friction in the barrel. The muzzle velocity was less than half that of the missiles now employed.

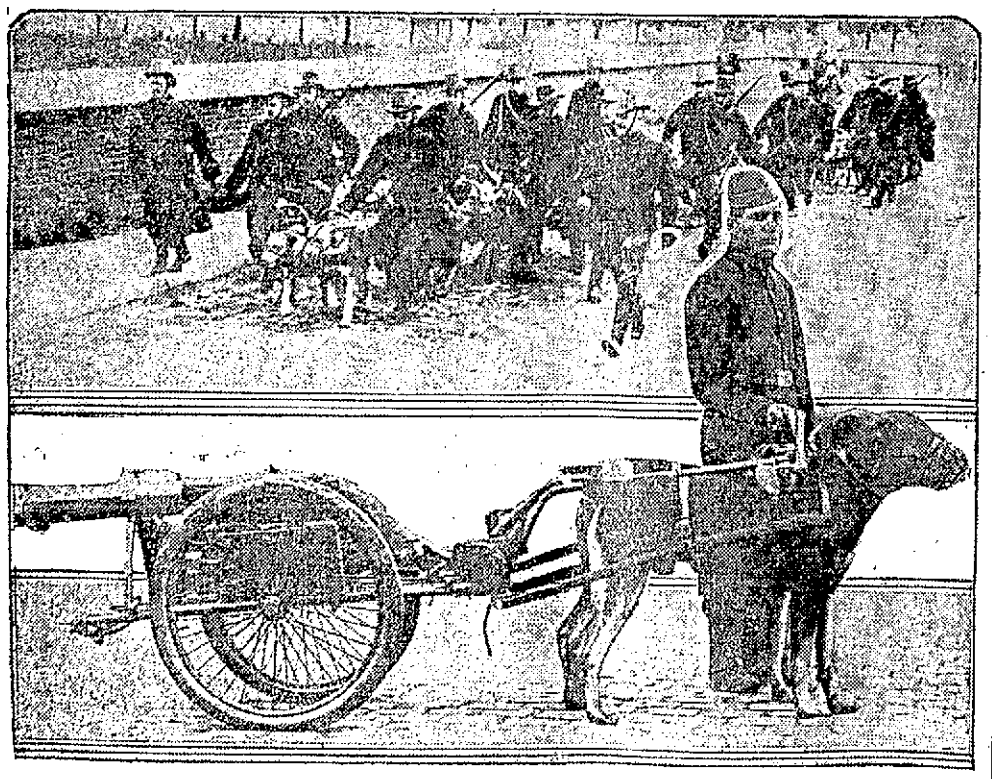
Then, too, bayonet and saber charges were more common. These resulted in hideous wounds, very difficult for surgeons to handle.

The bullets which are flying in Europe today are of less diameter than the ordinary lead pencil. They are jacketed with nickel, lead or steel and have tremendous velocity.

The soft, mushrooming bullet of the old days resulted in the shattering of bones and the crushing, rather than cutting, of tissues. Infection was almost inevitable, the grease being especially insanitary. A wound in the abdomen was considered necessarily fatal. The death rate among the wounded was enormous.

In recent campaigns there are instances where soldiers shot in what were once considered vital spots have walked unsupported to the field hospitals.

BELGIAN WAR DOGS FINE SPECIMENS



Photos by American Press Association.

Belgian Dogs of War.

WHEN the history of the European war is written it will not be complete without the part played by the war dogs of Belgium, for the dog is used as a worker in Belgium, and he is part and parcel of the day's toil, whether it be in the piping times of peace or amid the ghastly surroundings of war. There are the draft dogs of the milk and vegetable sellers and the dogs used by the military for the purpose of pulling light machine guns and appliances associated with the army medical corps.

The draft dog of Belgium is a fine and husky fellow. He is an offshoot of the Danish dog, his strength is considerable, and his pace is good. He is firm on his feet, and his pads are so hard, tough and tried that he is free from foot weariness, and when there is no work doing he lies down in his harness between the shafts of the two wheel cart and dozes off with his big and sensible head between his forefeet. Awake he either barks his greetings to a passing friend or greets an old enemy with a savage salute. The dogs, however, are usually quiet, and it would seem that they enjoy thoroughly the work they have to do.

Thus it is that much as the dog lover in some other countries hates to make his dog a beast of burden, he cannot help admiring the working dogs of Brussels and other continental cities, where, to all appearances, they so thoroughly like their work. As the well regulated trains speed their way along the tracks the teams of dogs hauling their loads of garden produce or milk on the road alongside of the railway are not the least interesting sights of the grand tour.

All the big trek dogs of the Belgians are under capital command, and especially is this the case among the soldiers' dogs. There is discipline in the kennel as there is within the barracks, and the dogs, big, apparently savage and surly animals, are, when in charge of the men, as orderly as a pack of well mannered foxhounds.

If the weather be bad and the roads slippery the foot of the dog has all the advantage over that of the hoofed animal. It is true that the foot often suffers, but the owners are careful of their dogs, and a bath of salt water and a dressing of resin ointment will go a long way to heal up a clean sore in four and twenty hours.

The dog market in Brussels on Sunday mornings is an attractive place, held, as it is, in the Hotel de Ville square. It is here that a dog and cart turnout can be purchased, and there is both new and old harness from which to choose. The would be buyer can give a dog a trial between the shafts of the cart and put the weight behind the dog that the seller claims the animal can draw. The business man goes to the market or auction to buy a dog and cart, just as the New Yorker visits the horse salesman or the automobile truck seller. The dog is one of the cogs of the wheel of industry, and with the venders of dairy and truck farm produce in the cities and towns no animals would be more missed than the draft dogs.

It is a common custom among dog owners of the continent of Europe to cut and mutilate the ears of their dogs. As there appears to be no law against this useless and cruel practice it is not uncommon to see dogs on the open market which are offered for sale with their ears yet raw and sore after a shiftless operation of cropping. They still bleed, and no one thinks of taking notice. No reason has been given for cropping. Even were the cartilage of the ears removed as a preventive, that would be a mistake, since the orifice of the ear being left exposed, the strong and long fangs of the Belgian draft dog could do great injury in fighting bouts to the underdog.

Strassburg Still Shows German Origin

STRASSBURG, the seat of the administrative government of Alsace-Lorraine, which at the outbreak of the war was one of the objective points of the French invaders, after a foreign domination for almost two centuries, still shows plainly its German origin in many respects, although there is a charming old quarter in the city so very French that it is actually known as "Klein Frankreich," or "Little France." The greater part of the Strassburg of today is undoubtedly Teutonic, with many modern squares, fine public buildings and a multitude of typical German beer halls and restaurants bearing unpronounceable German names.

In the year 1870, in the early days of the month of August, a force of only some 8,000 Frenchmen under General Doual, near Wissenbourg, were surprised by an army of Bavarians and Prussians ten times as strong, the allies having over 80,000 men. After a most heroic resistance the French were forced to retire. Next followed the defeat of Marshal MacMahon, which occasioned intense depression in Alsace, where there were no longer any regular troops, the towns having to depend for their defense upon the shattered remnants of the different regiments and on the "gardes mobile," formed of old men and young boys who had been hastily mustered in and who were mostly not only ignorant of even the rudiments of the art of war, but were badly armed and poorly clothed.

After the defeat of MacMahon the victorious Germans spread out over the whole department of the lower Rhine and invested Strassburg. Completely overwhelmed by the number of her foes and at the mercy of the Germans' powerful artillery, on the 28th of September, after a siege of seven weeks and a constant terrific bombardment, Strassburg was forced to surrender. Shortly after subjugating Strassburg both Schlestadt and Brisach were invested and Muelhausen occupied by 10,000 of the victorious Germans.

When the news became known that the city of Strassburg and all of the rest of Alsace-Lorraine were to be ceded by France—a ransom demanded by Germany, besides the enormous financial indemnity the vanquished country must pay—the grief, rage and despair of the province, and, in fact, of all France, may well be imagined. The Alsatians and the residents in Lorraine joined in sending a protest to the assembly of Bordeaux before the treaty of Frankfort was signed, in which they made a stirring appeal for justice.

It says: "We, by these presents, proclaim as forever inviolable the right of the people of Alsace-Lorraine to remain members of the French nation, and we swear on our part, our constituents, their children and their descendants, to continue to lay claim to it forever and by every means in our power in the face of all usurpers. We are Frenchmen, and we wish to remain Frenchmen."

For more than forty-four years now Alsace-Lorraine has been the German imperial territory of Elsass-Lothringen. After the great siege the city was almost in ruins. Not until just a few years ago have the last vestiges of the awful havoc wrought by the bombardment in 1871 been entirely removed from the city which suffered so severely from the enemy's projectiles, but great as were the gaping holes made in their homes, the wounds to their pride were greater still, and today they are still open, still bleeding and unhealed.

Strassburg, situated on the Ill, is divided into three sections, of which the central island is not only the largest, but the most important. The city is all of two miles from the Rhine, with which it is connected by the Rhone-Marne canal, which joins the river, Ill above the town and connects with the Rhine-Rhone canal outside of the eastern fortifications.

SLEEPYTIME TALES

BY VIRGINIA VALE

FOR LITTLE READERS OF THE SUN

"The Chicken With the Brass Ring"

NOTE—The Sleepy Time Tales, as the name implies, are planned to interest children when nothing else will. They will appear daily in The Sun. Watch for them.—Editor.

Once upon a time a great many little chickens were eating their breakfasts from bits of bread that were near the steps of the kitchen. Cook looked out and saw them and said: "The poor things. They look hungry."

So she shook the tablecloth which had some scraps in it out the door at their feet. Madly they rushed for the pieces and one fluffy brown chick found for his portion a small brass ring which had rolled down with the crumbs.

As he pecked at it to see what it was the ring flew up in the air and over the chicken's head much to his surprise.

"Look! Look!" he said. "See what I have on my neck!"

The rest of the chicks crowded around and all looked at him in wonder, and thought how great he was. This pleased him so much that all that day and the next he went around holding his head very high in the air.

As the days passed he grew very fat, for all of the others would step aside when he came up to eat, and he would eat as much as he could stuff. Then he would walk away with him head in the air and the brass ring shining in the sun.

When he was a few months old the man who owned all of the chickens came into the yard to look them over. When he saw the one with the brass ring around his neck he said: "Ah, that is a fine fat young broiler. How did he get so much fatter than the others? That one will make me a fine breakfast."

That night the chicken with the ring around his neck was taken away from his friends and they never saw him again. Even to this day, if you go to his old home you will find some of the chickens telling their chicks about the chicken with the brass ring.

IS SLEEP AN ILLUSION?

Statement That Man Does not Require Slumber—Invisible Prompter Tires of Performing

Gabriel d' Annundio as a believer in the occult and a student of a physical phenomena is the new role wherein the poet is about to reveal himself to Paris in a book entitled "Asperity of the Unknown."

After many months of investigation, during which he has attended with leading scientists of the day numerous seances, at which the services of the best known mediums were invoked, d'Annunzio has arrived at the conclusion that man does not like an undivided individual life. Always by his side, he insists, is his double, magic being, working out for him and prompting all actions.

"Man himself," the poet asserts, "does not require sleep, which is only an illusion. It is his invisible prompter that tires of performing for him those every-day actions which man attributes to his own personality.

"When man's mysterious partner requires rest, all he does is to remove form the mundane body something essential to man's wakefulness, whereupon sleep supervenes.

"The process is like that of the mechanic who, wishing to damage a piece of machinery, removes an essential part. Exactly what man's magic aid removes in order to send him to sleep I do not know, but I am convinced we shall discover in time."—Philadelphia Public Leader.

PROF. HORRIGAN DEAD

DEFENSELESS MAN

A woman writes to a Manhattan newspaper denouncing men. This time it is for the women's hats. According to this writer, men set the styles and design and manufacture the hats, and women are "at their mercy."

There seems to be some refuge. Man devised all the things women want, and he also is responsible for all the things they don't want. Man invented the ballot, the Welsh rabbit, public office at public expense, university degrees, the woman's page, public oratory and the monocle. All, all have been wrested from him. He also invented the sensible shoe, and at any cost he is to be made to see he cannot retain the monopoly.

But there is the other side of the picture. It seems he invents the millinery. As it is well known he also invented the high cost of living, staying out after 11 p. m. (if he can get away with it), baldness and the science of grumbling at the way the steak is cooked, there is a damning catalogue of offenses to his credit.

Who can say a good word for man? It counts for nothing that he invented the four-in-hand tie and bar examinations, for it has taken the whole force of a movement to make them available to the protesting sex. And in revenge for the breaking of this age-long privilege, he glowers in a corner and invents women's hats.

Let him be exposed in all his machinations. Perhaps he invented the hatpin, too.—Brooklyn Standard Union

CALL FOR RIVERMEN

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—In order to meet the scarcity of experienced men for river and canal traffic, the military authorities have ordered that all rivermen belonging to the Landsturm need not enlist, and a call has been made for old rivermen, who have entered other trades, to return immediately to river work.

It is pointed out that it is of vital importance to keep commerce on the inland water routes going, for the transportation of foodstuffs, fuel and other necessities, and the authorities are doing their utmost to maintain this service. The only thing lacking; it is said, is the experienced river man, so many of whom have gone to war. So far as ships and other shipping facilities go, it is declared, there is no handicap.

GERMANS FALLING BACK

GERMANS BOMBARD PRINCIPAL BUILDINGS

CHALONS SUR MARNE, Sept. 21.—The Germans continued bombarding the principal buildings of Rheims today and wrought heavy damage. Persons who have returned here from Rheims say that it is difficult to find words to describe the attacks and counter-attacks of infantry amid showers of shot and shell and in a deluge of rain. The Germans, they declare, seem in a desperate hurry to finish their task and are enraged at the stubborn resistance of the French. The Germans, they say, had all the best of the opening of the battle, but the situation is now changed and the French have been able to gain positions on high ground that will enable them to fight on even terms and they declare the Germans will never be able to break their lines at Rheims.

Soldiers are coming back here covered with mud and drenched to the skin by the heavy rains which continue to fall. The chalky clay ground north of Rheims has been so softened, they say, that it will be impossible for a retreating army to get away its artillery. To this fact they attribute the desperation with which the Germans are fighting. Floods caused by the continuous rains are likely to greatly impede military operations, especially in the east where the streams are beginning to overflow. The River Savouresse already is out of its banks and some habitations are isolated. While rescuing a family, M. Goublet, the administrator at Belfort was seriously injured. He was mentioned in the order of the day for bravery by the general in command.

Germans Retreating to Own Border Fortifications—Heavy Rains Make a Morass of the Valley of the Oise—Germans Claim That Cathedral of Rheims Could Not be Saved

LONDON, Sept. 21.—While the fortunes of battle fluctuate along the line extended in France, desperate efforts are being made to execute turning movements on both flanks.

The Anglo-French left wing is exerting every ounce of strength to turn the flank of the German general, Von Kluck, who is reported to have received reinforcements; while the German left, according to a cautiously worded announcement in Berlin, is making equally strenuous efforts to outflank the French right resting on Verdun.

Under ordinary weather conditions the Anglo-French task would be the easier, for the reason that Verdun, heavily fortified must fall before the French right can be seriously threatened but on the German right the heavy rains have made such a morass of the valley of the Oise that the allies are hardly likely o move along what would be their natural course until the German front north of Soissons has been driven back. The high ground between Noyon and Chauney has been heavily fortified by General Von Kluck and dominates the whole valley of the Oise.

That the Germans chose their present defensive position deliberately is indicated by the fact that their heavy artillery rests on cement foundations which must have taken time to construct.

Some reports received in London declared that the reason for the desperate German counter-attacks on Rheims is found in a movement of the allies which has virtually isolated Rheims from Laon, a town 30 miles to the northwest. If this is true all of General Von Kluck's marvelous strategy in protecting his sorely pressed left flank will have proved futile.

More or less definite rumors continue to circulate in London to the effect that the Germans are preparing a great retreat from France on their own border fortifications.

The latest of these is a story related by a French officer who has returned to Paris. This officer declared that an aeroplane reconnaisance has given rise to the conviction that a large portion of the German forces is retiring, accompanied by trains of heavy stores and leaving only 200,000 men to cover the retreat.

One reason for the dearth of news from the battlefront is to be found in the bad weather, which has rendered ordinary signaling and aeroplane scouting unreliable. Stories now filtering through set forth that the Germans made desperate efforts, the middle of last week to recapture the ground they had lost along the river Aisne. Day and night the assaults continued. The Germans, played into action by bands rendering military airs, hurled masses of men upon the hastily constructed intrenchments of the allies. It was cold steel against cold steel and ended in the allies holding the positions dispserately won by them.

Could Not Save Cathedral

Rheims, where the ruins of the famous cathedral are still smoking is likely to prove an object of controversy long after the military forces now in the field have ceased to contend for its possession. The Germans claim that the cathedral was in the line of fire and that it was impossible to save it in spite of their instructions to spare the building.

As had been anticipated a check had been given the operations of the victorious Russians in Galicia by the strong fortress of Przemysl, which had opened fire with artillery on the Russian invaders.

According to advices received here the advance of the Serbo-Montenegrin forces into Austria continues while the Montenegrins are reported as within a few miles of Sayajevo, the capital of Bosnia. According to this intelligence, the Serbo-Montenegrin force expects to enter Sayojevo within a week.

A. F. OF L. PRESIDENT AGAINST STATE BOARD

Would Appoint Single Commissioner Who Should be Bona fide Labor Man—Annual Convention Opened in Boston Today

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—The affiliation of 62 additional labor bodies, representing more than 10,000 members during the past year was reported at the opening session of the four days' annual convention of the state branch, American Federation of Labor today. President Edward S. Alden in his annual report advocated the abolition of the state board of labor and industries and the substitution of a single labor commissioner who should be a bona fide labor man.

In commenting on the labor measures considered by the last legislature, the president's report said:

There were several men in the last legislature, holding membership in unions, that proved faithless to their obligation to do all in their power to improve the condition of the toiler.

ceded by a more striking Flower Sunday service than that of yesterday in Houghton Memorial chapel on the campus.

More than 1500 persons, indicating practically every undergraduate, filled the chapel. Following a custom inaugurated by the founder of the college, Henry Fowle Durant, the chapel was banked with masses of flowers from the college greenhouses. On the text "God is Love" Rev. Dr. George A. Gordon, pastor of Old South church, Boston, preached a sermon in which he gave the students, particularly freshmen, kindly counsel.

This evening the student body assembled in chapel again, when a memorial service was conducted for Wellesley's founder.

The academic year will begin tomorrow morning. The first recess will be from Nov. 25 to Nov. 27.

Hon. John J. McManmon

FOR SENATOR

From the eighth district, is well known to the citizens of Lowell as a vote getter in the past. For two years he represented Lowell in the house of representatives and did such capable work in the interest of his constituents that he was given the nomination for senator from the eighth district which, though then strongly republican, he succeeded in turning over to the ranks of democracy. In the senate he was given membership on the committees on public health and agriculture and did excellent service on both. He is entitled to a good share of the credit of pushing along the work on the three new infirmaries for the care and treatment of tuberculosis. Also for better sanitary regulations in the factories and workshops.

HON. JOHN J. McMANMON

Ex-Senator McManmon was defeated for his second term to which he was justly entitled because of the divisions and general democratic discontent created that year by the Springfield democratic convention. Mr. McManmon has many friends in the republican and progressive parties who would like to see him again nominated and if given the nomination with a united democracy at his back, he will be sure to make a lively and successful fight for election.

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Mrs. Jennie Chisholm Snyder, since the death of her husband about four years ago, had acted as housekeeper for her father, Alex Chisholm, a carpenter, with whom she made her home at 9 Goldsmith place, Roxbury. She was about 30 years of age, and besides her aged father and three sisters she is survived by her two young sons, Robert, 13 years old, and Eugene, 11 years old. She was born in the South End.

The first news of the accident was brought to the father of the dead woman by reporters. He knew only that his daughter was on an automobile tour, the latter information being discovered by him on a piece of paper when he arose yesterday morning. Mr. Chisholm notified one of his daughters, Mrs. Marion Kimball of Adams street Roxbury, who went to Nantasket by boat, reaching there shortly after her sister had passed away.

It was learned last night that Mrs. Snyder left her home about 4 o'clock yesterday morning intending to motor with some friends to Cohasset, where the party were to spend the day in a camp.

FIRE LOSS ABOUT $500

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Rats and matches caused a fire last evening in the fourth floor of the building 497 East Broadway, South Boston, owned by George H. Bond of Newton. The upper part is occupied by Elisha Goldthwaite as a lodging house, and on the lower floor is the real estate office of James E. Coveney.

Fire was discovered in the roof gutter over the alley at the side of the building, and when the firemen arrived the building was full of smoke. The flames worked inside the rear wall on the fourth floor and the firemen had to do much chopping and tearing away to put them out. The loss was about $500.

FITCHBURG, Sept. 21.—A fire that started in a barrel of rubbish in the rear of the two-story brick block, 1060 to 1072 Main street, yesterday, damaged the block and contents $12,000. The fire was discovered by Lewis Morin, who saw the smoke, and, after he took Gustave Bjern, a legless man, from the building, he pulled in an alarm from box 9. The department found volumes of smoke pouring from the building when it arrived and several streams of water were turned on the flames. The firemen succeeded in checking the fire in the east end of the block and had it under control within a short time.

The second story of the block was occupied by J. F. Bowden and family, Edwin S. McField and family, S. J. Talbot and Mrs. Bridget Bjern. The first floors were occupied by the Watson bakery and Fitchburg public market, and the adjoining stores by James Ramage and Carl Nelson. The flames swept through that part of the building occupied by the bakery and gave the firemen a stiff battle owing to much inflammable material being stored there. The volume of smoke drove all of the tenants from the building and smoke filled the store of the Fitchburg public market and adjoining stores. The fire broke into the tenement occupied by J. F. Bowden and family and considerable furniture was destroyed, while water and smoke damaged that which was saved.

The smoke also damaged the furniture in the tenement occupied by Mrs. Bridget Bjern and in that of Edwin McField. The fire was evidently burning for some time before it was discovered.

A further investigation will be made by Chief Murnane. Mr. Watson, proprietor of the Fitchburg bakery and Fitchburg public market, said that his damage would be between $5000 and $6000. The bakery, he said, was practically destroyed, while his stock in the market was damaged by smoke. The building is damaged to the value of $3500, which is covered by insurance. The other loss was to the tenants, part of which is covered by insurance. The block is owned by Mrs. Alice Sargent and is one of the old landmarks of the city. It was recently remodeled.

PRISONER STABS ANOTHER

BOSTON, Sept. 21.—Rumors of a stabbing affair at the state prison, Charlestown, were circulated last evening, which, upon investigation, proved to be grossly exaggerated. It was said that a prisoner stabbed another with a knife, inflicting a serious wound in his chest.

Acting Warden Allen said last night that last Monday, when the prisoners were marching to their workshops, a prisoner, who has been examined by Dr. Steadman and adjudged insane, stepped from the line and struck another prisoner with a shoe knife, inflicting a slight cut. The wound was so small that Dr. Joseph J. McLaughlin, the prison physician, decided that to stitch the wound was unnecessary, and the injury was dressed at the prison hospital. The blade of the knife was about an inch and a half long.

The assailant was taken to a cell, examined the following day, and on Wednesday was removed to the Bridgewater insane hospital. A prison official said that he had no trouble with the prisoner and the attack was one which could be expected only from an insane man.
